CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE STARTS NEXT WEEK

The 30th annual Christmas Seal Sale was opened in Fulton immediately after Thanksgiving, but the local committee will start a concerted drive next week. Bortie Pigou, chairman, stated today. Business and residential districts will be solicited.

More than 3½ million men, women, and children have died of tuberculosis in the United States during the last thirty years. An additional 2½ million would have died during that time if the mortality rate of thirty years ago had continued to prevail. Today tuberculosis is responsible for the death of one individual every eight minutes. Thirty years ago the death rate was at the rate of one every three and one-half minutes. Considerably more than half of all the deaths from tuberculosis occur during the important productive years of life—between 15 and 45.

The tuberculosis death rate of girls and young women between the ages of 15 and 25 is one and one-half times that of boys and young men of the same ages. One out of every six deaths occurring among girls and young women between the ages of 15 and 30 is caused by tuberculosis. Thirty years ago tuberculosis was responsible for 12 out of every hundred deaths occurring in the United States. Today it is responsible for five out of every hundred deaths. Tuberculosis is responsible for the death of about 4,000 children under 15 years of age in the United States each year. The tuberculosis mortality rate is now approximately 54 per 100,000 of the population, in the early 1900's it was close to 200.

Tuberculosis is still the first cause of death during the age period from 15 to 45, although it has been reduced to seventh in importance as a cause of death in the entire population.

The campaign against tuberculosis paid a dividend of 5 percent in lives saved in 1934 when the death rate was forced down from 59.5 per 100,000 of the population to a new minimum of 56.6. Tuberculosis now ranks seventh in importance as a cause of death. It has been forced gradually into this position since 1912 up to which time it had been the first cause of death. There are estimated to be more than 500,000 active cases of tuberculosis in the United States. Although this is the thirtieth annual sale of Christmas Seals, collectors must have 24 designs for a complete set, as there were two designs in 1907 and four in 1913. 1936 is the thirtieth year in which Christmas Seals have been sold in this country. The first Christmas Seal sale was held in Denmark in 1904, the result of an inspiration of Einar Holboell, a postal clerk. Miss Emily P. Bissell conducted the first Christmas Seal sale in the United States at Wilmington, Delaware, in 1907.

Dr. Robert Koch, a German physician, announced the discovery of the germ which causes tuberculosis (the tubercle bacillus) in 1882.

Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen announced his discovery of the X-rays forty years ago, January 23, 1896. Only one of the seven leading causes of death in the United States showed a decline in 1934 from 1933. It was tuberculosis, the disease that Christmas Seals are helping to control.

BROWDER AND BUILDING & LOAN ARE PRAISED

Joe Browder, Fulton miller and civic worker, and the Fulton Building & Loan Association were praised in a talk by Joe Davis before the regular luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club this week. Mr. Davis built his talk around the subject of friendship, stating that Mr. Browder was one of Fulton's outstanding friends, always ready and willing to co-operate in any civic movement.

Fulton Building & Loan Association was described as a valuable institution to the city, and as worthy of the support of citizens seeking sound investment.

The inter-city Rotary meeting at Union City was discussed and plans made for local Rotarians to attend.

FEED HENS MILK, AID PRODUCTION

Now is the time to feed your chickens some form of milk; either skim-milk or butter-milk. Cold weather has set in and your hens and pullets are beginning to lay. This constitutes a two-fold reason for the vitality of your chickens. One, the utilization of carbohydrates and body fat for the production of heat to keep themselves warm; and two, the massing of a great quantity of proteins and minerals for the manufacture of eggs.

Skim-milk supplies both a large amount of readily digestible protein and a fair amount of mineral matter, and therefore, will increase egg production. It also increases the vigor and vitality of your birds, increases the hatchability of their eggs and, above all, increases the resistance of your chickens to disease and cold.

You can insure yourself more and better eggs, fatter and healthier hens, and a lower flock mortality by adding this cheap, available food to your feeding program.

Keep all the skim-milk or butter-milk your birds will drink before them all the time.

FULTON SEEKS NEW FACTORY INTERESTS

Intensive efforts are being made by civic leaders here to obtain new factory interests for Fulton, and in recent weeks several contacts have been made with industries seeking a factory unit for the building already available here. During the regular meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last month industrial units for Fulton were discussed.

At that time one industry in particular was favoring Fulton as a location, provided a building was available. No building of the type needed being available, steps were taken to investigate company-proposed factory. Representatives of that concern visited Fulton, but their proposal was not satisfactory at this time.

Other contacts are being made, and it is hoped that something will be worked out, in order that employment may be provided for families unemployed and bring additional payrolls to the city.

SMITH TALKS ON WAR BEFORE LIONS CLUB

During the regular luncheon session of the Lions Club last Friday, Attorney H. T. Smith talked upon the cost of war. Concisely and pointedly he showed the cost of war to this nation and other nations in the past, but expressed the opinion that this country would never again engage in a foreign conflict unless the need was obvious. He pointed out that the cost of war is not only in terms of money, but in terms of human life and suffering. He stated that the cost of war is often more than the cost of peace, and that the cost of war is often more than the cost of peace, and that the cost of war is often more than the cost of peace.

Burgess Walston, manager of the Orpheum Theatre, told the club that his theater would sponsor a free show some morning for the purpose of raising needs for Christmas charity work. Admission to this show will be some article of food or toy, which will be contributed for distribution among needy families.

COMMUNITY CHEST DIRECTORS IN MEETING

The Board of Directors of the Community Chest met last Friday afternoon to discuss bills payable and future work on this organization. Last year a total of $1783.10 was pledged to the Community Chest, and of this amount $406.25 remains uncollected. The board states that this organization must be continued, as the demands are more than can be met with present funds. Additional contributions are needed, and would be gladly accepted by the board. It is urged that all old pledges be paid up by December 15th.

During the Union services held last week at the First Christian church, an offering of $13.87 was collected, and this amount was turned over to the Community Chest. The management of the Orpheum Theatre has offered to sponsor a special show some morning for the purpose of raising some article of food or toy, which will be contributed for distribution among needy families. All organizations and individuals are urged to co-operate with the board in obtaining support in meeting charity needs.

TEST YOUR COWS, IMPROVE HERDS

Any improvement in farm animals must be brought about by the production of those that have proved to be breed from. Shows is very important that every farmer who is milking cows do two things.

First, Feed your cows correctly. Second, get an accurate record of the production ability of each cow.

With a number of high production bred bulls in the trade territory of Fulton every farmer should use these bulls.

The American Jersey Cattle Club has made a few suggestions regarding herd improvement as follows:

Continuous Testing—Because it is the quickest way to prove your bull through records on all his daughters. Informs you of low producers which need to be culled out and removed; Gives the transmitting ability of your cows and cow families; so that you will know which to breed from; Shows how efficiently your herd is operating under normal conditions; Centers attention on life-time production and gives complete lactation records on all your cows; Enable you to meet the demands for surplus breeding stock backed by production records; Safeguards your future as a dairyman.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Not even in the boom days was there such a surge of extra dividends, wage increases and employee bonuses as this season. Corporate industry is pouring out money to its stockholders and workers in unprecedented amounts.

A list of extra dividends and bonuses declared would take many pages to detail, but here are some outstanding items: Steel has announced a 10 percent advance in wages, which will up payrolls $70,000,000 in 1937. General Motors will pay its workers a Christmas bonus of $10,000,000, in addition to other benefits. Chrysler has voted an extra dividend of $5.50 per share. Eastman Kodak declared a 75-cent extra, and Jewel Tea Company $2.00 Standard Oil of New Jersey will pay a $4,500,000 bonus to workers, and Sears, Roebuck one of $1,500,000.

Upshot of this is that dividends of various big industries will be as large as in pre-depression days—while wages, in some cases, will be higher. Steel's new wage rate is the highest in its history. General Motors is 10 percent above the 1929 average. Business Week says that next year industry's labor costs will possibly be the highest in all U. S. industrial history.

What caused this amazing change? Obvious answer is better times—and there is no question but what industry in general has pulled out of depression, has entered a period of recovery.

But that isn't the entire answer to why business is figuratively breaking its neck in an effort to get as many dollars as possible into the hands of stockholders and workers before 1937 dawns. Big and potent influence is the new tax bill on undistributed corporation profits, passed by the last Congress.

This tax bill levies taxes of unprecedented severity on such profits—taxes ranging up to 27 percent. But when the profits are distributed in either wages, bonuses or dividends, the tax is avoided. And that is the major reason why business is following its present lavish generous course. According to the New York Journal of Commerce, distributions to stockholders ordered for the last three months of this year directly traceable to the tax law, total at least $500,000,000.

Economists are highly dubious of the ultimate results of the law, fear it will prevent industry from building up surpluses that are essential if future depressions are to be survived. In the meantime, however, the tax is helping cause a veritable dividend and wage boom.

WIDE-AWAKE INDEPENDENTS PROGRESS

Competition from corporate chain store systems isn't discouraging the progressive independent merchant. This is the gist of some figures from Poor's Industry and Investment Surveys, dealing with the amazing growth of "voluntary" chain systems, whereby a central organization is created to buy on a big scale for member stores and so reduce middleman, shipping and other overhead and in-between costs.

According to this authority, there were 375 such voluntary chains with 54,797 stores in 1929. In 1934, there were 775 voluntary chains with 103,334 stores.

Wide-awake independents, instead of bemoaning the competition of corporate chain systems, are competing with corporate chains on a basis of equality and consumer benefits.

AMERICAN FLAG FLIES DAY AND NIGHT THERE

Except the Capitol in Washington, the only place in the United States over which the American flag is allowed by law to fly at night in times of peace is the grave of Francis Scott Key in Maryland. The purpose is to make true always the line in his song, "The Star-Spangled Banner, 'Gave proof through the night that our flag was still there.'"

The most expensive luxury of the present era is keeping up with the neighbors.

Not everybody who ought to be thankful returned thanks on Thanksgiving day.

Take pride in your character and other people will have confidence in you—maybe.

There is little harm in a good argument provided nobody takes the discussion too seriously.

Many a man keeps out of debt all his life only to have his relatives go into debt to bury him.

There will be amazing advertising in the next few years but it won't do the man any good who doesn't believe in advertising.

There are any number of experts who can explain, in great detail, what caused the people to vote like they did.

THANKFUL

We have just passed through another season which is known as Thanksgiving.

But the time for thanks is with us yet. For we should be thankful every day for the things we have, and for the grace of God.

Today we are enjoying an improved prosperity. During those lean years of the depression, many passed down through the valley, some never reaching higher levels again. Yet, while conscious of many shortcomings in the field of economics, they know that this year is a tremendous gain when compared to a few years ago.

Thanksgiving had its origin in the early history of our country, and has been observed as an occasion for devout individuals to return grateful thanks to a benign Providence for material blessings.

But from day to day, let us remember to pause to give thanks to the divine Giver of all things.

"GENUINE" GHOST IN OLD TRADITION AT LIBERTY HALL

House Intended As State Shrine Once Haunted By "Gray Lady"

Liberty Hall, the 140-year-old Frankfort mansion which is to be made a public shrine with funds now being raised, has among its treasures a "genuine" ghost—"The Gray Lady." Or at least it did have a ghost at one time.

So far as anyone knows, the ghost has been laid. Not for twelve years has it been seen. But no fewer than six persons declared it authentic, and the story of the apparition forms a part of the traditions surrounding the beautiful old house.

"The family never believed in the supernatural, but we never doubted that something had been seen," says John M. Scott, owner of the house and great-grandson of John Brown, the builder.

"My first experience with the 'ghost' was as a boy of about 12. Coming home from school in the East, my sister was given the bedroom above what was known as the Blue Room. The first night, after she had retired, we heard her scream. We all rushed to her room.

"She wasn't frightened. Rather, she was amused. 'I was lying here awake,' she said, 'when a woman in a gray veil came into the room and leaned over my bed. I put my hand out and it passed through her. She disappeared.'

"On the two following nights my sister again saw the apparition, with the result that she moved out of the room. As I have said, none of us believed it was a ghost. We thought there was some natural explanation—but we didn't know the explanation.

"The story was that Mrs. Varick, an aunt of John Brown, had died in the room and that her spirit had appeared at intervals. As I have said, none of us ever believed in ghosts. Some day there doubtless will be an explanation for the apparition."

The Liberty Hall Association has until December 1 to raise funds for the purchase of the house and its establishment as a public shrine. Its preservation will give Kentucky a public possession comparable in interest and beauty to My Old Kentucky Home.

HOG-KILLING TIME

It is hog-killing time again in the country, and those of us who have lived on a farm and enjoyed the festivities incident to the annual "butchering" can picture the busy scenes now being enacted.

Fresh sausage, seasoned to individual taste with sage, pepper, and salt is one of the most appetizing and immediate dividends of the annual hog-killing. Then there is the certainty of delicious tenderloin fried in strips and baked; spare-ribs rich and juicy, and perhaps some of the old time meat pies.

Last, but by no means least appetizing, there is the possibility of some fresh crackling pone after the lard is rendered and in homes where the art of pone-making has been lost.

Hog-killing time is one of the real American institutions which has come down from colonial days, and we hope the packing houses will not succeed in robbing this nation entirely of a custom which has much to commend its perpetuation for at least a few more generations.—(Messenger)

EARNED "SOCIAL SECURITY"

It would seem that "social security" is destined to be a political issue for a long time to come. With in the parties there is considerable internal dissension as to what is the proper program to pursue.

In the meantime, millions of American citizens are quietly and effectively achieving social security for themselves without benefit of government.

They are setting up trust funds and savings accounts. They are buying life insurance in unprecedented amounts—and more and more of the insurance sold is of the annuity type which provides old-age income as well as protection for dependents.

This is not an argument against government social security, which is believed to be a compelling need of the time. It is, however, a tribute to that old type of American independence which guards against the future through individual thrift, foresight and good hard work.

Miss Grace Allen Brady will attend an A. T. O. fraternity party in Jackson Friday night.

HUNTERS OPENED SEASON NOV. 26

Duck and bird hunters were numerous last Thursday, November 26, as the season opened cold and snowy. Although ducks were reported plentiful at Reelfoot Lake, hunters were so numerous that the ducks were kept stirred up, so that only the most skillful were able to bag any of the winged fowls. Many hunters were prepared for several days of hunting.

Here are some interesting rules that every hunter should observe, says William H. Harrison of Virginia.

1. Never enter an automobile, boat, train, or bus with a loaded gun.
2. Never point a gun at any person even in jest.
3. Never hunt with anyone you know to be careless.
4. Never load your gun until you are actually ready for business.
5. Never consider a rustle of a bush to be a sure indication of game. Often a human being may be passing along.
6. Never shoot too hastily. By doing so many an over-anxious hunter has killed his best friend or best dog instead of the game.
7. Never drag your gun under a fence with the muzzle pointed toward you. Put it through the fence, muzzle first, and lay it flat on the ground before you climb through or over the fence.
8. Never rest on the muzzle of your gun or place it on the toe of your shoe.
9. Never let the muzzle touch the ground; dirt or mud in the end of the barrel makes a firearm unsafe to use; you may need a new barrel.
10. Never carry your gun cocked or ready to shoot, especially if you are with anyone else.

Jimmy D. Stephenson says he can't feel those Utah hermits who have never seen a radio or a car have missed much in that.

As Gip McDade sees it, some fellows are like a cigar. You can't tell how bad they are until they're lit.

CHRISTMAS COOKIES

See Rice
Christmas wouldn't be Christmas without an interesting assortment of cookies on hand to pack in attractive boxes as gifts, offer the holiday caller or simply indulge the family sweet tooth. In some households Christmas cookie-making is a rite requiring much preparation and labor, but few of us are willing to give much time to elaboration when there are so many excellent recipes available for quickly made refrigerator and drop cookies. These are just as well liked as types involving laborious processes and many variations of a good basic recipe are possible.

These recipes have been tried and found true by many excellent cook-makers. They are recommended for Christmas giving and eating as well as all other occasions when extra nice cookies are desired.

Fulton, Ky.

for Cooperatives to select a local director to fill the unexpired portion of a three-year term ending on December 31, 1938.

The new director is Assistant General Manager and Treasurer of the Indiana Farm Bureau Cooperative Association and also General Manager of the Indiana Statewide Rural Electric Membership Corporation.
He owns and supervises the operation of a 60 acre grain and livestock farm. Prior to engaging in farm bureau work, Mr. Briggs was for 6 years a member of the Extension staff of Purdue University. As director of the Federal Land Bank, Briggs will also serve ex-officio as a director of the Louisville Bank for Cooperatives, the Production Credit Corporation of Louisville and the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Louisville.

As provided by the Farm Credit
Act of 1933, the board of directors of the land bank is made up of seven members, three of whom are known as local directors and are elected by borrowers, and the remaining number appointed by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration. The Louisville district includes Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee. The hundred or more farmers' cooperative associations which elected Briggs from a list of seven nominees have loans outstanding from the Louisville Bank for Cooperatives for more than $1-500,000.

DISCUSSES BUYING OF WINTER WOOLENS

When buying woolens, it is important to know the meaning of various terms used on labels, says Miss Verna Latzke, specialist in clothing for the home economics department of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

If the word wool is used at all,
there must be at least 6 percent of wool present, while part wool indicates that from 5 to 25 percent of the material is woolen, with 5 percent as the minimum. More than 25 percent should be labeled with the minimum guaranteed to be present. Above 98 percent is listed all wool. If the blanket is not labeled, ask the sales person to give this information and include it in written form on the sales check, Miss Latz-ke advises.

Often material is called wool without saying whether virgin or reworked wool. Reworked wool may make satisfactory clothing or blankets if used right; that is, good grades of reworked wool combined with the right kinds of new wool fibers produce pleasing fabrics at reduced cost. If virgin wool is desired, it should be specifically requested.
The weight may be taken to indicate the quality. For a cotton and wool mixture the tensile strength should be known.

In judging blankets, the feel is revealing; all blankets are warm, wally and springy; cotton is heavier, very soft, dead and lifeless. Good nap is heavier and thicker than is a poorer quality. The blanket should have a firm, even pull with the varns not separating or coming apart.

Blankets may be bought in 12 sizes with 90 inches the desirable length, as the strain of regularly pulling up a blanket that is too short often breaks the thread.

A small advertisement in our columns often return large dividends

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

End of the Treaty
Millions for New Farms
Too Many Apologies
The Mirror Monocle

Chancellor Hitler has demolished the remaining fragments of the Versailles treaty, notifying the great powers that they may no longer control, as they have done since 1918, the principal rivers of Germany.

The Rhine, Elbe, Oder and Danube rivers, within German territory, now return to German control and France is content to ask other powers to join a protest. More protests amount to little in European diplomacy, as the world learned from the Ethiopian war.

That settles, finally, the Versailles treaty, a foolish effort to enslave a nation that made the emergence of this, or some other, Hitler inevitable.

Mr. Tugwell seeks an appropriation of five hundred million dollars to provide poverty-stricken farmers, now on worthless farms, with other land that will support them; also barns, houses, out-buildings. He thinks $50,000,000 a year for ten years would do the work, and plans to vacate 9,000,000 "worthless acres."

Anything that will diminish human misery is desirable, even though incompetency may be in part responsible for the trouble. In England, the government, guided by experts, is making excellent pasture lands of soil that was worthless. Our government might investigate that process.

General Markham, chief army engineer, advises putting an air base in the harbor of our Midway island, far away in the Pacific ocean. The War Department says, apologetically, that this would be a commercial development, although it might be useful for defense.

Why an apology? Nobody in Europe, Asia or Africa apologizes to us for building an air base, or asks our opinion about it.

The War department says there is no treaty obligation forbidding such an air base. If there were, what of it? Treaties can be cancelled, and should be when they are foolish or unjust—for further details, ask Hitler.

Germans are said to be wearing a new eyeglass called a "spy monocle." Arranged to look like the ordinary single eyeglass, the "spy monocle" is arranged with a mirror, permitting the wearer to look behind him and see if there is anybody listening to his conversation. German police eagerly discourage any one who suggests that the Nazi government is not perfect.

The opening of the Bay bridge, connecting San Francisco and Oakland, California, is important not only to California and the two united cities, but to the whole country.

This magnificent bridge, eliminating ferries on the bay that separates San Francisco and Oakland, is a magnificent accomplishment of engineering and public spirit.

Mr. Green's American Federation of Labor decides on a "fight to a showdown" with Mr. Lewis' "Committee for Industrial Organization," which wants to unionize all the 30,000,000 workers not yet organized, and seems to include taking over Mr. Green and his federation also.

Next on the program appears to be a big labor fight: Mr. Green is thoughtful, wise; Mr. Lewis is forceful, determined. The outcome cannot be predicted. The outside citizen will pray that there may not be too much interference with returning prosperity.

A greatly increased demand for tools shows that more men are getting jobs, and announcements of new wage increases, big and little, are many. Twenty-three more firms have announced better wages for 28,000 more workers.

An average increase of $130 a year, less than 50 cents a day, means one hundred and thirty million more dollars that 1,000,000 workers will have to spend, in a year. That is not unimportant.

England intends next time to devote her energy and strength to protecting herself.

Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, says England has no "commitments" like those of 1914, that would compel her to send troops to the continent if war should start. She will do as she pleases, which means that she will probably stay at home, busy with enemy airplanes, perhaps helping to finance friends on the continent, as she did in the Napoleonic wars, as she did before and since.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—There is an "era of good feeling" going the rounds that is quite different than anything we have had since early in 1929. It is being promoted with a great deal of enthusiasm and present results as well as indications justify the promotion work that is going on in the New Deal press agent circles. This era of good feeling is quite an interesting thing from another angle, namely, politics. It is being used by the politicians again to establish President Roosevelt in the same situation as he found himself at the beginning of his first term in the White House. I am afraid he is being built up again as a superman and, in politics, a superman or his position is hard to maintain in the public mind.

Business also is indulging in this era of good feeling. Business always puts its best foot forward, just as lovers do. It wants to develop a spirit of good will on the part of the public and it wants to show its financial backers how things are coming along all hunky-dory. There is nothing wrong in its attitude. It is perfectly logical and human—and it is very interesting to see this wave of healthy feeling grow.

The important, as well as the interesting, thing about this era of good feeling is that to the expert students it shows a gradual, if not conclusive, decline in depression conditions. It proves that things are on the up grade—not that they are at the top yet, but that a momentum is being established which may carry the economic recovery to the top if the federal government settles down and treats business with fairness.

As I said above, New Deal press agents are promoting this business recovery for all that it is worth. Naturally, they are attributing it to the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt as the basic factor in this upward surge of business. They are capitalizing it to the fullest because by so capitalizing it, the political party in power gets its due share of credit. There is no doubt that they will continue on this course because everyone likes to read or hear about improved business conditions, restoration of dividend payments, increasing volume of traffic, any and all things that show the nation is slowly but surely getting back on its economic feet.

While the New Dealers are shouting from the housetops how President Roosevelt has accomplished all of these things, there comes a discordant note from business itself. Business leaders, just like politicians, want credit for whatever is accomplished, whether they are responsible or someone else.

Business is seeking to show that it is pulling itself together, opening new factories, raising wages, in spite of New Deal policies with the handicaps that some of those policies include. So, business is seeking to counterbalance the politicians and the politicians, speaking through New Deal press statements, are trying to fortify their own position as saviors of the country. Neither one is correct. Without doing too much debunking, I believe it ought to be said that President Roosevelt and his associates have executed some government policies that have been helpful to the business structure. With equal frankness, it ought to be said that business leaders have taken the bull by the horns and have proceeded to help materially in putting commerce and industry back on the right track again. Neither one ought to take too much credit. Some credit is due each but neither one nor both together is entitled to claim all of the credit for the recovery of business that is now underway.

The answer to the upward swing of business lies chiefly in the fact that the depression has worn itself out. It would have worn itself out just the same whether the administration was New Deal or Republican. It would have accomplished just as much in the way of expanded buying power and increased production whether Mr. Roosevelt was re-elected or whether he had been defeated and Governor Landon of Kansas had been elected at the end of the recent national campaign. I am reminded by this discussion of a remark that the late Eugene Black made while he was governor of the Federal Reserve board. On that occasion I asked him whether there were signs of the end of the depression. His reply was, "not yet." He added, however, that the depression would destroy itself as every other depression in history had done and that when this point of exhaustion had been reached, commerce and industry would take an upward swing. Then, he added with reference to some of the economic students of the administration in power: "It will wear itself out and good times will come back again—and every doggone professor and economic theorist in the world will try to claim credit for it."

So, I think it can be said without equivocation that if anybody or anything is entitled to credit for the indicated recovery movement, we had better be fair and admit it was a combination of circumstances, not the least of which was the natural law of supply and demand. It seems utterly silly to me for any individuals or groups of individuals to attempt to corral all of the praise.

Those who have access to the market pages of the great metropolitan daily newspapers

Wage increases must have been impressed by the rapid fire announcements coming from big industrial corporations of wage increases, bonuses for employees and reel cutting in the form of dividends for the shareholders. They must have been impressed, likewise, with the sharp rise in security prices that obviously has reflected the expanded business and increased earnings.

A prosperous nation may not always be a happy one but there is a certain psychology about a prosperous nation that makes it carefree. It is a psychology that makes the average man and woman forget to a large extent about the recent pinch of economic displacements and, as well, those same people are inclined to disregard and give no consideration to the morrow.

Let us look into those circumstances. When corporations or other forms of business have reasonable years in their particular lines, early in the winter they begin to see what the year's total will be. They can figure rather accurately what the returns will be in the last two months, say, after they have made their totals for the first ten months of the year. So, whenever they reach that stage in a reasonably successful year they can make their plans for distribution of the profits.

Now, we have a tremendously high tax rate on corporation surpluses and we have rather high tax rates on incomes of individuals. Corporations and other businesses, therefore, start figuring how to do the best they can with the earnings of the year. Some of them determine that their employees should share substantially in the profits of their labors; others want to distribute as much of these earnings as they may to their stockholders because such a showing creates a demand in the market for their shares and such a demand is influential in establishment of the corporation's credit for borrowing money if it needs to borrow from the banks.

I have merely touched on the effect of distribution of earnings among the holders of capital. It is just as important to consider the effect of distribution of these earnings on the laboring classes. Labor has been convinced under the American system for many years that it is entitled to some share of the profits from its products. Employers are taking that same view to a greater extent than anywhere else in the world. When labor gets bonuses or gets increases in its pay, there is a reaction among those workers who have sound judgment that prompts them to do the best they can on their jobs. That is to say, they become contented workers and they are less susceptible to the propaganda of radicals who seek to promote strikes and labor disturbances to further the ends of communism. That is a part of the era of good feeling as much as the added earnings of corporations or the enthusiasm of politicians over victory.

He was about to go on when a small movement on the ground attracted him; he stooped and gently put down one hand, palm cupped, and rising showed Nan a bee crawling over his fingers. "Pig!" he chided. "He's loaded up so heavily that he can't fly! Go on! Try it from here!" He waved his hand and the bee took wing, going slowly and grudgingly, but with that aid finally making a successful attempt at flight.

He stooped over again, watching another busy worker. "Pretty fair Italian," he said. "Not pure; hybrids, but they look like right good honey-makers."

"Are you, among other things, a bee expert?" Nan laughed.

"No, but once I had to live for a while with an old codger who kept 'em. That was about the best time I had when I was a kid. I got real clubby with bees. . . . liked 'em. When I got so old I can't ramble any more maybe I'll settle down and keep 'em and let 'em keep me!"

"Is that the only plan you have?" He straightened and looked at her so intently that she flushed.

"Maybe not," he said gravely. "I'll know before long."

Later they stood shoulder to shoulder, waiting for the compass to come to rest that they might be certain of precise directions, eyes of each on the swinging dial. Nan's breath was a caress for Kerry's cheek and his hands began to tremble.

A few days earlier he would have laughed at this reaction but now he simply moved without explanation and placed the compass on a boulder where it would have stability.

"That hemlock stub is due north—" "Sh!"

Young cut off her words with the low warning, making no movement.

"Wait!" he whispered. "Something coming. Hear it?"

The girl did not, at first, but after a moment of strained listening nodded her head silently.

Something was coming their way, slowly, perhaps hesitantly. Then, as a breath of breeze stirred the foliage, blowing from them to the direction from which the sounds came, that approach became more rapid.

Hoof beats and scrapings of brush and finally a queer, inquiring grunt or two.

"Oh!" Nan whispered as it came into view. "Moose calf! . . . Why . . . he's coming up to us!"

Indeed, it seemed as if the creature would turn them down. It came on, head up, ears stiff, emitting a series of low sounds, picking up its feet awkwardly with the long, gangling legs; great, dark eyes cast on those two humans.

"Why! He'll . . ." Nan caught at Kerry's elbow as the calf kept on, never slackening its pace and so close that in another stride or two they might have touched it.

But on the movement the animal swerved, half turned away, swung off to the right and stopped facing them, standing there all rigid attention and wonder.

The short fall twitched, the nostrils quivered. Young's elbow pressed Nan's hand warningly to his side. They stood motionless as the moose continued to stare at them, making those plaintive, inquiring sounds.

Kerry could feel the girl tremble and that sent a tremor through his own body.

He began to imitate the sound the calf made and on that the creature backed off a few steps, seeming frightened. But when the man did not move it resumed its own grunts, as if doing its best to bridge the barrier between species and talk.

"What the dickens are you?" he seemed to be trying to say. "Where do you come from? Why are you here?"

"I never smelled or saw anything like you two in all my born days! I'm kind of afraid of you, but I want to give you a good once-over before I hit for yonder! There's so much for a young feller like me to run across for the first time!"

For over a minute the calf stood there, using all its senses to size up that man and that woman. And then, probably as an instinctive mistrust of anything so widely at variance with all its other young experience asserted itself, began to back. The retreat at first was orderly, a slow, backward stepping. Then it turned sideways and broke into a trot, went faster. Once it stopped and cast an apprehensive glance over its shoulder and after that, dropped its ears and disappeared at a lumbering but flowing trot.

"Why! Why, of all things!" breathed Nan, withdrawing her hand from Young's arm.

The man laughed. "Never saw it before," he said. "But in the woods, if you use your eyes, you see plenty for the first time." He laughed lowly.

"His first encounter with man scent, you see. He winded us from wherever he was and curiosity made him come our way. Likely, he's never been molested in all his couple of months on earth and so he doesn't know much about fear.

"Tough, isn't it, that every species has its predator enemies and has to start learning how to defend itself by the law of claw and fang before it has a good chance to enjoy such a swell world?"

"Yes, it's tough," she replied and looked with a peculiar intimacy into his face. "There's so much to enjoy if only all of us would!"

They started on and after a time Kerry spoke bluntly the thing that her last words had left in his mind.

"The moose did me a favor. He frightened you a little and made you touch me. . . . That was a downright enjoyable experience."

"Please!"

"But you understand, don't you, that I mean that? It's not just a string of words?"

"Yes. And, because of that . . . Please!"

"Right! . . . This is the best stand of maple I've seen in this country. Look at the bird's-eye tree, there. Two good veneer logs in it."

It was late afternoon when they beached the canoe on their return.

"We've time to look at the cabin now," Nan told him, nodding toward the log structure on the high bank; and she led the way.

Beside the door was a rack of implements for use in fighting fires. The door itself was unlocked. "My father didn't like locks, in the bush," she explained. "Our men use this camp some but they always leave it open so anyone in need of shelter can get in."

The place was amply furnished, blankets on the bunk, insect nets hanging above them; cooking utensils and a goodly supply of unperishable staples on shelves above the stove.

"It's a snug camp," Nan said. "You'll be comfortable here, Kerry."

He scratched a temple thoughtfully. "D'you mind if I use my own outfit?"

"Why, no! Don't you fancy this camp?"

"Oh, it's got shingles and glass in it. I'd rather set up myself on one of those islands."

"Certainly, if you want it that way. I used to come here with my father, but now the place has been a little spoiled for me. . . . You see, Holt stayed here alone the night Father was killed and if it hadn't been for wise old Ezra he'd have been carted in to jail and held a while."

"You think a lot of Holt, don't you?" "Of course! Why shouldn't I? He's the most loyal boy in the world. He's worked his head off for me."

"Anybody would," he said. . . . and wondered why she colored quickly and looked at him almost defensively when she spoke of Holt Stuart.

Other cars were there when they drove up to headquarters. One was Ezra Adams' battered roadster and the old doctor looked up from tinkering with the motor in a way which commanded Kerry's interest.

But Nan, with a wave to Ezra, was more intent on the group about the other.

"Oh, there's Mr. Dexter, up from Chicago!" she said excitedly. "That means he's ready to close!" Her face clouded. "And day before yesterday I mailed Tod West a formal request for permission to deed that section. It's our first chance at a real sale. Oh, I hope it won't be blocked!"

"Who's sick, Ezra?" Young asked, as Nan walked rapidly on to greet the others.

"Nobody much, except this 'tarnal motor!" he said loudly. Then, with caution: "Come close, Kerry! Stick your head down here with me, like you were trying to help me tinker at something."

"The bullet that killed Cash," he whispered, "was fired from Tod West's pistol!"

For a moment Young did not reply; a savage triumph swept him, followed by a sinking sensation. Tod West, the slayer of Nan's father and, perhaps, the slayer of her hopes as well! He knew that even despite her misgivings, the girl was hoping to permit her to close the deal which this evening seemed to be in prospect. And it was such a forlorn hope.

"Well," he said, "that gives us a course to steer, Ezra!"

"What's the first move?"

"To watch him. What else can we do? If he's started using that money, he'll keep on; anyhow, that's a good bet. We've got to locate it before we tip our hand."

"But suppose he suspects and lights out?"

Kerry twisted his head doubtfully. "He won't light out so long as there's a hope left. All he has worked and schemed and killed for is in this country. A man of his age doesn't run away from it so long as there's a chance of hanging on."

"Now, I can get Jim Hinkle to trail him. He won't suspect Jim. That can be fixed up. With me out of the picture for a few days, maybe he'll feel more free to act. I'll see to it that plenty of folks know I'm to be gone for a while."

"I swear it's going to be up to you, son!" the old man said. "I get all fluttery inside, now, thinking about what might happen . . . and about what you and I've got to make happen!"

Nan Downer sat disconsolately at her desk that evening. The man Dexter and his companions had gone from the dinner-table down to the river. Soon they would return and want to talk business . . . and as yet she was not able to talk in conclusive terms.

She had an opportunity to bring to realization some of the dreams she had shared with her father, but not yet the legal right!

She had been conscious for a moment of another's presence, but did not look up at once. When she did, it was into the flushed face of Tod West.

"Oh!" she cried, and rose quickly from her chair.

"Surprised, eh?" he asked and stepped closer. "Why surprised? I got a letter from you yesterday."

Now, she caught the creek of whisky on his breath.

"Well, you want my answer now?" he taunted.

"Yes, Tod. . . . you see, I've a chance to sell two sections at a very fine figure. Under our agreement—"

"You can't sell a damn' foot of land!" he cut in. "No, Miss Nan Downer, you can't sell one damn' foot of ground!" He drove a fist into the other palm vindictively. "You had your chance once. I give you your chance a week ago. . . . But what'd you do? Tried to wham me with an oar, that's what you did!"

"You know, well's I do, where we stand. You're right up ag'in' foreclosure this minute. You can't sell an acre until you've come across with the principal payment, 'most a year overdue."

She retreated around the corner of her desk as he advanced.

"And you don't like it, eh? Don't like don't business that way! You can like and mighty to me one day, and then expect favors the next! Well, I'll show you my heart's in the right place! I'll show you a contract's a contract! I'll show you that I'll see you busted and smashed and on the road without a roof, before we—"

"Tod! Don't, Tod! Please—"

He had crowded her against the wall. Rigidity went from him and a strange sound, half-laugh, half-sob, came from deep in his throat.

"Hurt you? Hurt you, little Nan?" "God, I'm sorry for the things that've happened!" He stepped back a pace or two unsteadily. Confusion lay in his eyes. He had come to gloat, but now . . .

"I meant that, up the river the other day," he said huskily. "I meant all I said: I want you, I need you, little Nan! I'll make you a good lover. . . . I'll make you a good husband!"

The Boy Struck Hard, Struck With All His Weight Coming In.

Perhaps it was the loathing in her face, touched to life by his hoarse, unsteady voice, which stirred afresh the hell in his heart. Anyhow, he threw his arms wide, fists clenched.

"Will you have me?" he cried. "Will you have me, or 've I got to take you? Because I'll have you, just as sure as hell I will! I'm desperate and I—"

Nan had opened her lips to cry out, when a white fury flung through the doorway. Her cry was lost in that gasp of breath which burst from Tod's throat as a hand caught one of the outstretched arms, as he was spun about and Stuart's fist bashed into his lips.

The boy struck hard, struck with all his weight coming in, and when he had struck he squared for another blow.

But Tod West was not too drunk for action. He dropped his head, and fended off the falling fist. He swung forward and charged and wrapped his great arms about Holt's slender body, sweeping him from his feet, crashing with him against the door-casing, falling with him to the floor.

The lad was no match for that ponderous strength. He was overwhelmed, smothered, made helpless. He kicked and writhed, but West had one arm pinned beneath a knee, the other secured in his iron grasp and his fist raised to do its cruel work on that defenseless face. . . .

And then Nan screamed. The quality of it, the shrillness, the terror, struck through West's intent, made him hesitate. In that instant Holt freed a hand; he was over from his back to one side, upsetting West, grappling for the man's knee, throwing him off balance and floundering free.

But it would have been only a momentary advantage, that. He never could have prevailed against Tod's superior physique.

Nan's cry had brought others. Feet sounded on the steps; and before West could charge again and maim and batter, he was surrounded by a dozen people.

Two men had Holt. Another stood before West, blocking the way to the boy, should he attempt advance. But he did not. Breathing heavily, he glowered for a moment at Stuart and then, seeking out Nan's face, nodded heavily.

"All right," he said. "I said my say. And that, I guess, will be all."

He turned for the entry and none blocked his departure.

He left the steps slowly, feeling his bruised lips gingerly. Then outside the lighted office window he halted, looking within as Nan, taking Holt by the hand, drew him close to her and shut the door.

Ezra Adams, returning to Nan's after an hour in Jim Hinkle's home, came first into the excited group in the big room, was told what had happened, asked Nan's whereabouts and went, without knocking, into the office.

They stood close together, the girl holding both Holt's hands in hers, looking up into his face intently. The old physician, struck by the apparent significance of their postures, hesitated as if to withdraw.

"Come in, Ezra!" Nan said and then to Holt, with a little shake of his hands: "And so you will be careful, Holt dear?"

Stuart withdrew his hands from hers and turned, going abruptly, not looking at Adams.

When he was gone and Nan had closed the door, she swung toward the old man with tears in her eyes. He quipped his arms at her choking sob and gathered her close.

"Oh, Ezra!" she moaned. "Oh, if anything should happen to Holt!"

"I heard about what went on. Don't fear. We'll watch to see nothing does happen!"

"Tod's so savage, so brutal! And I feel such a responsibility for Holt. He's such . . . such an emotional boy! If Tod harms him, I'll feel I'm to blame and . . . Don't you see?"—beseechingly. "Oh, why must things like this come up to be faced just when . . . just when love comes, Ezra?"

Though her words had given him a sort of shock the old man downed his curiosity and the questions that they provoked, and devoted all his resources to comforting her. He stroked her hair and patted her shoulders until her emotions were under control. Then she asked him to go.

"It's my problem," she said. "I can think better alone. I'm so glad you were here to let me be female and weak for a moment!—wiping her eyes and smiling bravely."

He left her then, with a deal to think about. He carried his news to Kerry later the same evening.

"Looks like Stuart's finally got what he seems to want most," he said, and did not notice that his companion appeared to stop even his breathing to listen.

"She's awful upset because she's afraid something'll happen to him. And she's in love, too, which doesn't make for calm thinking. . . ."

"To be sure, I promised we'd look after Stuart, but—with a shrug—"I wouldn't bet that that can be done."

"Tod'll have him on his list now, and Tod's got a long memory when he's been angered. Course, he was drunk."

Young did not hear this last. He was concerned at the moment only to tell, Dismay filled him as he realized the emotion that had been fermenting in his heart for days, which had almost crystallized into recognizable thought this afternoon; that finally his heart had taken root! He was in love to his ears with Nan Downer and yet here was old Ezra, bringing word of her love for another. His heart had discovered a home, only to find it already occupied.

He shut his teeth and stirred himself to follow the doctor's grave talk.

"He was drunk," Ezra repeated. "And he may forget when he sobers up; may forget enough of it to keep his vengeance away from Holt; then again, his being drunk when it happened may make his grudge only that much worse."

West was sober enough when an hour later he stood in the shadow of Bluejay's rattlerap flivver not far from Mel Knight's store at the Landing and talked rapidly, jabbing a finger now and again against the breed's chest.

Bluejay was in from the blueberry camp he had established to the northward a few days before, where his wife and progeny gathered the ripening fruit which a buyer came to truck out to the railroad each evening. Frank did not pick much himself and he cursed his family for not being more adept at the harvest. And so the proposal which Tod West made fell on ground doubly fertile.

" . . . And he's made you a joke, here, knockin' you into the river that way, Frank! He'll drive you out of the country if he stays and . . . and I want him gone because he tried to frame me!"

"The breed's eyes were fixed on the white man's face."

"How much?" he asked.

"Well, not much. It's your fight. I can get along; I'd rather have him gone, but I can get along. You, though . . . And there'd be no chance, you see, out there on Towallie it!"

"How much?"

Under his insistence West paused.

"Ten dollars."

"Huh! You do your own job, Tod West!"

He turned to his car.

"Hold on!"—grasping a sleeve.

"Money's scarce."

"Well, I ain't goin' to take no chances for no ten dollars. For a hundred, no—"

"A hundred! You're crazy!"

They battered longer, but without heat, and finally Bluejay nodded.

"All right. But when?"

"When the job's done."

"I'll see, eh? And this other . . . you tell me when you want me to say I seen Stuart there, Tod. In the corner, eh? And burying a . . ."

His voice dropped to a cautious whisper.

Bluejay cranked his car and clattered away and Tod West stroled toward the store.

He did not enter, however; stood there staring within and felt his bruised lips carefully.

He had become a changed man in this span of a few short days.

Simple But Smart Models

MATRON, maid, or tiny miss—your attention please. For assembled here are three lovely frocks to brighten your wardrobe. All are designed to be made at home, quickly and inexpensively, and each is accompanied by a step-by-step instruction chart which makes sewing a real pleasure and recreation.

The lovely and graceful daytime or afternoon frock, Pattern 1949, features a novel yet simple yoke and collar treatment, a clever swing skirt, and youthful sleeves, long or short. Chic and stylish, yet as simple as can be, it will make up beautifully in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20 (30 to 38 bust measure), and size 14, with short sleeves, requires just 3½ yards of 39 inch material.

The comely morning frock which steals the center, Pattern 1973, is available in a wide range of sizes and takes top honors for comfort and versatility. Requiring just five simple pieces including the belt, it goes together like a charm, to fit perfectly and make your morning chores so much lighter. The pointed yoke is slimming, the set-in sleeves are free and open, and the skirt is darts fitted at the waist. As easy to make as to wear, this pattern is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Send for it today. Size 38 requires just 3½ yards of 35 inch fabric dimity or percale or gingham or seersucker.

The tempting model for tiny tots, Pattern 1944, is likewise utterly simple to make, yet as cunning as can be. Good for party or for play, it is a pattern you can cut twice and save for future use in any of a wide range of fabrics. The tiny puff sleeves are cut in one with the shoulder with just two simple pieces for the front and back of the dress. The size range—six months, one, two and three years. The one year size requires 1½ yards of 36 inch material, and if you wish you can make the pockets, cuffs and facings in contrast.

Uncle Phil Says:

That Is Perfection

Perfection does not consist in doing singular things; but it does consist in doing common things singularly well.

A man who knows that his hardships make the best part of his character may not want his son to have hardships.

Always be sure your friends can grant the favor before you ask it; then there won't be the pain and embarrassment of refusal.

Admitting our faults is half way to correcting them; but the latest half.

If you want to make your friend happy instead of seeking to have him make you happy, that's the true gold.

Everyone remembers what a great man says. So much the worse for his reputation for consistency.

We always feel great admiration for those clever
