DIESEL ENGINE CON-FERS WITH COUNCIL

During a special session of the city council here Monday night, C. J. McDonald, diesel engineer, told the local officials about the economy of installing a diesel power plant at the city water works at an estimated cost of $10,000. Mr. McDonald explained in detail the equipment necessary for providing power to pump water for the city, current for the downtown white-way and lights at the city hall.

Mayor DeMyer and the council were informed that two Diesel engines, used for four months on compressors while building a tunnel for the L. & N. railroad near Mid-dleboro, Ky., could be purchased for $5,500, which is less than half what one motor would cost new. Mr. McDonald explained that these motors were like new, and that he guaranteed them to be as represented.

Plans were tentatively discussed and estimates made as to the approximate cost of engines, generators and other equipment, as well as construction of building to house the plant, and $10,000 was considered adequate for the total expenditure required. Taking in consideration the cost of electricity for power and lights, and coal bills at the water works, now paid out by the city, and comparing with the cost of operating Diesel plant, it was estimated that the new plant will pay for itself in 18 months.

FULTON COUNTY GIRLS IN AUTO ACCIDENT

T. Van Arsdale, 23 years of age, New Albany, Ind., resident, who was salesman in this section for the Belknap Hardware Company, Louisville, was fatally injured, and died five minutes after he was moved to a Murray hospital with a broken neck, crushed chest and gashes in his skull and one eye, as a result of a serious motor crash Sunday night at 6:30 o'clock on the Benton-Paduach highway, at the Dexter intersection. Mr. Arsdale had resided in Murray recently and was well known in West Kentucky.

Van Arsdale, accompanied by Frank Ryan, Murray and two Murray State College students, Miss Idelle Batts, Fulton, and Miss Bee Smith, Hickman, and Miss Ethel Quarles, teacher at the Lone Oak High School, were enroute from Murray to Paducah when the accident occurred. The Van Arsdale car crashed into a car driven by Brooks Blagg, of Hardin, Ky., at the Dexter highway intersection. Blagg received a broken leg, lacerated left arm, and lacerations about the forehead and skull. There were three girls riding in the car with Blagg. ## CITY SCHOOL BOARD WILL ELECT MEMBERS

Fulton city school board is composed now of Smith Atkins, Guy Duley, J. H. Moore, R. H. Wade, R. E. Goldsby and Gus, with the terms of the latter three expiring January 1. A new state law governing election of members of school boards, as passed at the last legislature, has reduced the membership from six to five members, so only two new members are to be chosen at the next election. The other remaining three will serve for two more years.

Four petitions were filed this week with County Court Clerk E. H. Land at Hickman by candidates R. H. Wade, R. E. Goldsby, Paul Horn-beak and Vodie Hardin, two of which will be elected to fill the vacancies.

FREIGHT TRAIN HITS TRUCK NEAR GIBBS

About 2:30 p. m. Tuesday, a fast freight train smashed into a truck belonging to M. M. Pierce as the machine stalled on a crossing near Gibbs. Merchandise valued at $50 was scattered along the right-of-way.

VORIS GREGORY DIES; BROTHER IS NAMED

Congressman W. V. Gregory, age 58, Democratic member of the National House of Representatives since 1926, and ardent supporter of the Roosevelt administration, died at five o'clock Saturday morning in his home at Mayfield following a two month's illness. He had undergone treatment at Mayo's, Rochester, Minn., recently.

Funeral services were conducted at the First Presbyterian church, Mayfield, at 10 o'clock Monday morning with the pastor, Dr. D. M. Aumens and Dr. Charles W. Welch, Louisville, in charge. Private burial was conducted at Maplewood.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Marie V. Gregory; a daughter, Mrs. Henry H. J. Gregory; his mother, Mrs. W. J. Gregory; a brother, N. J. Gregory, cashier of the First National Bank, and a sister, Mrs. Walter Ellis, Mayfield.

As a member of Congress, Judge Gregory was active in legislative matters of that body meeting at Washington, and soon was recognized for his ability and assigned to the important judiciary committee. The past Congress session he was chairman of the subcommittee.

He was nominated by the Democrats of the First District last August by the heaviest majority ever and was slated for re-election next month. He was a member of the Presbyterian church of Mayfield. He belonged to the Elks, Woodmen of the World, Modern Woodmen, Odd Fellows, Masons and other fraternal organizations and to the Alpha Tau Omega college fraternity of Cumberland University from which he graduated as a student of law.

T. H. Barriger, chairman of the Graves county executive committee, called a meeting of the First district Democratic committee at Mayfield Wednesday afternoon to select a successor to Congressman Gregory as Democratic nominee in the November election.

The committee selected Noble J. Gregory, Mayfield bank cashier, to succeed his late brother, Congressman William Voris Gregory, as the Democratic Congressional nominee in the forthcoming November election.

After a first vote of 12 for Gregory and two ballots for Lawrence Cooper, attorney from Benton, Dr. S. B. Pulliam, of Paducah, who with Harry Miller, committeeman from Marshall county, voted for Cooper, moved the election of Gregory by a unanimous vote.

Gregory, who was educated in Mayfield private and public schools and a graduate of Mayfield high school, is 29 years old. He has served as secretary-treasurer of the Mayfield school board for 15 years, is elder in the First Presbyterian church, an Odd Fellow and an Elk.

WHOLESALE LIQUOR STORES REOPEN HERE

Two local wholesale liquor distributing companies reopened here late Monday night, after Sheriff John M. Thompson of Hickman, lifted the padlock by long distance telephone message from George-town, Ky., where Judge William B. Ardrey had discharged attachments brought by the Attorney General's Department against six Western Kentucky liquor distributors.

In Fulton the C. & G. and the Ford-Pittman distributing companies were attached for $105,624.48 and $24,721.73 respectively. The attachments were levied when the Commonwealth filed suits against the liquor distributing companies for taxes claimed due the state on liquor sold for distribution within the state. The companies claimed the liquor in question was sold outside the state, that it was exempt from the tax in question as a manufacturers' tax already had been paid on it. The total amount sought in the suits was $414,193.72.

Judge Ardrey's ruling had no bearing on the suits, which still are pending, but merely dismissed the attachments against the properties of the defendants. A hearing of the case is scheduled at Frankfort in a few days. Chas. I. Dawson, former federal judge and former Kentucky Attorney General, appeared in behalf of the defendants. He said the distributors had a right to distribute the liquor in Tennessee, a dry state. He contended the Commonwealth failed to prove that the liquor sold by the defendants for distribution in Tennessee, was actually distributed in Kentucky.

FULTON RAILROADERS SEE SPECIAL PICTURE

The Illinois Central System presented here Wednesday and Thursday a 30-minute picture with synchronized talking, "Cordially Yours" for a special showing to railroad men and employees. The shows were conducted in a specially equipped car spotted just north of the passenger station.

Members of the press here were extended a special invitation to attend the show Wednesday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock. The picture, which deals with the equipment, personnel and ideals of the Illinois Central System, was of surprising interest and highly instructive and interesting to railway workers.

The picture explained in detail the operation of a railroad system, how each employee has a definite part to perform, to insure the safe and efficient transportation of passengers and freight. Service rendered in such a way as to merit the lasting friendship of its patrons is one of the outstanding policies of the Illinois Central System.

SOMETHING NEW IN FILMS

And that something new on the screen is charming and talented Jeanne Madden, the 18 year old school girl whose voice brought her both a grand opera and movie contract. She is shown here being tossed around a bit by the Yacht Club Boys and Frank McHugh in "Stage Struck," the new First National comedy-romance with music, which is showing Sunday and Monday, Oct. 18-19 at the Orpheum Theatre, Fulton, Kentucky.

SOUTH FULTON

Z. W. Pigue, electrical engineer, entertained the school with a series of pictures last week. The pictures pertained to better vision, and were produced by the Better Vision Institute and shown through the courtesy of the Kentucky Utilities Company.

First and second rounds of the class tournament have been completed and the Juniors and Seniors will face each other in both boys and girls finals. The Senior and Sophomore teams will play basketball Wednesday night in the gym.

Florence, Council of Pickwick Dam and former student here, visited the school Tuesday.

Don't forget the Hallow-teen carnival Friday night, October 30.

FRESHMAN NEWS
Great interest has been shown by the Freshmen in the class tournament, although the Freshmen failed to win either of their games.

Latin I class has been having a race to see who are the black sheep. It turned that three were no black sheep, but quite a number of spotted ones.

The Freshmen class party is scheduled for Friday night, October 16, at 7:30 o'clock. The class hopes to have a large attendance. All are invited to come.

The Freshmen Home Economics class had visitors. They were Norma Davis, a former student of South Fulton, and Martha Neil Houston.

SOPHOMORE NEWS
Hallow-teen is just around the corner. Many pranks will be played and the witches will make their appearance. South Fulton invites everyone to their yearly program. Come and put all your votes on the Sophomore King and Queen, Mary Locke and Junior Omar. We notice Red Melvin is wearing a certain Freshman girl's ring. Davis, where is your birthstone? Six weeks exams are now raging. Next week we hope to fill the news with the first honor-roll.

Never Before Could You Telephone "Long Distance" So Cheaply as Now

The lowest long distance rate reduction, effective September 1, was the result of a reduction voluntarily made by the Company in the past ten years, and will save telephone users many millions of dollars.

You can now talk on long distance the service a distance of 50 miles for as little as 15c or 10c for 25c and greater at 15c distances at a correspondingly low cost.

Telephoning is the quick, easy, economical and personal way to keep in close touch with out-of-town relatives and friends. There is no more satisfactory and pleasing way to extend sympathy or congratulations, greetings or assistance to out-of-town friends and acquaintances than by long distance telephone.

Isn't there someone, somewhere, father, mother, brother, sister or friend who would be made happier by hearing your voice and talking to you tonight? Ask "Long Distance" for rates.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

One Human Shipload
A Floating Microcosm
Intelligent Mrs. Widener
Mrs. Astor and Dr. Carrel
On Board the Normandie.—The ancient writer made this admission:

There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not:
The way of an eagle in the air;
The way of a serpent upon a rock;
The way of a ship in the midst of the sea;
And the way of a man with a maid.

What would writer say of this modern ship in the midst of the sea? The biggest ship he ever saw could be hung from the ceiling of the dining salon on this boat or tucked away in a corner of the sun deck, disturbing no one.

A modern ocean liner, Queen Mary, Normandie, Rex or Europa, as it crosses the ocean indifferent to waves and winds, is a small world in itself, a microcosm, with this little earth playing the role of "Cosmos." If this ship should sail to some new, uninhabited island of Utopia, it might supply everything necessary to start a new civilization better than the one invented by Sir Thomas More, who has been made a saint since he wrote "Utopia" to amuse himself and had his head cut off for his Catholic faith.

On board, with his friend, George Bacon, is Myron Taylor, head of the United States Steel company, biggest industrial unit on earth. He would supply the material for skyscrapers, ships, railroads and machinery, plus organization.

Simon Guggenheim would tell them how to make corporations profitable, by "holding on."

Various newspaper workers on the boat would be ready to start "the New Utopia Gazette"; Floyd Gibbons for war correspondent, plus members of the Edward H. Butler family, that own the Buffalo News, and the able Abraham Cahan, known to more New Yorkers than any editor in America, with one exception. And, most important to newspaper prosperity, the ship carries Mrs. George D. Widener of Philadelphia, who has traveled up and down in every corner of the earth and says to your narrator:

"Mr. Brisbane, I have always wanted to meet you, because I read your articles every day."
There spoke the nucleus of a highly intelligent reading public.

Mrs. Vincent Astor, on her way back from a grouse moor in Scotland, would resume her real job of promoting deep music, finding co-operators in the passenger list—Madame Flagstad, the admirable Norwegian singer, a deep soprano able to make Isolde more impressive than Wagner ever imagined her. On board also is Arthur Bodanzky, ready to conduct the "New Utopia orchestra." Mayor LaGuardia of New York will tell you how earnestly Mrs. Astor talks to him about her plans for a great musical center. But Mr. LaGuardia will never know what shudders would sweep from Ward McAllister's pineal gland to his Achilles tendon if he could hear Mayor LaGuardia say of the young lady in question, "That Mrs. Astor is a nice, serious girl, thoroughly in earnest."

To make this list complete, P. G. Wodehouse is on board, one who could and should describe this shipload of "important humanity" going nowhere in particular, for no reason in particular, some in the steerage, some "tourist" and some, with cabins on the sundeck, whose names break up passenger list continuity to make room for the magic words "maid, valet and chauffeur."

The contest between modern ships for the "Atlantic blue ribbon" or ocean championship, held at this moment by the British Queen Mary, supplies most amazing proof of modern engineering efficiency. Consider that, in a race across 3,000 miles of water, the Queen Mary, after being beaten several times by the French liner Normandie, beat the latter and took the Atlantic blue ribbon by a margin of less than half a mile, across 3,000 miles of ocean.

The oftener you cross, the more clearly you realize that the ocean is a great deal too big for our small planet. It is all one ocean—Atlantic, Pacific, Arctic, Antarctic, all touching—water covering three-quarters of the earth's surface. Consider the Pacific; take your world map, Mercator's projection, fold it over from Asia toward New York and beyond. It will cover the United States, the Atlantic ocean and all Europe to the Bosphorus.

Washington.—Mr. Secretary Morgenthau lately has gone into the money market to borrow approximately one billion dollars. He asked the banks and other people having idle money to purchase four hundred millions in new government bonds and at the same time asked them to extend loans totalling about $550,000,000 that matured on September 15. The maturing securities, of course, do not take new money out of the money market, but it is borrowing just the same despite the technical name of re-funding.

The Treasury's action in borrowing such a huge sum at this time came as a surprise. To many financial authorities, in fact to most of them, there was no need for borrowing additional funds at this time. It was a circumstance in which, as far as most observers could see, the Treasury had idle money in sufficient amount to meet the needs for the next several months.

Aside from the fact that the Secretary's action results in an increase in the public debt by the amount of new money borrowed, it is a matter deserving more than passing attention — much more attention than Treasury borrowings heretofore. The reason is that the administration is again piling up in the Treasury a huge amount of idle funds. As nearly as I can calculate, the results of the September borrowings, the Treasury will be left with a mere $1,700,000 in unused cash. Of course, to the Roosevelt administration which has dealt only in billions, this sum may not appear important. Mr. Morgenthau said it was necessary to have these funds available because of "unsettled conditions" abroad. But that answer, to me, does not suffice.

I recognize that most people find little interest in discussing Treasury financial policies. I know from the type of letters that I get from those who do me the honor to read these reports that the subject of Treasury finance seems far removed from anything in which they can possibly have an interest. But notwithstanding those facts, I feel the matter should be discussed in every section of the country because it directly touches every taxpayer; and that is of vital importance.

Here is how it affects the taxpayer and when I refer to the taxpayer I refer to every individual in this country, because all of us are paying taxes either directly or indirectly. When the Treasury arranges a cash balance, it provides funds upon which the various government agencies may draw in accordance with congressional appropriations. To that extent it is like money you deposit in a bank. But otherwise it is quite different. The cash balance in the Treasury lies idle. It brings no return, no profit to anybody.

But it is important to remember that there are only two ways in which the Treasury can get money for this cash balance, namely, by borrowing or by taxing you and me. During the Roosevelt administration the Treasury has borrowed about $12 for every dollar it has collected in taxes. The result is a gigantic public debt.

There is another result, however, that is not as apparent to individuals. Since the Treasury is borrowing money it has to pay interest on what it borrows. You and I are paying this interest in the form of additional taxes. So, therefore, not alone are we being taxed for the money that is spent and which must be repaid, but we are being taxed to pay the interest on idle funds.

Mr. Morgenthau's reference to unsettled conditions abroad directs attention to what is happening in Europe and Asia and the link that exists between those conditions and our own.

President Roosevelt lately has said on several occasions that he did not like to be away from Washington more than four or five days at a time because of those unsettled conditions. Every one knows that our foreign friends are rearming. I believe every one realizes as well, however, that each of those foreign nations is in a position where it cannot initiate hostilities. At least, each one is in a position where very great provocation must occur before it can justify the starting of a war in the eyes of nations like our own.

Any one who wishes to examine those unsettled conditions will find at the very bottom two types of propaganda. One comes from Russia, the other from Germany. The two types of propagandists, while violently hating each other, are preaching exactly the same sort of thing. They are telling the world that if the world wants peace it must align itself with one or the other of the two schools of thought, depending upon which type of propaganda you read. With circumstances like that going on abroad, it seems to me that we as Americans ought to realize fully—and ought to defend—the type of government that we have. Neither Stalin nor Hitler preaches our type of economic thought.

I have been a little bit disappointed that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Secretary Hull of the State department have not preached the American doctrine at more length. I am sure pronouncements by them in condemnation of communism or fascism would find a hearty response at the hands of the American people.

It is to be recognized that changes take place in world economic and political thought. They are taking place in our country. More are coming. But I condemn the practices of communism and fascism because they have ruined the lives of all excepting a few people in every nation where those policies are operative. They will destroy the independence of thought and action, the happiness, that we have come to know in this country as a natural right.

In negotiations with foreign powers, Mr. Roosevelt has not been fortunate. I think it is generally agreed among observers that the President fumbled the ball when he failed to take advantage of a splendid opportunity to deal with France and Great Britain when he first became President. Likewise, I know there are many students who are convinced that the President by his own acts broke up the London economic conference in the summer of 1933 and with the collapse of that London meeting went any hope for an early recovery from the depression on a world basis.

The war debts question still hangs in mid air. The recognition of Russia I am convinced turned out to be a fizzle. The far eastern program, if there was a program, has yielded nothing because it must be said in truth we have not cemented our friendship with Japan.

Within the last few days we have seen the collapse of the French currency. We have seen the President join with Great Britain in co-operating with the French in their difficulty. Yet, it is apparent to anyone who will review the financial and economic history of the last three years that the French have made a great effort to remain on the gold standard—and they had no help from us until they could no longer stand the strain.

It is always easier to use hindsight than foresight. It is easier as well to call attention to mistakes three years after those mistakes have been made than to take a bold stand when the errors were first discussed. These facts, however, do not in any way lighten the responsibility that was ours as a nation in 1933.

I refer again to the London economic conference and the events prior to it in 1933. There were plenty of men in the United States at that time who said openly that the United States should move quickly and take leadership in world stabilization of currencies. It appeared for a time that President Roosevelt would take that action but instead he is charged with having broken up the London conference because he failed to assume that leadership which he could have had.

That brings us to the link between the United States and the conditions of Europe. Mr. Roosevelt, through Secretary Morgenthau, says now that the United States will stand with Great Britain in helping the French. The question naturally arises why did not the United States stand with France in 1933 when France and a half dozen other European nations wanted to remain on the gold standard for its currency.

SYNOPSIS

Kerry Young, a lad of seven, is prepared to flee the burning lumber camp of his benefactor, Jack Snow, who took the youngster to live with him at the death of Kerry's mother. Tod West has instructed Kerry to come with a file containing the camp's funds should it be endangered. Flames attack the office, and Kerry, bugging the precious file, and Tod race to town. Tod acts queerly. At the bank the file is found empty and Kerry is blamed with taking the wrong one.

CHAPTER II—Continued

Jack roused from his lethargy. "Faul, hell!" he snorted and spit, the way he used to. "You done your damndest, both of you!" But Kerry detected again that funny look in Tod's eyes. The man would not meet the boy's gaze.

"I'm hittin' for the West," said Tod. "Goin' clean to the Pacific Coast."

But from their window that evening he saw Tod board an east-bound train. He did not think so much of it then. . . . He was to remember it later, though.

That night old Jack grew worse. The doctor came and gave him some medicine, but he was restless, and frightened Kerry, the way he would sit up in bed and talk wildly, and finally the boy, trying to soothe him, crept close into the arms and that seemed to bring peace to the harried spirit.

After Jack was quiet, the boy whispered:

"It ain't so, what they're tellin', Jack. I didn't take the wrong one, unless he told me wrong."

"Eh? What's that?" Jack asked. He said it again and added: "When he told me, he put his hand right on it; right on the one on top th' safe 'nd said your money was in it 'nd to come a-runnin' when he yowled for me. 'Nd I did, 'nd now th' kids 'nd some men say 'twas me who sent you belly up!"

Old Jack was very silent. "What else'd he do? After that, what'd he do?"

And the boy related, in detail, what Tod West had done . . . how he had gone down by the creek and come back through the alders as if wondering if anyone had seen him. And of how he hadn't tried to save the buildings that were first in line of danger.

Jack Snow swore a slow and terrible oath, then.

"He could 'a' done that . . . 'Nd buried it 'nd dug it up since th' fire 'nd put th' bee on a little feller. . . ."

"I'll send after him 'nd find out! He ain't so far on his way west!" he declared but when Kerry tried to tell him that Tod had gone east instead of west the old man did not listen.

Before morning he was much worse and that day they took Kerry away and before the week was out he had no old Jack looking after him, nor would he ever have, again. The Poor Commissioner was his boss, now, and was boarding him out. . . .

He could not hide the hurt of old Jack's passing, of course. All he could do was to hide himself in the woods at the edge of town, in the long grass of meadows where he could lie on his face and cry softly.

But that other thing: the hurt which came when boys, with the cruelty of their years, taunted him with having sent Jack bust . . . why then, he found, he could cover the pain with laughter. He found both sanctuary and defense in laughter. . . .

But he began, after a time, to wonder how right he had been, to doubt the reliability of his own impressions. That had been such a bewildering time, when Jack's camp burned. Again, he would be certain that his memory was flawless. . . . He was most unhappy.

He tried to run away repeatedly, when he was older. Always they brought him back and made him stay and kept him in school when he hated the place and all the people in it because they never forgot what Tod West had told about him and would not listen when, as a little boy, he had tried to tell what he and old Jack had suspected. He did not persist in trying to broadcast this suspicion. Some day, he'd get foot-loose; then they could all go to the devil. Until then he'd hide the things he really felt behind laughter.

CHAPTER III

They sat in a St. Paul office, Kerry Young, tall and brown and trim in his woodsman's clothing. At his feet was curled a Chesapeake retriever, brighter than the presenced dead grass in color; almost honey-hued, he was.

A bit more than a decade had passed since he had finally gotten free of the town which had warped and mounded his spirit. . . .

"This," said the man across the desk, "is the finest report on a timber property I have ever read. It's great! I'm asking you again: Won't you stick with us, Young? There's a big opportunity with this corporation for a man of your years and ability."

Kerry smiled slowly.

"Time to move," he said in his deep voice. "I've been on this one job since October. It's July, now. Tip and I"—with a nod toward the dog—"are a little afraid of taking root."

"You're always moving, aren't you?" "Most of the time."

The other paused started to speak

hesitated and then asked bluntly:

"Why, Young?"

Kerry laughed and answered as one will who evades an issue.

"I like to see country. I like to put in, this time of the year, at the headwaters of a river I've never been on and follow her through to the mouth. Rivers are wonderful experiences, Mr. Burkhead. You never know, on the new ones, what's around the next bend or at the foot of the next rapid!"

"I understand all that. But isn't there something else?" the other persisted. "Something else that keeps you forever on the move?"

Young's smile faded.

"There is," he said simply. "Once, when I was a kid, I was in one place too long. It's while he's a kid that a man's habits are formed. I got the habit of wanting to move, wanting to go; wanting to clear out and get yonder until it hurt. . . . hurt like the devil, sir."

He broke short and the smile swept back into his face.

"No use trying to explain. I just want to be gone yonder; that's all!"

"Some day you'll light and do a lot for yourself, I'm thinking. But I won't try to anchor you; it's no use. I'm interested though. What river's it going to be this year?"

"Any one of several. I know lots of 'em," he looked at a large map of the Great Lakes section which hung on the wall. "There's the Zingwack, and the Mad Woman and the Blueberry. Any one of 'em would be a good bet."

"They're all fine streams," Burkhead rose and walked to the map, putting on his glasses. "We had an operation on the Blueberry years ago. We could have one on the Mad Woman now, if we wanted it. A chap up there in trouble; bit off more than he can chew, I guess. West, Tod West. Know the property?"

For an instant Kerry did not reply. "No," he said. "I've never been on the Mad Woman." He rose, a bit stiffly. "Tod West? You're sure?"

"Sure. Had considerable correspondence with him; sent a cipher in there last winter. Ever run across him?"

He looked around sharply when, instead of answering, his caller laughed, a hard and brief and mirthless laugh.

"Once," he said after that. "Yes . . . once . . ."

You never know what's around the next bend or at the foot of the rapid below you when traveling a strange river, he had said.

For a week he had been on the Mad Woman, now. One night he had camped by a fire tower and talked for long with the lonely lookout. Yes, Tod West was a big man in this country. Another time he stopped for an hour with an isolated trapper. West's Landing was thirty miles below. Pretty soon, now, he'd be going through West's upper holdings. A great fellow, Tod, but he'd been hard hit lately, folks said. His only operation was in pulp and the pulp wood market was shot. . . .

And so on.

Occasionally as he paddled easily with the current he would wink at Tip, seated by the packs, and throaty laughter would rumble up from his chest.

"Chance," he said at one of these times. "The part chance plays in a man's life!"

And at night, in his camp beneath the stars, he would lie awake hour after hour, wondering, remembering, teasing himself with the thought that finally, perhaps, he was going to know. . . .

Since rounding the bend far above the murmur of racing waters had been in his ears and, approaching the head of the rapid, he went cautiously.

At the right was a landing, with signs of many portages on shingle and trees. Fires had been built there, camps made; many boats dragged out and packs lifted to shoulders for the carry, rather than risk descent of the tossing torrent below.

Young was about to step into the shallows and lead his canoe to shore when a flash from below caught his eye. It came again: the glint of afternoon sunlight on something bright.

He lifted the glasses, leveled them and went slowly rigid.

Two people on the bank at the foot of that rapid were in falling combat! He could see a red shirt, its wearer evidently having just leaped into a boat beached there. Trying escape, he was, but another gave pursuit. A large figure this, and as he leaped into the boat he stumbled and went down and the skiff commenced drifting slowly out into the current.

Again Kerry had that bright glint of reflected light and saw that it was from an outboard motor, clamped to the stern. . . . And now the larger figure was up and the red-shirted one seized an oar, raised it high and swung it smartly at the other.

On that posture a word broke from Young's lips. One word: "Girl!" No man ever swung a cudgel in that manner. . . .

The man in the bow ducked, threw out a hand, caught the oar as it bashed the gunwale and, with a wrench, tore it free from the girl's grasp. He tossed it overboard. Then slowly, menacingly, he went forward, raising a foot to step over the thwart before him.

He stopped, then, and threw out his arms for balance against the sharp list of the boat. The girl had dived!

"Oh-ho!" said Young sharply to himself. "Tight fix, eh? Drop, Tip!"

The dog, at his word, flattened himself in the bottom. No time for the carry, now. The girl in such evident distress was forty rods away by water; how far by trail he did not know.

The canoe nosed silently into the first suck of swift current, Young's eyes sorely busy with the frothing tumult below. He saw where a barrier ledge ran out from the right, narrowing the stream down against the opposite bank, making a safe passage of meager width. He saw where upstanding boulders ripped the current to spume in that narrow cut, making further increase in the already treacherous hazard.

Fast and faster he moved, charging for that narrow channel, straightening his canoe out as he gathered speed, setting it parallel with the rip. He swung sharply to the right to miss one snag and worked back into the sleek, black slide which indicated the safety of depths.

He went into a brawling rifle next, with foam all about, and angling across it, found deep water again. It scooted with him, sweeping him straight down a stretch rods long, eddies and patches of froth accompanying him like outriders. . . .

Protruding rocks reared themselves again. He decided in a split second that the way to the left was the better. A contrary current disputed with the impulse of his paddle. A crazy rapid, this; a reckless chance on which he was engaged!

He lifted his gaze for a flash of a look at the boat below. It was so, far as he could tell, empty. Whoever the girl was, she had been followed overboard by the man. . . . whoever the man was. . . .

The dog's ears were up though he lay flat, nose on his paws. From his throat now and again came a sharp whine and he quivered as the tenacity of his master communicated itself to him.

And now again Young was paddling desperately, great arms sweeping with the precision and regularity of some device of stout metal, power driven. Cords stood out on his brown neck and back muscles rippled beneath the smoothly fitting shirt of deep green.

Beyond, the current was actually uplited, banked, so abrupt was the deflection of those tons of rushing water. He must clear the rock to his left, must turn in time to avoid that which would then lie close to his right. . . .

The chute now sped down mid-stream and he paddled stoutly to gain even more speed. He felt himself dropping at a break which was all but a cascade, swore once, sharply and stoutly as he was sucked into a welter of foam. A sliny nose of granite seemed to reach through the latter for him and he threw his weight to the left, righted the frail craft just as water boiled over the rail and, canoe sideways, turning still further until he progressed backward, he shot into the placid pool which marked the foot of the rapid.

It was over his shoulder, then, that he saw the two. Their boat was drifting with the current, turgid there for space. On one side of the skiff was the girl, supporting herself in the water by hands on the gunwale; on the other was the man, hatless, his face dark under the sun.

They had not seen this approach of a third. They were so occupied that all else was excluded from attention. The man braced himself, pulled his weight sharply upward, hooked elbows over the rail and threw up a foot to flounder inboard.

It was here that the girl, letting go her hold with one hand as it for the second time to attempt escape by swimming, saw Kerry. He had a flash of a white face, lovely in contour and feature, but now stamped with heavy fear.

For an instant the gaze from his blue eyes locked with the girl's dark ones. Then he smiled. He smiled and threw back his head and let the smile run into a laugh.

"Good afternoon!" he said. "Is the water fine?"

A bantering greeting, this, and the words came through the last of his laughter. But banter went out of his heart and mirth from his countenance as he looked from the girl to the man, rising to stand spread-legged in the flat bottomed boat, arms hooked, clothing plastered close to his great chest and strong legs.

The man—hair touched with gray, now; heavier by many pounds; his face lined and a bit flint at the chin—the man was Tod West!

For a long moment they stared at one another. West breathed rapidly. And after that first shock of recognition, with its surge of bitterness, and a certain triumph, he snarled something else: Tod West's face was stamped with the die of passion; that particular kind of passion which had been repressed too long; which had, perhaps, been soured and twisted and fermented to fury by repression.

But that reflection of passion was fading, now; astonishment and bewilderment and chagrin were sweeping up to replace it. And then in a darkening flood, came deep anger against this intruder.

West raised a hand half-way to his breast. It was the right hand. Kerry should have noted the gesture, but he did not. . . . He was too close to the answer of an old, rankling question, now. . . .

No light of recognition was in Tod's face. Too many years had passed. A lad of seven, Kerry had been on that day in old Jack's camp, and West in his early twenties.

Young rallied himself. More important things in his own way of reckoning values might be close at hand, but he had run that rapid to render aid to this girl. That came first and so he spoke, but with difficulty kept bitterness from his tone.

"You might," he said pointedly, "help the young lady back into 'he boat.'"

Still West did not move; nor did he respond. The canoe was within a length of a paddle from the skiff, now, and Kerry could hear the light, quick breathing of the girl.

"I said you might,"—voice rising and thickening,—"help the young lady back into the boat!"

West turned and looked silently toward shore. Young, staring up at him, felt an immeasurable loathing for the man arise. . . . Put the blame for old Jack's ruin on him, had he? And, perhaps, profited by the tragedy himself?

He lifted one foot, flicked it across the gunwales and with a heave of his agile arms was standing face to face with the older man.

"I take it the young lady doesn't relish having you here at all. Why don't you get out?"

The heavy jaw trembled ever so slightly and a red flood swept into the cool and calculating gray eyes.

"I happened to see from back yonder. I happened to see your little game of . . . of tag. I'd say your welcome aboard here was at any time highly questionable. I'd say that the least you could do would be to get out now. I forced her to dive once, and another little swim shouldn't do you any. . . ."

"Let go, you!"

Young's quick grip on West's arm brought words, heavy with rage.

"I won't let go until you. . . ."

The man was no weakling. Kerry felt the tremendous strength in those arm muscles, felt the vast power in the stalwart legs and broad back as West swept an arm out to clasp him into close embrace. But he had the advantage of better composure, of better stance and, perhaps, of an older, ripper hatred. He drove a knee against West's thigh, he half turned, grinding a hip smartly into West's groin. He shoved with both hands and, giving a strangled roar of anger, the man went backward into the river.

A lovely girl was waiting in the chill waters of the Mad Woman and quickly Kerry stooped, taking her hands in his.

She came up, with a light kick of her small feet, the bust of a trim, breech-clad knee against the boat, and stood close to him, draining water. For the space of a slow breath he clung to her hands and his eyes, smiling now because of the things which churned in him, things that, should he let them, might stir too much rage and a modicum of pain, plunged their look deep into hers.

"There!" he said and laughed, because there was nothing else to do, with confusion and embarrassment flooding such a lovely face as that.

She drew her hands down the sleeves of the red shirt, stripping water from the fine flannel. Her eyes went past him to the swimming West, making suddenly and stoutly for shore, and in them showed an anger, surprising in intensity for a face so gently moulded.

The man gained the shallows, waded, dripping, to a beached canoe and dragged it ashore with a savage jerk. He stooped in, drove the paddle against the bottom stoutly enough to spin the craft about and turned on the girl such a look as Young had never seen on a man's face.

"All right!" he said chokingly and nodded just once, sharply. "All right, Nat! For this. . . . you'll be a pauper!"

With no more, with only a quick, venomous glance at Kerry, he turned down-stream, paddling briskly.

The girl's look forbade speech just then. He was at a loss until his gaze, going past her, saw his own canoe, grounded down-stream and on the other side. Tip, amidsthips, was sitting up, ears at alert, watching his master, and when the girl sat down on the thwart with a suddenness which was almost collapse, Young raised his hand, foot, rocking the canoe. His tail threshed rapidly. "Fetch! Fetch the canoe!"

Frantically, then, the retriever nosed the packs, shoving his muzzle deep into them, and came up with the track line in his teeth. Over he went into the shallow water and backing, screeching down, wagging his tail, growling, he dragged the canoe ashore. Tip, in deeper water, he swam rapidly up and across the current, head held sideways by the tug of the line in his jaws.

"That's a smart dog," the girl said. Her voice was even, as though nothing unusual had happened.

WEEKLY SURVEY OF BUSINESS CONDITIONS

The early days of October have set a fast pace in all lines of trade and industry, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from key cities in all parts of the country.

Both retail and wholesale trade surged forward to gain new highs for this period of the year in many areas, while industrial activities have quickened their tempo in keeping with an unusual Fall upturn.

In New York, optimistic reports came from most sections of local business. Retail trade as measured by department stores showed a more than seasonal increase over the previous week and bettered the 1935 period by more than 8%. Credit conditions continued good and the demand for business funds expanded. In the New York wholesale market, sales of industrial goods continued their strong upward movement. Most lines of consumption goods were also substantially more active than a year ago.

In Philadelphia new highs for the year and in some cases for many years were registered by retail trade, bank clearings and car loadings. Department stores gained 53.8% over the previous week, while the gains scored by women's specialty shops and men's stores were 28.3% and 15.1% respectively.

In the leading Pacific coast cities trade was moving forward in keeping with the trends elsewhere in the country, although some nervousness was manifested over the labor situation. In the principal Southern cities gains were somewhat better than elsewhere. For example, New Orleans reported a 37% increase over the 1935 week, while the gains in some of the other cities were: Savannah 10%, Dallas 31%, Houston 10 to 30%, Louisville 8 to 10%, Charleston 28%. Trade in Cincinnati was inclined to lag. Memphis reported retail turnover in keeping with the showing of the last 9 months which displayed a gain of 10% over the same period last year.

In various other cities such as Kansas City, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, St. Louis, Cleveland and Indianapolis store sales were on the upgrade.

That building operations are still being carried along in much larger volume than last year was indicated by building figures from many cities. In New York City plans filed during September jumped from $14,700,000 to $17,200,000. In San Francisco the figures were $650,000 last year, $940,000 this year. In Philadelphia the increase was in excess of $200,000, while the suburbs of the same city showed combined increases of nearly $500,000. Memphis reported building permits for September 3 times as large in volume as those of last year. In Detroit building permits for the month were $4,300,000 which compared with $1,800,000 last September.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR FARMERS TO SIGN FOR PAYMENT APPLICATIONS

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 14.—The signing of applications by farmers for payments under the 1936 agricultural conservation program will begin in Kentucky within a few days, according to O. M. Farrington, in charge of the state office. The procedure for preparing applications has been approved in Washington, he said, and the forms will be distributed among the county offices at once.

Farmers who have carried out their soil-building practices should notify their county office at once. Mr. Farrington said, so they can sign applications for payments. Applications cannot be filled out before soil building practices have been completed. According to regulations, farmers have until October 31 to complete their practices.

Following the filling out of applications in county offices, they will be sent to the state office at the College of Agriculture for checking. From the state office the application will be forwarded to Washington for computation and payment.

The field work for determining performance on each farm is about complete. Reports made by local

WORLD IS NOTIFIED U. S. FROWNS ON WAR

Constructive Foreign Policy of Roosevelt Discourages Europe's War Ardor

One of the paramount issues in the present political campaign is supplied by the threat of another European war, declares John Cudahy, American ambassador to Poland, who has just returned to this country on leave.

"Citizens should wake up to the dangers which threaten them from Europe," said Mr. Cudahy. "All other so-called political issues shrivel into insignificance compared with the question of what position the United States should take in the case of war in Europe."

"The American people are unanimous in their resolve that we must stay out of such war, regardless of the sacrifice. We shall not make other people's wars our wars."

"It is in response to this universal sentiment that the Roosevelt administration sponsored the present neutrality measures, which prohibit shipment of munitions or making of loans to belligerents."

"In Ethiopia and in Spain it has been made clear to the world that our government has adopted a policy of strict neutrality."

"Repeated declarations and statements have notified war-seekers in Europe of the policy the President will follow if and when another serious conflict comes. It has been emphasized that as far as this administration is concerned, peace comes before war prosperity."

"Continuance of this Roosevelt policy—this constructive foreign policy—during the next four years is vital. While this policy may not be popular in some European capitals, it has clarified the situation."

"Meanwhile President Roosevelt's tariff reciprocity plan is coming to be regarded as one of the best and most practical international contributions toward world peace, toward recovery, and toward the elimination of friction between nations."

"This situation is one of the reasons I am so urgently asking the American people to reelect Mr. Roosevelt. His opponents have been strangely silent about these vital matters. But we know that Senator Borah is the logical candidate for Secretary of War in a Land cabinet. And he has stated that he wants the United States to enforce its commercial neutral rights on the high seas even if such enforcement means war. Here is an issue of war. Another four years of Roosevelt means peace, for Roosevelt is the peace champion of the world today."

True Conservatism

Never has a nation made greater strides in safeguarding democracy than we during the past three years. Wise men have long known that in a changing world worthy institutions can be conserved only by adjusting them. A great essayist says: "The voice of great events is proclaiming to us—reform if you would preserve." ... I am that kind of a conservative because I am that kind of a liberal.—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Supervisors of this work will furnish the basis for determining the amount of payments. Procedure for auditing the applications and making payments is being completed, and will be ready for operation as soon as the applications are received from the field.

Mr. Farrington said that approximately 20,000 Kentucky farmers have filled out work sheets under the soil conservation program, or about 15,000 more than participated in the AAA commodity programs.

HOME INFLUENCE STILL MUST COME FIRST

An important thing about children's play is the parents' attitude toward it, Prof. Mary Mumford, in charge of the University of Kentucky nursery school, brings out to her home economics class in "Child Development." Home-made play makes possible the development of skills, knowledge of nature, and an appreciation of other members of the family. The parents can be the ones to lead in the child's learning about different kinds of trees and his collecting of wild flowers. They can help him study birds and their nests, sing carols, and join in folk dancing.

A recreation room can often be made with only a small expenditure of money or none at all. Oftentimes a basement room or an attic can be taken over for it. A floor covering of linoleum permits easy cleaning. The younger children will enjoy having crayons and boxes of paints, brushes, and as easel or large board laid up against the wall. Clay modeling is also interesting, and older children will enjoy amateur carving with the use of corks of soap. A work bench for the children and one for the father provide hours for working and playing together.

Activities that require actual participation are sound educationally. Miss Mumford declares. As the children grow older, the school, church, 4-H club, Scout troops and other organizations will assist in their training, but the influence of the home remains primary in importance.

$1,000 VOTED FOR CRIPPLED CHILDREN

TERRACING

Farmers have until October 31st to sow Minimum Soil Conserving acreage.

Instructions have just been received that farmers who do not have enough soil conserving crops sown can sow land before October 31st in order to qualify for full payment under the Agricultural Conservation program.

Letters have been mailed to producers stating that a certain number of acres of land would have to be sown to conserving crops before Oct. 31st in order for them to qualify for payment but now since the time has been changed October 31st is the closing date.

The new ruling will also permit the sowing of conserving crops like crimson clover in land where corn or cotton was grown this year in order that they meet the minimum requirements on soil conserving crops.

With fall here and bad weather in the offing last minute building activities are taking a decided spurt in this community. New homes are being built, old ones repaired, remodeled, repainted and re-roofed.

Construction activities repairs and improvements on business, residential and farm property in this section in the past few months have cost property owners many thousands of dollars. Improvements have been remarkably increased this year a survey of building material firms shows. Among the many property owners who have or are starting new buildings or improving present ones are: Robert DeMyer, Pierce, Walter Conn, near Beelerston; S. J. Walter, Beelerston; Elwyn Coffman near Fulton; Vodie Hardin mother's home at Beelerston; Herbert Hardy near Water Valley; Chas. Haskell, Water Valley; C. L. Hatchell, near Valley; Mrs. C. R. ## We Believe In Democracy

An Editorial by Franklin D. Roosevelt

OF ALL the nations of the world today, we are in many ways most singularly blessed. Our closest neighbors are good neighbors. If there are remoter nations that wish us not good but ill, they know that we are strong; they know that we can and will defend ourselves and defend our neighborhood.

We seek to dominate no other nation. We ask no territorial expansion. We oppose imperialism. We desire reduction in world armaments.

We believe in democracy; we believe in freedom; we believe in peace. We offer to every nation of the world the handclasp of the good neighbor. Let those who wish our friendship look us in the eye and take our hand.

We shun political commitments which might entangle us in foreign wars; we avoid connection with the political activities of the League of Nations; but I am glad to say that we have cooperated wholeheartedly in the social and humanitarian work at Geneva.

We are not isolationists except in so far as we seek to isolate ourselves completely from war. Yet we must remember that so long as war exists on earth there will be some danger that even the nation which most ardently desires peace may be drawn into war.

I have seen war. I have seen war on land and sea. I have seen blood running from the wounded. I have seen the dead. I have seen cities destroyed. I have seen children starving. I have seen the agony of mothers and wives. I have seen war.

I have passed unnumbered hours. I shall pass unnumbered hours, thinking and planning how war may be kept from this nation.

In one field, that of economic barriers, the American policy may be, I hope, of some assistance in discouraging the economic source of war. The trade agreements which we are making are not only finding outlets for the products of American fields and factories, but are also pointing the way to the elimination of embargoes, quotas and other devices which place such pressure on nations that to them the price of peace seems less terrible than the price of war.

PIERCE-CEQUIN CO. REVIEWED IN MAGAZINE

An interesting review of the Pierce-Cequin Lumber Company appeared in a recent issue of the Kosmos News, as follows:

Among the new Kosmos dealers is the Pierce-Cequin Lumber Company of Fulton, Kentucky, one of the most progressive lumber and building supply companies in that section of the state, identified for 45 years with the construction industry.

The company was founded nearly half a century ago by J. B. Cequin, a general contractor, and Devro Pierce, a sawmill and lumber man. Mr. Pierce later sold out to his son-in-law, W. P. Murrell. In February, 1934, Mr. Cequin died and in the fall of the same year, Mr. Murrell suffered a general breakdown. The partnership was dissolved and the business purchased by C. A. Stephens and his two sisters, Mrs. W. A. Norris and Mrs. A. A. Norris of Memphis.

Mr. Stephens began his career in the lumber business in 1922, being vice foreman of Pierce, Cequin & Co., and during Mr. Murrell's illness assumed active management. Mr. Stephens was born in Fulton, receiving his education here, attending business college at Bowling Green, Ky., and Iowa State College. He was connected with the I. C. Railroad at Fulton for a number of years and was with the Santa Fe in California.

Mr. Stephens is assisted in the operation of the business by his brother-in-law, A. A. Norris.

BUSINESS IN EAST CONTINUES TO IMPROVE

Sales of general merchandise in small towns and rural areas for four major geographical regions of the country as reported to the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce indicate that daily average sales for August, as compared with August 1935, showed a larger increase in the East than in other parts of the country. The figures are based on the dollar value of rural chain store and mail order house sales. Sales in the East were 26 percent above August 1935 as compared with an increase of more than 20 percent for the country as a whole. The smallest increase, about 17 percent, was recorded in the Middle West. Sales for August, as compared with July, were relatively higher in the East than in the other regions, with an increase of 14 1/2 percent, and lower in the Far West and in the South, with increases of 5 percent each. In the Middle West sales were 9 percent higher than in July. The increase in the East was somewhat more than the usual gain for that region at this season of the year, while the gains in the other three regions were below their usual respective amounts.

These lamps give excellent light for study, reading, sewing and other close work. And they create a cheery, restful, inviting atmosphere that helps make a happy household.
