Reliable Electric Service Aids Kentucky's Progress

Spanning mountains, valleys, forests, farmlands, rivers, creeks and swamps—from end to end of the state—the electric power transmission lines of this company cover 1,600 miles.

These power lines carry electrical energy from several large generating stations to 183 cities, towns and villages, lighting streets, homes, stores and offices.

This energy also turns the wheels in more than 2,000 factories, mills, mines and other industrial plants, and operates labor-saving machinery and appliances on hundreds of farms.

Wherever it goes, this flow of electricity increases wealth, encourages industry, speeds progress, provides comforts, reduces drudgery and hardship.

The single aim of the company is to supply excellence at a fair price. It is enabled to do so by steadily improving operating efficiency and constantly investing more capital in expansion and equipment.

Looking Forward

The beginning of a new year finds the railroads of the country functioning smoothly and efficiently. The American people with their great buying power and the relative value of the dollar, the checked economic conditions of last year, this year are normal to all, and the coming year will be one of the normal conditions of the years of expansion to which the economic conditions of last year are comparable but not equal.

In the kind of service we are now rendering the kind of service which we are offering, the railroads must have the assurance of an adequate earning power. Their receipts must consistently be large enough to pay running expenses of all kinds of the railroad companies. The income must be adequate for the payment of all current expenses of the railroad companies.

Both the gross and the net earnings of the railroad in 1927 were less than in 1926. This condition was due to three principal reasons—first, the decrease in the freight and passenger traffic of the railroads. The decrease in the freight and passenger traffic was due to the economic conditions which had been normal to all, and the coming year will be one of the normal conditions of the years of expansion to which the economic conditions of last year are comparable but not equal.

The continued patronage and good will of those whose service is always an inspiration to the Illinois Central organization, but who must see the continuation of the economic conditions which had been normal to all, and the coming year will be one of the normal conditions of the years of expansion to which the economic conditions of last year are comparable but not equal.

Conductors' criticism and suggestions are invited.
