COOLER WEATHER AND SCHOOLS OPENING KEEPS
BUSINESS BETTER THIS YEAR

Cooler weather and the opening of schools were factors in giving retail trade an upward trend from last week and a resumption of wider margins over last year in all but a few sections of the country, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from 37 cities, just received by its Louisville District Office. Wholesale was generally satisfactory with optimism resulting from the improved drought situation. Expansion programs were prominent in industry, and with the exception of isolated strike conditions, employment improved noticeably. Despite the unfavorable weather and holiday factors, New York department stores had 1 1/2% better business than last year. One of the outstanding industrial expansions was reported in Cleveland where the Industrial Rayon Corporation was said to be planning to expand production to utilize its new continuous process for spinning rayon yarn with approximately $7,500,000 involved in a plant to manufacture patented machinery.

Louisville reported that with cooler weather a stimulating factor, retail trade was 5% better than the previous week and 15% to 20% over last year. Principal wholesale activity was centered in hardware, electrical appliances and school apparel gains over last year running from 10% to 15%. Bank clearings 32 1/2% higher than last year.

Employment placements declined 33 1/2% from previous week to 963, but absorption by private industry during August was the second largest in two years with a total of 1,355.

Marked improvement in dark and burley tobacco, late potatoes and corn as a result of rains, but yield curtailed. Shortage of work stock in Kentucky placed at 6,400 horses and 15,000 mules which will be needed for replacements before 1937 work season.

Real estate market continues active over State with an 18-apartment building in Louisville sold for $100,000.

Work rushing on $1,346,000 grade crossing project in Louisville, while Seagram's new $4,500,000 distillery, covering 45 acres and employing 700 workers in day and night shifts, is nearing completion.

Survey in Kentucky shows milk and butterfat prices prevailing now are at highest level since 1929; market receipts of poultry running 50% above similar period of last year.

Sanatorium at Franklin, Ky., sold for $21,950.

Harrogate, Tenn., buyer purchases Pinnacle Hotel at Cumberland Gap, on borders of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, for $2,750.

Site for new post-office building at Williamsburg, Ky., bought by government for $8,000.

Survey in New Albany, Ind., indicates vacancies in single residences fewer than at any time since October, 1931. Permits have been issued for 31 new structures during time covered by survey.

Work progressing rapidly on $1,000,000 slum clearance and low-cost housing project in Evansville, Ind. River front improvement project in same city also proceeding rapidly on vast scale.

Collection of duties on imports totaled $80,668 during August, $6,008.09 more in collection at Louisville than for the same month of 1935; total for first two months of fiscal year is $129,803.05, an increase of $21,769.72 over same two months year ago.

General agent for large life insurance company in Louisville reports gain of 21% in paid losses for first seven months of 1936 compared with same months of 1935.

COLLEGE TELLS HOW TO MAKE GOOD PIES

Pastry eaten too often or when it is not properly made is likely to cause digestive disturbances, the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture tells 4-H club boys and girls.

It is not quickly digested because of the large amount of fat in the crust. A good pie crust must be light, flaky, crisp and tender, it is explained. Tenderness depends on the kind and amount of fat used, the amount of water used, and the method of handling ingredients in the making.

Lard makes a more tender pie crust than butter, but the latter gives the better flavor. Often one-half butter and one-half lard are used. Oils make a tender crust but one which is usually not so flaky. The amount of water to be used cannot be given exactly because it varies with the kind of fat, flour and temperature. Less is needed with soft fat, pastry flour or when the temperature is warm.

If the dough is made too moist the crust will be tough. Use as little water as possible to get a dough that will roll. Either hot or cold water may be used. Ice water gives a flakier texture. Hot water gives a crumbliness rather than flakiness. Do not stir the mixture more than necessary in adding water. Use a knife for mixing. Do not handle or re-roll dough more than is necessary. Roll crust from the center out so as not to roll any part more than necessary, and try to keep it as round as possible.

IMPROVED CORN TO BOOST FARM INCOME

Increased farm income in a considerable area of Central Illinois through the production of hybrid corn is expected to result from 12 years of development work now being completed by Lester Pfister, promoter of an enterprise centering on his farm three miles from the Illinois Central Station at El Paso, Ill., according to the September issue of the Illinois Central magazine.

Mr. Pfister anticipates a gross revenue of more than $100,000 this year and a harvest of between 12,000 and 15,000 bushels of shelled hybrid seed corn. Approximately 700 acres are being utilized in the experiment. Results already obtained from Mr. Pfister's inbreeding and crossing of corn strains are larger crop yields, improved quality of the grain, corn plants of greater resistance against disease and insect pests and stalk and root structures of greater sturdiness.

To illustrate the story is a picture of Walter Kelly, Illinois Central agent at Minonk, in a field of a drouth year, he expects to produce a crop averaging more than 70 bushels an acre.

"THE WORLD FOR GOD"

We have never known a person who accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as a Savior and who found it necessary, later, to exchange Him for something else.

This is a remarkable fact, especially when it is considered that the Lord Jesus has been prescribed as a Sovereign Remedy for all human ills for about two thousand years.

Preachers lift Him up among the multitude and the people hear about Him gladly.

Philosophers elevate Him as the greatest example of a living philosophy. Business, big and little, exalts Him as the Model on which trade and commerce must be conducted. Everywhere one goes, either in the Church or out of it, Jesus is admittedly the Christ.

Lots of people who take merchandise back to stores do so because they did not properly examine it when it was being bought. Others take it back because they "change their minds" and the change involves the return of the satisfactory, but no longer desirable, merchandise.

But no one has ever made a mistake in accepting Jesus as a Savior. That's a great record, an achievement never attained by anyone else or by anything else. One hundred per cent good—is Jesus.

God's world produced Jesus, the Christ. The world of man cannot produce a Christ. Let us make our private world God's world and make it truly a World For God.

Twelve of every 25 cents spent on cigarettes goes for taxes, and the rest goes up in smoke.

A Briton warns us that the world's oil supply is dwindling fast, but did not attribute the fact to politicians' spreading it thick.

Men will not fully realize the grim potentialities of the trailer until their wives begin back seat driving from the kitchen.

The Pension Question Box

(This is the third of the series of questions and answers about the actual working plans of Kentucky's Old-Age Assistance Law, prepared for interested Kentuckians by Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, Director of Old-Age Assistance, Department of Public Welfare. The following seven questions were asked of Dr. Lloyd by the editor of one of Kentucky's prominent newspapers.)

1. May an inmate of any Kentucky poor-house terminate his or her stay and then receive payments under the Old-Age Assistance Law?

A. Yes, if he is able to live outside of such an institution. The State law (Section 1) provides that he is not eligible for old-age assistance if his physical or mental condition makes him "in need of continued institutional care." Temporary medical or surgical care in a hospital is not considered "institutional care" in this regard.

2. If an aged person owns a home can he or she receive this assistance?

A. Yes. Many legislative bodies have expressed themselves as feeling that it is not the function of the State to accumulate estates at the expense of the taxpayers for the benefit of relatives who will not or cannot support their needy aged. Section 11 of Kentucky's Old Age Assistance Law, provides that the total amount paid to any recipient of old age assistance under the Act, shall constitute a lien upon the estate of such recipient.

3. Does having relatives who can aid, bar one from this assistance?

A. The Law does not specifically state that having relatives who are able to assist bars an applicant from receiving old-age assistance. It does state a person is eligible whose income, which with contributions, money, subsistence, or service from relatives or others, is inadequate to provide a reasonable subsistence. Section 3314 of Carroll's Kentucky Statutes provides that all adult residents of the State must furnish their parents with shelter, food, care and clothing. The problem of when a child is "able" to furnish maintenance for his parents is one of the most difficult problems facing any welfare agency. There may be, and often is, a difference of opinion on the part of the agency, the child and the parent. It is one of the most tragic sights in the world when a child callously leaves an aged parent to suffer. No less so is the case of the parent who, after a long life of usefulness and independence, finds that old age, illness, and economic forces beyond his control, or a combination of these factors have robbed him of that independence. All too often the aged parent will make every effort to keep the true facts from his children, dreading to have them learn that their father, whom they have always considered a superior being, has proved inadequate.

Here is where the trained, experienced, tactful and kind worker is most vitally needed. When it is pointed out to the aged parent that he is asking the children of strangers (the tax-paying public) to accept a burden he will not ask of his children—whose responsibility is returned for the years of care and sacrifice he has received—he sees the matter in a different light. When the children realize that such shirking of responsibility on the part of every citizen would increase the tax burden to an impossible level, they often reverse their attitudes and are willing to assume their responsibilities. Families can be made to realize that when each child cooperates to the extent of a few cents a day, a parent can be maintained in comfort at no great sacrifice to any one child.

Many counties have proved that a well-trained, efficient worker can, in one year, save the county many times his salary in this field alone.

4. At death what becomes of the recipient's property?

A. The Kentucky Law provides (Section 11) that on the death of a recipient, or in the case of a couple, both of whom were assisted, on the death of the surviving member, the total amount paid as assistance with interest, shall be allowed and deducted from the estate by the court having jurisdiction to settle the estate, and paid to the State. The Department of Public Welfare shall require, as a condition to granting assistance in any case, that the applicant admit a properly acknowledged agreement to reimburse the State for all assistance granted.

Since the Federal Government provides half of the old-age assistance (plus an additional 5% of the grant for administration) half of this recovery is to be paid to the United States.

5. Will receiving this assistance bar one from other relief?

A. Section 7 of the McCarthy-Raney Old-Age Assistance Act states the following: "Recipient not to receive other public assistance. No person receiving other old-age assistance under this Act shall, at the same time, receive any other relief from the state or from any political subdivision thereof, except for medical or surgical purposes."

Here, again, is where the trained worker is valuable. Eligible aged people must have lived in Kentucky five of the nine years preceding their application. Few needy aged people have lived in a community for years having aroused the interest of their friends who may wish to be of service but who cannot assume entire financial responsibility. The alert, trained worker will coordinate this interest for the benefit of his client. For instance, he can make sure that when someone can dispose of an out-moded coat, a certain client who could use such a garment receives it. We can let the woman's church group which has been piecing quilts know that one of his clients could well use such a quilt.

The trained worker knows that public assistance has not taken and never will take the place of the good neighbor, but on the contrary he is to direct the friendliness which has always existed in American communities, into channels where it can be most effective.

It must also be remembered that the largest expense, other than maintenance, in aged families, is the expense of maintaining health. The Law specifically states that medical and surgical aid can be granted by the public agency.

6. How will the needy be judged?

A. Liabilities minus resources equals need. Each application will receive a systematic, business-like review of all three factors. Resources include much more than cash. Ability to do just a little light work is a resource. Relatives are resources; homes are resources, children who cannot at once be located are resources; old insurance policies are resources (many a hopeless aged applicant has been transformed into a happy, independent citizen when a trained worker discovered an old-age insurance policy could be salvaged). Resources change from month to month (gardens in the summer cut down food expenses) thus "need" varies constantly in each case. Consistent consideration of this equation, "liabilities minus resources equals need," insures the available money being spent on those who need it most; insures the most efficient and most economical use of tax money; and insures the highest possible level of comfort and security for the needy aged.

7. Who is to be the judge of their "need?"

A. The county worker makes the actual contact with each applicant and with these people who by kinship or friendship or other responsibility are brought into the case. Section 6 of the Kentucky Law states "Upon the completion of such investigation, the Department of Public Welfare shall decide whether the applicant is eligible for old-age assistance under this Act, the amount of such assistance, and the date on which payment shall begin." Thus every aged applicant gets the same consideration regardless of which residence. The Department of Public Welfare certifies to the Auditor of Public Accounts the amount due and payable to each person who has been granted old-age assistance, and the Auditor issues warrant on the State Treasurer for the amount so certified.

The Social Security Board cannot financially in any State's program which does not include the following: "If any applicant is denied assistance or is awarded an amount deemed by him inadequate, or if his assistance be revoked or modified, he may appeal to and have a fair hearing before, the Division of Public Assistance."

RAPID CHANGE OF AIR IMPORTANT IN CURING OF TOBACCO

Since circulating air is one of the important factors in curing tobacco, barns should be so arranged as to permit the rapid change of air when needed, points out a circular of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, called "Ventilation of Tobacco Barns."

Water constitutes the greater part of the tobacco plant when it is placed in the barn, and this water is evaporated from the surface of the leaves during the first stages of curing. Hence the importance of properly regulating the rate of drying.

If the leaf is dried too rapidly, it is killed prematurely, the curing is stopped and the color of the leaf remains green. On the other hand, if drying is too slow, the curing process goes too far, the tobacco either turns a dark-red color or, possibly, becomes houseburned. The rate of drying depends on the humidity of the air and its rate of movement through the barn.

It is pointed out that water comprises 75 to 90 percent of the weight of green tobacco, and that an acre of tobacco yielding 1,500 pounds of cured leaf weighs 8 to 12 tons when cut.

To cure tobacco successfully, this large amount of water must be removed under such conditions and at such rate as best allow the other fundamental changes to occur.

EXPERIMENT STATION CONDUCTING TESTS IN CURING TOBACCO

In an effort to determine the best and most practical methods of curing tobacco, the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station has established experimental curing barns for burley at Lexington and for dark tobacco at the Western Kentucky Experiment Station at Princeton.

Crops of tobacco are undergoing the curing process at both places, with automatic instruments recording changes in temperature, humidity, air velocity, weight and other curing factors. Bottom, vertical and ridge ventilators are being tested, as well as firing for both burley and dark tobacco. At Princeton, the so-called "soft cure" and the "old method" are being compared.

While the information gathered in the barns will indicate what happens in the curing process, extensive studies have been inaugurated in the new tobacco research laboratory, recently completed at the Experiment Station at Lexington, to determine the curing requirements for the highest quality of leaf.

With facts gathered about changes that take place in temperature, humidity, air velocity and weight of tobacco in the barn, and also with information regarding best curing requirements, the Experiment Station hopes eventually to be able to design barns and recommend practices that will enable farmers to put higher quality leaf on the market.

BETTER BEEF FROM KENTUCKY LESPEDEZA

Meat packers say that an unsurpassed type of beef is now coming from Kentucky lespedeza pastures, notes the annual report of the extension division to the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. The dressing percentage of these heaves is reported to be as high, or higher, than that of cattle grazed on other pastures. An especially desirable white tallow is being produced from these cattle.

A WOMAN WRITES ABOUT "WOMEN"

Good but socially-minded women are almost as devastating to the man-power of the country as war or bad whisky or run-away automobiles. They contrive to kill off many a good husband because they do not use their brains for thinking. The men wear a haggard look these days—and business worries constitute only about half of their cares.

The other half is brought on by the trotting about they are obliged to do after business hours by wives up their bridge games and who want to dance as often as they can find good music and a suitable place.

Most of this, to be sure, is caused by ignorance. Knowing little about the high nervous pressure which must be endured in the downtown world, a good many women figure that after a hard day in the office a husband should enjoy above all things staying up most of the night at a lively party.

The minute John comes home he is told to hop into some fresh clothes and the gay round begins. Too much liquor is served at all these shindigs. If hostesses did not provide plenty of gin, the probabilities are that the men would all fall to snoring before dessert. As it is, they dine and dance like automatons or wax maudlin with weariness and wassail.

Men in times like these need privacy and plenty of sleep.

Of the former, many American husbands get none. Of the latter, too little. After a strenuous day at work, when all his faculties must be alert, a man comes home to the often inconsequential chatter of his wife who is slightly bored by the monotony of domestic routine to the shouting of his children or the screeching of the neighbor's radio.

The bread-winner in every home should have at least an hour each day to be alone. This period of peace will gird him about with strong armor and send him forth renewed in spirit and invigorated in heart. Remember: "Better a dry morsel and quietness therewith than a house full of sacrifices with strife."

Another "On the Job Test"
... Another Ford Owner

Little Rock, Arkansas

Ford Motor Company,
Memphis, Tenn.

Gentlemen:

At the invitation of one of your local dealers, we tested one of your Ford trucks, hauling our regular loads, even our regular routes and driven by our own driver. The route we picked for the test was one of our "toughest" - three trips daily, 200 miles over the roughest gravel and dirt road, and up and down steep hills. Despite these adverse conditions, the demonstration proved to us convincingly that Ford was the truck for the job. Not only did we make the difficult run in much less time, but the low gasoline consumption amazed us. The driver was - and still is - highly enthusiastic over the truck's performance. The demonstration records prove conclusively that the Ford V-8 truck is all that it is said to be.

Very truly yours,
J. B. PEARSON FLOUR & FEED CO.

This kind of service can be rendered only by a reliable concern managed by people who have a neighborly relation with their patrons.
