THE LISTENING POST

● When an automobile wreck comes along, such as the one near Mayfield Saturday morning, and several lives are lost, it always causes a lot of uneasiness to many others who are accustomed to riding in cars. Then, after a few days, this feeling wears off, and is felt no more until another accident occurs nearby, and then the same feeling comes again. Those faroff accidents, of which we read, mean little to us, and we accept them largely in the manner in which we read of thousands of Chinese starving to death in a famine. It is the accidents which happen near us which cause us to think of dangers.

● For it is a dangerous thing, this riding in automobiles. No matter how careful we think we are, accidents are always near us when we go speeding along any highway. Every time we pass a car, going or coming, sudden and horrible death is only inches away. Our own care can help prevent accidents, but cannot obviate danger completely. Running fast or running slow, these accidents are never far away from us.

● A few nights ago I had a near rendezvous with death or serious injury, and there was absolutely nothing I could have done about it. At the time I was cruising along at about forty miles an hour, and there was no excuse whatever for what almost happened, or for what really did happen, except some utter carelessness on the part of another driver. The experience left me badly shaken for several hours.

● I was coming towards town on the Hickman highway. I was merely coasting along and enjoying the night and the stars and the summer air. In the rear view mirror I saw the lights of a car approaching and knew it was coming rather swiftly. I pulled as far over as was possible, and waited for him to go by.

● That driver did go by, and how! I felt a sudden blast of air, I heard the crunch of tires, and it seemed for a tingling second that he had sideswiped me completely. I felt the impact of another fender somewhere, and felt the rear end of the car lift and swerve slightly. I could have touched the person next to me in the other car, so near were the cars, and I wondered in lightning fashion how many times my car would turn over and if it would finish right side up. Then the other car was past, its red tail light winking malevolently as it disappeared.

● I tried to tell myself after the car had passed that I had felt merely the blast of air from that close passing car. I tried to convince myself that I had not been in any danger whatever. But the memory of that sickening lurch was too clear, and I knew all too well that I had been in deadly peril for that pulsating second of time. The Authority in Charge did not realize how close we had been to disaster, although she knew the car had passed rather closely. She spoke of it, and I said that the other car had touched us. She did not believe it, but when we reached town, where lights were available, I got out and found the clear marks of that passing fender on my own fender. When I saw that mark I again had that weak and let-down feeling which I had driven away. A half inch more, indeed, a quarter of an inch more, and that speeding car would have turned me over completely. I have wondered ever since what caused it. I know I was completely at the edge of the road. I know there was plenty of room for that other driver, but for some reason he came so close that I really had a date with death. Those are the things which come up day and night when a person uses an automobile. There seems to be nothing that a person can do about it. We simply take our lives in our hands any time we start out on a highway in a car.

Huge Naval Program For U. S. Asked

Recommendations Are Viewed As Step Toward Big Two-Ocean Fleet

Washington. —The administration added a huge, new naval building program to its defense plans today, asking Congress to authorize construction of 84 additional warships in the next four years at an estimated cost of $1,200,000,000.

Coming on the heels of an 11 percent naval expansion previously authorized, the new program was accepted generally on Capitol Hill as a move toward increasing American sea power to the point where it could meet simultaneous threats in Atlantic and Pacific.

Its completion in 1944 would give the United States a mighty armada of 618 vessels, far greater naval power than this or any other nation ever has had. With completion of the new program and presently authorized construction, the fleet would list:

26 battleships, 14 airplane carriers, 70 cruisers, 338 destroyers, and 179 submarines.

Present Figures
This compares with the present fleet of 15 battleships, five airplane carriers, 35 cruisers, 319 destroyers and 65 submarines.

The request for the additional naval expansion took the form of simple introduction of administrative bills by Representative Vinton (D.-Ga.), and Senator Walsh (D.-Main.), the chairman of the House and Senate naval committees.

"World conditions," Vinton said, "make it absolutely imperative that the Navy be built up as rapidly as possible."

He said that about $20,000,000 would be required to finance a start on this program during the fiscal beginning July 1 and, of this sum, estimated at $20,000,000 would be spent on expansion of shipyards.

California Men Over 45 To Form Defensive Unit

Sacramento, Calif. —A move to organize California's men over 45 into a defense unit with the slogan, "Death Before Surrender," has started with the filing of articles of incorporation for "California's Hundred Thousand."

"The purpose of this association of patriots is to bring about the proper assignment of every American over the age of those who are eligible to join the regular army services in the United States immediately to a definite post of duty if and when our country should be threatened with attack by an enemy," the article of incorporation stated.

Wilson's Daughter Is Solaced By Sanctuary In Hindu Colony

Seattle. —Margaret Wilson, daughter of the late Woodrow Wilson, was reported today to have found sanctuary from a turbulent world in a religious colony in India. George Nakashima, American-born Japanese architect, said on his return here from India that he had met the daughter of the United States' World War President in a religious colony in Bondicherry where he built a dormitory for followers of the Brahma religious leader, Sri Aurobindo.

"Never to Return"
Miss Wilson, now 54, entered the colony two years ago, Nakashima said.

"She says she will never return to the outside world," he added. The leader of the colony is a Hindu graduate of Cambridge University. Members are urged to work at tasks in which they are interested. Nakashima said the colony has

Restaurants, Stores Reopen As Thousands Return To Paris

Paris (By Courier Plane to Berlin). —(Sunday) —Life in Paris signs of returning to normal.

During the second day of the German rule of Paris—Saturday—I toured the city and saw some evidences that Paris is beginning to function again as a city. The street cleaners began their work, sanitary services were functioning once more—and garbage collectors went stolidly about their business.

Already thousands of those who sought relief outside the city were returning and swank shops such as the Galeries Lafayette were doing business as usual.

Noises Rise Again

The deadly silence which so appalled our party of American newspapermen upon entering Paris Friday night—the German Army went into the city Friday morning—has given away to the noises arising from returning life.

In Montmartre and in the working class section between the Boulevard des Italianes and the Pantheon, practically all the shops have reopened.

In one section, as our car roared up the steep heights to Sacre Coeur Cathedral, windows everywhere opened and the gazing tenants watched with interest. Some even raised their hands in a Nazi salute.

The French were intrigued by many notices of "American protection" which blossomed on doors after the Germans came in.

The Stars and Stripes also fluttered in the breeze from an American church.

In fact, the Germans have made no effort yet to prohibit the display of the French tricolor and many buildings, including the Bourse, still showed the French national flag.

U. S. Ambassador William C. Bullitt paid a courtesy visit to Gen. Boguslaw von Studnitz, commanding the German forces occupying Paris.

The general then returned the call.

Wall Street Turns Attention Toward Home Expansion

New York. —Under cover of the exciting events in Europe, a change occurred last week in business all speculative psychology which may mark a turning point in the American chapter of the economic history of the world struggle.

While political decisions of the gravest importance for the American people still hung in the balance, there was growing evidence that Wall Street and the industrial community had turned their primary thoughts and energy to the home front, where a $5,000,000,000 arms program dominated the scene.

In security markets, where every reverse of the Allied cause for months had been the signal for nervous selling, the fall of Paris and the officially admitted desperate plight of the French defense was met with calm price strength in all sections of the list.

Among business men was increasing pre-occupation with the problems of the defense program and frank admission in some quarters that industry had underrated the speed with which Washington was prepared to move in creating the sinews of war.

Industrial activity, led again by steel and the heavy industries, continued to climb, and the retail field began to show signs of starting to catch up with industry's climb, as higher payrolls, greater employment and an increased dividend flow found its way to merchants' hands.

12 Fliers Die As Bombers Crash In Air

New York. —Twelve Army men were killed today when two twin-motored Douglas bombing planes crashed at 2,000 feet over Bellerose, Queens, just within New York City.

Officials at Mitchell Field, Long Island flying station from where the planes had taken off a few minutes earlier, said they believed eleven fliers and one other enlisted man were in the two ships.

Police said one man, not immediately identified, was injured when he bailed out by parachute and died later.

Smith Atkins Injured In Fall At Union City

Smith Atkins, local insurance man, was painfully injured yesterday afternoon, when he fell in front of the court house in Union City, his head striking the hinge on his car door, making a severe gash across his head. He was treated in Union City, and it was necessary to take 15 stitches in the gash.

He was brought back to Fulton and taken to his home on Norman street, and he is reported as getting along nicely today.

Mr. Atkins, with his daughter, Carolyn, and Bert Newhouse, were enroute to Reelfoot on a fishing trip when the accident occurred. They stopped at the Union City court house to secure licenses and when they came out, it was raining and they started running for the car. Mr. Atkins' foot slipped and he fell. His injuries, although painful, are not thought to be serious.

Two Mothers Claim Boy "Lost" During Air Raid

The Hauge. —Two tearful mothers, each claiming a baby boy whose parentage was obscured in the confusion of a bomb explosion in a maternity home during the conquest of The Netherlands, today asked a local court to make a "judgment of Solomon."

The plaintiff said that on May 10, when a bomb struck the home she handed her 10-day-old baby out a window to a pedestrian, who took him to an air raid shelter. She accused the defendant of taking possession of the child there.

The defendant contends that the baby, now 7 weeks old, is her own. Two unidentified babies were killed by the bomb, and the possibility was raised that one of these belonged to one of the mothers.

Pastor Gives Trouble-Making Boys Home

Memphis, Tenn. —They weren't bad boys. But somehow they got into trouble.

Judge Camille Kelley decided the boys were victims of poor environment, and that industrial school was no place for them.

Judge Kelley telephoned the Rev. Vernon W. Lane, rector of the Church of Good Shepherd, and asked him to assume responsibility for the lads. He agreed.

A dormitory for them was outfitted in the Rev. Mr. Lane's attic.

Since that day, other wayward lads have enrolled in Gallor Hall, so named in honor of the late Bishop Thomas F. Gallor.

Corporation To Handle Exports Of Latin-America Considered

Washington. —A vast "cartel system" to handle exports of Latin-American products and block Nazi economic domination in this hemisphere was under consideration.

Officials said today, as a group of government leaders held an hour-and-a-half conference on hemisphere trade problems.

The plan appeared to contemplate the prices of such products as wheat, cotton, beef, coffee and copper—a Pan-American effort to protect the hemisphere in the economic field as the Monroe Doctrine safeguards it from European political penetration.

It probably would take the form of a huge corporation, or other agency, to be established by the country which would buy up all ports of Central and South America and perhaps Canada, and resell them to Europe. The 31 democratic republics thus would deal with the corporation rather than having subject to the Nazi tactics against them.

Britain Means To Continue Fight Alone

Offer To Unite With France As One Nation Disclosed In London

London. —Great Britain flung into Nazi Germany's teeth tonight the defiant decision to fight on alone—"unconquerable"—from the little island seat of a world-wide empire.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a two-minute radio address, said the fight would go on "until the curse of Hitler is lifted from the brows of mankind."

He told his people that they now have become "the sole champions in arms to defend the world cause." Speaking for the British Empire, he declared:

"We shall do our best to be worthy of this high honor."

Shortly after he spoke, the British government announced that in the last dark hours of yesterday, before France asked her Nazi foe for peace, Britain had offered to unite with France as one nation to continue the struggle.

Wanted One Government

The "indissoluble" union would have been complete, with one government, all-inclusive citizenship and joint organs of defense, foreign, financial and economic policies.

Apparently the French rejected the offer, thus bringing about fall of Premier Paul Reynaud's cabinet and the subsequent French plea for peace with Germany.

This development made it plainer than ever that England herself is menaced by the triple threat of blockade, bombardment and direct invasion from Hitler's legions.

"What has happened in France," Churchill said, "makes no difference to Britain's 'faith and purpose.'"

CAN WE READ THE LESSON

Today France is prostrate under the hobnailed boots of German soldiers. In thirty-eight anguish filled days the army, which even the German admitted last year to be the finest in Europe, has been driven from one frontier almost to another and practically everything has been lost. In thirty-eight days the Germans have done what they failed to do in four years a quarter of a century ago.

Is there any lesson to be learned from this debacle? Should the United States be able to read this lesson and act accordingly? Many people seem to think that such a lesson exists. What is the lesson, and what are the underlying causes of this tremendous military failure?

For several years France has been plagued with recurring labor troubles. Labor governments have come into being, and all efforts, during the depression years, were devoted to widely varying social experiments. France, long before this country tried the scheme, adopted the forty-hour week as a means of relieving unemployment. This was dropped at the beginning of the war, but in no sense did France ever really begin working again. Those years in which so many social experiments, were tried, left a wave of dissatisfaction which reflected itself in small production, in strikes, in delays, in all those things which restrict the production which must be had to successfully carry on a war of major proportions. Conversely, while France was going through such a period, Germany was working day and night, with one purpose and one aim in mind—to redress the wrongs which they felt had been inflicted on them in 1918. There was no effort made to pander to any class of people in Germany—there was only the grim determination to build a new Germany which would be invincible. In the five years, from 1935 to 1940, this transformation was accomplished. The same five year period in France, and to a lesser degree in England, was marked by labor disputes, experiments, and short production.

It was too late, last fall, when war came, to change this in France. The first eight months of the war, when the French were behind their wall, brought little real improvement. Perhaps a shade of improvement might have been made, but all too little, and when war broke in its full fury, France did not have the machines of war, the planes, necessary to stall the German advance. Nor did England ever really work at the task of rearming. Only a few weeks ago the British decided it was time to abolish the week-end holiday and work full seven days a week.

In the final analysis, the German victory over France is not a victory of men over men, or soldiers over soldiers. No soldiers ever fought more bravely than did the French. No, it was a victory of machines over men. The French paid dearly, and will continue to pay dearly through many years, for their inability to produce planes and tanks and guns. The next few days may bring the same bitter lesson to the British.

We are embarking on a great

"CHEAP" CREDIT COSTLY

"One inherent weakness of government lending," wrote Albert W. Atwood recently, "is that no matter how generous it may be, or how many different corporations are set up to extend credit, there is never any way of satisfying the pressure group boys and the politicians who follow travel along with them. Anything approaching a business-like attitude by a government loan administrator towards those borrowers who do not maintain interest and principal payment, is practically certain to create a political row."

Too many borrowers from government regard the treasury as a source of limitless financial manna, which may be paid back if convenient, or deferred if not. And there is always a sizable group of officeholders who are ready and eager to defend this attitude—after all, the vote of a dead beat counts as much as the vote of a man who takes pride in fulfilling his obligations. And that is one of the greatest dangers in putting the government into the business of furnishing credit. Tried and true business methods go by the board when the politicians step in. And the taxpayers must inevitably pay the bill.

Certainly there is no visible reason for further governmental adventures in the field of credit. Private credit agencies, which are stringently regulated in the public interest, are apparently more than adequate to meet any and all legitimate needs. There never was a time when the banks were so filled with idle capital—or bankers were more eager to put the money to work for productive undertakings. Today's banker is working hard to supply loans to the individual and little business no less than to large borrowers. The reckless extension of government lending agencies would be about as rapid a road to financial ruin as we could take—a high price to pay for "cheap" credit.

armament program. Will we fritter away our time and our opportunities as did the French? Will we quarrel about working hours until the plans are wrecked? Or will we work, twenty-fours a day if need be, and make this nation safe?

SELECTION of people for jobs is in itself a job. Human nature being what it is, and being variable in both the interviewer and the person interviewed, it is no wonder that there are almost as many methods of selecting employees as there are employers. While it is possible to determine physical capacity, it is not so easy to penetrate within the individual and to learn what he has that will enable him to fill a particular position satisfactorily.

Many firms use questionnaires and tests of various kinds in the selection of employees. These tests and questionnaires are not devised to find fault with a person's knowledge, but rather to disclose how well he is prepared for a certain kind of work. The individual is the supreme consideration. Ten men with a similar educational and social background may apply for the same kind of position. If all are hired, it will be found that a few will not be suited to the work and that one or more will definitely turn out to be square pegs in round holes.

The matter of selecting employees, however, is not as important as the training of them. Many businesses frankly state that new employees need not be experienced in any particular line of work. These concerns prefer to train new workers themselves, provided the employees have certain desirable qualifications with which to begin. While it is true that many firms conduct group training plans, such plans only provide a limited amount of instruction. Extensive training is today as in the past the individual's own problem.

Mayfield Game Rained Out—

Voting Starts For All-Stars

Rain prevented the playing of the last game of the Fulton-Mayfield series in the home park last night and the Tigers will open a three game series here tonight with the Jackson Generals, the games to be called at eight o'clock tonight, Wednesday and Thursday nights. In the last game played by the Tigers, they defeated the Paducah Indians Sunday 5-2.

Announcement has been made by president Ben Howard regarding the fifth annual all-star game which will be played the night of July 9 in the park of the club leading the circuit after the double-headers of July 4. Balloting is beginning this week in the eight Kentucky towns and all fans are to pick their favorite players. The procedure to be followed is select four players from each of the eight clubs, listing 32 plays on your team, and mail or hand your selection to your official scorer, Sook Weaver. These ballots will be mailed to the president by all scorers. Mr. Howard will select the team, taking at least 2 players from each of the clubs, giving the all-star team 16 players and making the game interesting for fans in all towns. In addition to voting for the players, don't forget to vote for your all-star manager.

INSPECT METHODS IN "LIVE-AT-HOME" PLAN

In two "cow-hog-hen" tours in Grant county, 78 farm men and women studied ways of increasing incomes by more complete production of the family living at home. Larger, better gardens, good milk cows, hogs and chickens, to produce a year-round supply of food, form the basis of the county planning committee's live-at-home program.
