The Coal Industry

By WALTER WINCHELL

Washington

Digest

National Topics Interpreted

by William Bruckart

Washington, D.C.

April 27, 1937

The Coal Industry—During the recent depression, the impact of depression on the coal industry has been felt in every part of the country. The National Coal Board has reported that production in 1935 was down to less than one-fifth of its 1929 level. The strike that hit the industry last year was one of the worst in its history, and it is not yet as clear as it was in the past that the industry can get out of the trouble it is in. There is much more work to be done in improving the efficiency of the industry and in finding new uses for coal. The problem is a complex one, and it is not yet clear what the solution will be. But it is clear that the coal industry is in a serious position, and that something must be done to help it. The government has a role to play in this, and it should be ready to help if the industry is willing to help itself.

The Textile Industry

By E. V. MURPHY

The textile industry, which had been prosperous in recent years, has been hit hard by the depression. The demand for textiles has fallen off sharply, and many mills have been forced to close. The problem is a serious one, and it is not yet clear what the solution will be. But it is clear that the textile industry is in a serious position, and that something must be done to help it. The government has a role to play in this, and it should be ready to help if the industry is willing to help itself.

SYNOPSIS

Every Tramp, a tall man, in a dirty shirt, a bag slung over one shoulder, and a tattered hat on his head, walked into the doorway of the saloon.

"What have you been drinking, Every?" asked the bartender.

"Why, I don't know," replied Every, "I just got here.

"Well, I'll tell you what," said the bartender, "you've been drinking too much. You had better get out of here before I throw you out.

"I'm not going to stay," said Every, "I'm going to leave as soon as I finish my drink.

"That's right," said the bartender, "you had better leave. I don't want any trouble.

"I understand," said Every, "I'll be on the road in a minute.

"Goodbye," said the bartender, "I hope you'll get somewhere.

"Thanks," said Every, "I'll see you later.

EVERY TRAMP continued to walk down the street until he reached the outskirts of town. There he found a job as a laborer.
