THE

● I just naturally believe there is a conspiracy afoot to make me air conscious. Because of the fact that I have frequently stated in this column that I am scared to even think of flying it appears that the subject is being brought to my attention in a variety of ways. For example, I seem to have been placed on the mailing list of two airline companies and receive from week to week an assorted supply of literature which sets forth what delightful sport it is to fly, how cheap it is and now and then a word or so about the safety features. These latter features appeal to me quite strongly, but curiously I am interested only for the sake of the other fellow. I have no desire to try and examine and study the safety features at close range.

● Then, too, I seem to be on the mailing list of some firm which manufactures planes. This firm does not send out quite so much literature as the airline companies, but about once a month I get circulars which tell of the merits of one of the Cub planes, how cheap it is and how safe to fly. They even quote prices on the things, and I believe they would give me a trade-in on any automobile I might happen to have. I read all the literature quite gravely, for in an academic manner only I am interested in planes and flying. But that firm will never, never sell me an airplane. They simply have the wrong man on the mailing list for this purpose.

● Now and then I run across Paul Turberville, Fulton's airman, and he never fails to invite me to take a cloud spin with him. He tells me of the beauties of the earth just as the sun's going down, how beautiful Fulton is as one circles above the town and what a wow of a column I could write after one trip. Folks, if I should ever take that flight and then set down my exact feelings, it would be a wow of a column, for it would really be a column of agony and fear and misery.

● Several times I have noticed Paul flying over my place, and now and then I think he has wagged his wings at me as if to poke a bit of fun at me for my old fashioned ideas. Perhaps this is imagination, however, but sometimes I do wonder how it feels to be up there in the clean, sweet air, entirely removed from the sound and the smell and the petty annoyances of the lowly earth and perhaps there is just a trace of envy that as easily as I step into an automobile and leave the town behind. I see him circling lazily over the highway many times as I am returning from some brief trip, and then slipping swiftly down towards his landing field. It must be something different—but these different things sometimes worry me a lot.

● I had always thought that Ben Cook, down at the U-Tote-Em Store, was about as old fashioned as I, but he can take things in his stride. A couple of Sundays ago, when the town was wrapped in one of these terrible heat waves, he got so hot and desperate that he told Paul he believed he'd go up and see if he could find some cooler weather. So up they went and Mr. Cook at once told me about it, and I think there was just a shade of pity for me as he told how he rose up from the blistering heat down here and found coolness and beauty in the upper reaches of the clouds. That must have been one of the afternoons when Paul flew low over my home and wagged his wings.

● Yes, Paul, I envy you in that ability to fly, but somehow it's a sort of envy which does not make me want to take what you have. I merely envy your state of mind and your casual courage, for I have neither of these possessions.

Two States Are Lashed By Wind As Communications Are Cut -- High
Tides Flood City Of CharlestonWind Of 100 Miles Per Hour Reported In Some Sections

Georgetown, S. C. —Hurricane winds which reached at times a velocity of seventy-five miles an hour lashed parts of the Georgia and South Carolina coast late Sunday, causing mountainous waves which inundated streets and crumpled giant sand dunes.

The storm appeared in the afternoon to be centered east northeast of Savannah, Ga., and moving north northwestward, or inland, between Savannah and Charleston. Savannah escaped major damage, but the historic city of Charleston was cut off from communication.

Tides Flood City

Communication lines into Charleston failed at noon and six hours later had not been restored. At 2:30 p. m. (C. S. T.) an operator for the amateur radio emergency corps at Charlotte, N. C., picked up a message from Charleston saying a seventy-five-mile wind was whipping the city.

The Weather Bureau at Charleston, according to this message, predicted the winds would attain a velocity of ninety to 100 miles an hour. High tides flooded the Charleston business district four blocks from the waterfront.

Winds Reported Decreasing

At 4:35 p. m. (C. S. T.) Coast Guard divisional headquarters in Jacksonville, Fla., received a radio report from a Coast Guard cutter in Charleston harbor saying winds there were decreasing after reaching 63 m. p. h. and that the barometer was rising.

Hurricane warnings were displayed from Washington, N. C., to Savannah.

The highest wind to hit Savannah was estimated at 68 miles per hour. The Savannah Weather Bureau warned that high winds might return Sunday night. A fire at the big Savannah naval stores terminal, thought to have been caused by a falling power line, was brought under control.

Rain Falls In Torrents

Torrential rains accompanied the high winds. Thousands of trees were uprooted in Savannah and other coastal cities. Plate glass windows were shattered. Sand dunes melted away.

Congressmen Laugh At Report
They Own 16 Suits Apiece

Washington. —A quick search through the cloak-rooms of Congress failed today to locate a single lawmaker who owns sixteen suits of clothes.

It didn't bear out the statement of Edmund Goodman, president of a New York haberdashery, that Congressmen as a group average sixteen suits, compared to the twelve-suit average of male Hollywood stars.

Count Harrison Out
"That average doesn't apply to me," replied Senator Pat Harrison (D-Miss.). "I have to search around to find another suit when I have to make a change."

Representative Jack Nichols (D-Okla.), one of the fashion plates of the House, shook his head and said:

"Why, the majority of these fellows up here are country boys. We wouldn't know what to do with sixteen suits if we had them. I count myself lucky to have three."

More Than Million Is Being Spent On State Army Forts

Louisville, Ky. —Work Projects Administration projects totaling $1,332,672 are in operation at Fort Knox and Fort Thomas, Kentucky Administrator George H. Goodman said today.

Sponsors, Goodman said, are contributing $519,724, which brings the total current expenditure for the two Army reservations to $1,852,396. Goodman said he had been informed by Col. F. C. Harrington, Commissioner of works projects, that WPA now is engaged with 56 individual defense program projects distributed over 23 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico representing a total expenditure of $27,000,000 in WPA funds.

WPA now has 2,000 construction men housed in a tent camp at Fort Knox.

One project under the WPA is the construction of Goodman Air- port. Already 1,000,000 cubic yards of dirt has been moved with 500, 000 additional cubic yards yet to be moved in order to establish the proper grade. In the meantime, three miles of runways have been completed while work on additional runways in progress rapidly. A Rock quarry at Fort Knox, operated by WPA, produces 1,200 tons of crushed stone daily, all of which is used in the construction work.

At Fort Thomas the work of WPA is mostly that of rehabilitation of existing facilities. All buildings and streets are being repaired. The rifle range there is undergoing complete rehabilitation by WPA workers, as well as all of the buildings used in its operation.

Goodman said he expects additional work at Bowman Field, Louisville airport, together with the expansion of Kentucky's armory plants at various points in the state. He said defense projects would be given right-of-way over all others.

Roosevelt
Spends Day
Off The Coast

Boston. —Satisfied that "we are really getting into our stride" in titanic efforts to strengthen America's defenses, President Roosevelt took a day off from his tour of New England defenses Sunday and looted along the Massachusetts Coast on his yacht Pontomac.

The yacht anchored for several hours at Cleveland's Ledge in Buzzards Bay, where bass, tautog, flounder and scup are running. Observers on shore thought they saw members of the Presidential party trying their luck with rod and line.

The Potomac went through the Cape Cod Canal Sunday morning, picked up John and Ann Clark Roosevelt, the President's son and daughter-in-law, and moved on to Cleveland's Ledge.

The car belonged to Mrs. Joan Lowry, nurse, Memphis and contained several thousand dollars worth of government bonds in a tin box in the trunk of the car.

The car was returned to Memphis Saturday and no trace of the thief has been found.

In answer to the question "Why eateth your Master with publican and sinner?"—when Jesus heard that he said unto them, "They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick..." for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." Luke 19:10—"For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Come and enjoy the fine congregational singing. Everybody is invited to hear Evangelist Colley in the remaining services. COME!

Windsors Carry Pink Sheets And Eat Very Little Food On Voyage

New York — The Duke and Duchess of Windsor brought along two sets of pink sheets for their state-room on their voyage from Lisbon to Bermuda, staff member of the American export liner Excalibur reported on arrival today.

As soon as they got on the boat, the sheets were placed on the twin beds in the tiny cabin of their suite—a room measuring only 9 by 16 feet, said Steward Aurelio Gonzales, who served the titled couple.

The Windsors ignored two adjoining bedrooms and spent much of their time in the little main room, which reporters found was almost a glorified bathroom, with shower and wash basin.

The Windsors ate "not to nothing," the stewards said, having only toast and tea for breakfast, and, for dinner one night, only one sausage and a baked potato apiece. The Duke limited himself to one

Berlin. —Destruction of eighty-nine British warplanes and crippling damage to the fortified British naval base at Portland by massive waves of Nazi air raiders striking with terrific force on England's Channel coast were reported officially Sunday night.

Still awaiting complete information on the day-long series of battles, German sources said Nazi successes were mounting "from minute to minute."

Reported 73 Planes Downed
Severest and apparently longest of the air fights was over the precipitous shoreline at Portland, where the German High Command said, seventy-three British pursuit planes were shot down.

Quoting eye-witnesses, D. N. B., official German news agency, described Portland as heavily shattered by the Nazi bombers. They were said to have destroyed almost every ship in the harbor.

Walls of wharves were said to have caved in, some warehouses to have collapsed and others to have burned under the German bombardment.

Reconnaissance fliers who scouted the scene, the agency said, reported oil store and harbor works in flames, huge bomb craters scooped out by explosive bombs, loading piers smashed, ships burning in the harbor and other vessels sunk.

Fight for Air Supremacy
Besides one of the greatest air battles of the war over the whole coastal area from Portland, on the west, to Dover, on the east, D. N. B. said numerous side fights also developed at Nazi bombers, fighters and destroyer planes lashed out for air supremacy over the English Channel.

At one time, the German wireless broadcast that British planes were falling "like shot birds out of the sky" as radio and D. N. B. bulletins, High Command communications and information from German military sources gave a running account of the mass aerial assault.

The High Command admitted that seventeen German planes had not returned home.

The British Say:
London. —Four hundred Swastika-marked raiders "battered at 300 miles of England's south and east coasts in all-day attacks Sunday which centered upon the big naval base at Portland. The base was attacked by a single wave of 200 bombers and fighters.

The British reported at least sixty German planes shot down—five of them in thunderous anti-aircraft barrages and acknowledged the loss of twenty-six defense

TOLBERT SAWYER

Tolbert Sawyer, accompanied by Charlie Miller, flying instructor, left Mayfield airport this morning at 5:30 o'clock for a flying trip to Melbourne, Florida, getting an air-view of Muscle Shoals and the coast. Tolbert will return to Fulton by bus.

Scotch highball a day, which he mixed himself.

He always called the Duchess "dear," and she signed her name on the ship's records and for autograph hunters as "Wally Windsor."

The Duke was considerably irritated, crew members said, when British authorities in Bermuda seized 132 bags of American mail on the ship for inspection, but did not make any formal protest.

The Excalibur brought 150 passengers—only 33 of them American citizens.

Among the other passengers were Anthony J. Deane-Biddle, Jr., United States ambassador to Poland; William Phillips, ambassador to Italy; and George Gordon, minister to The Netherlands. All three replied "no comment" to questions about conditions abroad.

THE WAR OF NERVES.

Adolf Hitler is a past master at conducting a so called war of nerves. He proved that in the months prior to the opening of the present war. Day after day and month after month he harried the nerves of France and England in first one way and then another. Threat succeeded threat, demonstrations of German might were common, big talk was hurled about with reckless abandon. He won the battle of Munich by his war of nerves and compelled England to back down like a third rate power. Many people, along with Premier Chamberlain, believed that the war threat might subside at that time.

But, having won his war of nerves, Hitler thirsted for more power and finally went so far that France and England could not accept his action and so went to war. Another war of nerves ensued, finally to be broken when Hitler really launched his thunderbolt on the Low Countries and then on France. Now come another period of the war of nerves. For weeks England has been waiting with whatever calm possible for the blow that must come before Hitler can cash in his chips. For, no matter what victories he has won, no matter how powerful Germany may be, no victory can be complete until England has been conquered. Today England is an armed fortress, defended by every arm of service that the English have, and Hitler's armies, poised across the Channel, must strike against this fortress. Thus far the way has been easy for Germany. The smaller countries could put up no strong opposition and France was found to be rotten at the core and lacking in the essential air strength. Likewise there was no agreement between England and France which insured unity of operations. Now Hitler faces his greatest gamble.

There appears to be a solid determination on the part of the English to see the thing through. There has been no sign of weakening, although for weeks German bombers have raked England from end to end. Terrible losses must have been inflicted, although the British war of office always minimizes those losses. Stoically the British send out squadrons of bombers to attack Germany and German held points in conquered lands. Germany minimizes those losses, but it is certain that both sides are doing far more damage than is ever publicly admitted. In the meantime Hitler threatens terrible things when his invasion is really started. Terrible new weapons are talked of, and it is openly said that British cities will be totally destroyed in this great attack.

Truly, it is a war of nerves. It must be a terrible thing for a closely populated island like England to wait and dread for the dreadful things which are to come. It must be a terrible feeling to scan the skies day after day and night after night for the fleets of enemy bombers coming over for their daily attack. How a people can stand it is one of those mysteries of humanity. In the Spanish war, where many of these new machines of war were given a dress rehearsal, it is said that Madrid, one of the great cities of the world, was under air bombardment for more than two years. Yet normal life was never completely stopped. Picture shows continued all the time and people attended those shows regularly. An intensified air raid might stop the show and send the people scurrying for shelter, but later it would be resumed and finished. The limits of what a human being can stand have never yet been discovered. The beginning of dreadful things brings fear, but when this is continued day after day people grow accustomed to those things and go about their daily tasks in a more or less normal manner.

INDIA APPARENTLY OFFERED STATUS OF SCOTLAND IN BRITISH EMPIRE

Apparently Great Britain is offering India Scotland's, rather than Dominion, status.

Should India accept the proposal English universities—British devotion to freedom—not merely Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi, called Mahatma—not this war—would be the genesis of Indian liberty.

India's independence would be fruit of the theory of Empire for which John Milton and William Pitt, among others, stood.

It would be due, in the last analysis, to education encouraged by Great Britain; to freedom of speech, fundamental in Britain's conception of government.

Said John Milton in behalf of freedom of speech: "Methinks, I see her (England) as an eagle mewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full midday beam."

"Should ye suppress this flowery crop of knowledge... set an oligarchy over it to bring famine upon our minds again, when we shall know nothing but what is measured to us by their bushel?... Believe it, Lords and Commons... If it be desired to know the cause of all this free writing and speaking... liberty is the nature of all great wits."

That liberty, for which Pitt, a century later, risked the Tower of London, fighting for freedom in the American colonies, against the opposition of the King and his Tory yes men, gave Indian leaders their opportunity to urge independence: gave India Gandhi, a graduate of London University, a newspaper editor.

The British formula is the reverse of that of Hitler, who personally has prescribed, in his Nazi Empire, inferior education for all but the ruling class, illiteracy for the masses.—Louisville Times.

AERIAL WARFARE OVER CHANNEL

Amid the conflicting reports of Thursday's air battle over the English Channel one fact stands out. The encounter was the most spectacular aerial engagement in history up to the present. Nazi strategy also may be seen in the amazing struggle. The increasing aerial warfare has for its objective the destruction of British coastal shipping and takes the place of the attempted invasion of the British Isles. Increasing attacks on such shipping have been made since July 26.

In succeeding raids "some 400" Nazi bombers and fighter planes swooped out of the sky to attack convoys in the Channel. Only half this number had been engaged in previous forays. They came in waves and dropped their explosive missiles but they were given a warm reception.

According to official British figures—German reports are notoriously one-sided—60 of the raiders were destroyed and "many others damaged." If one out of ten soldiers are killed in a long battle, military men consider the engagement as a serious reverse, and the toll of German planes, according to these figures, was one in seven. Germany's air attackers were more than decimated and even a Hitler cannot stand such losses for long.

With all the Channel ports in France and Belgium in the hands of Germany, Channel shipping has been a hazardous undertaking since the collapse of French resistance. It has continued, however, to transport supplies from port to port in small vessels under convoy. It is not ocean-going traffic but transportation to relieve railroads and trucking facilities. It might be dispensed with but that would increase the burden on other services.

Germany, however, has marked it for destruction. Hitler has utilized this second week in August, the season of high tides, of fog and a new moon, not for the expected invasion but for an intensification of the air attacks on Channel shipping and with highly doubtful results.—Courier-Journal.

The Air Ministry announced that the fight was the second in four days over the English Channel, in which 400 planes have been hurled against Britain's defenses and in which sixty Nazi aircraft have been downed.

Raiders Smash Inland
The other 400-plane raid was aimed at Southeastern England last Thursday.

Portland, mighty island naval base just off the south coast from Weymouth, bore the brunt of the attack. But other large flights of raiders smashed at shipping along miles of the channel, and pierced inland bombing towns with an undisclosed toll.

A British communique said "minor damage was caused to two of His Majesty's ships by splinters" during the attack on Portland, and "bombs falling on the shore caused some damage to naval buildings, including a hospital."

Attacks Come in Flights
The communique said "there were a number of casualties but few of these were serious."

Private British sources estimated the attackers were even more numerous than last Thursday, when 400 Nazi bombers and fighters roared against England. That day the British claimed their record bag of the war—sixty planes.

Tigers Wallop Union City In Two Games Here Sunday Afternoon

Before a big Sunday afternoon crowd the Tigers yesterday walloped the Union City Greyhounds in both ends of a double-header, the scores being 12 to 6 and 7 to 0. The double victory threw the teams into virtual tie for sixth place, and tonight the two teams tangle in Union City for the third and last game of the series. Tomorrow Paducah plays a double header at Fairfield, the afternoon game being a replay of the protested game played here some time ago.

Sanford Wins First
Lefty Sanford did the honors for the Tigers in the first game, which soon settled into a rout. The Tigers grabbed three runs in the first inning and followed with five in the second against Gray, and Sanford allowed only four hits for the first five innings. In the sixth he appeared to coast a trifle and the Hounds hit him lustily for four runs. In the ninth he also let down and again the Hounds combed him for a pair of runs. Altogether he permitted ten hits, most of these coming in the late innings.

Ray, an outfielder, finally relieved Gray and did a good job of pitching, allowing only one run in four innings. The Hounds were badly crippled for the game, with catcher and Manager Martin out with a bad hand, and with two pitchers playing in the outfield. However, Leland Walker did a sweet job in left for the Hounds, with seven putouts in the first game and six in the seven inning night cap.

Yeager Throws Three-Hitter
In the seven inning game Lloyd Yeager was almost unhittable and the Hounds had few scoring opportunities. The tall left hander allowed only three hits, and was never in any real danger. Spohn, Hound right hander, gave up only six and some of these were of the scratch variety. Five errors were charged against the Hounds, and in the fourth inning the entire team threw the ball around so wildly that five runs were scored on only two hits. The Tigers began a bunting game which paid dividends, and the Hounds appeared unable to field any of the bunts.

3 LOUISVILLE AVIATION ENTHUSIASTS KILLED WHEN PLANE CRASHES

Louisville, Ky. —Three youthful Louisville aviation enthusiasts were killed today when a light cabin monoplane crashed near a golf course.

The dead were Fred H. Strobel, Jr., 19, who was piloting the plane; Chester Lee Schweitzer, 21, and Leonard Miller, 19.

Strobel, son of the controller of the Liberty National Bank, died en route to a hospital in a police cruising car. His two companions were dead when taken from the wreckage of the plane. All suffered broken necks.

The plane plummeted from a low altitude into a bank near Ashbottom road and Johnson lane, about half a mile from the L. & N. golf course.

Police said young Strobel, who held a student pilot's license hired the plane at Bowman field and picked up Schweitzer and Miller at the golf course.

Two men working nearby said the plane circled low, apparently seeking a spot to land, when it suddenly plunged to the ground.

"CLEAR SAILING"

In the old days the ancient captain realized the danger that lay outside the true course; so he kept to the deep waters for clear sailing.

This month we launch out on our 33rd. year in milling here in Fulton. We have endeavored to keep to the "true course" of Honesty, Friendly Service and Fair Dealings... and as a result we have enjoyed comparatively "Clear Sailing" during the past 32 years.

Again, let us insist that you stick to Browder's Flour... There's always clear sailing ahead.
