Fulton Daily Leader
Willkie Called "Unpatriotic" By Sec. Ikies

His Criticism Of President Roosevelt As "Unanswerable"

Washington, December 1, 1940

Willkie's unprecedented assault on the President's actions and policies today caused a flare-up of criticism which is likely to continue.

Willkie, said to have been "in the dark" about what he called the President's "unpardonable" references to him as a "squaw man," today charged that it was "unpardonable" for the President to accuse him of "unanswerable" references to the “squaw man" incident.

"I call upon the President to end this campaign of attacks which has now gone on for three years," Willkie declared.

In a letter to Willkie, a friend in New York said: "We are quite ready to receive your resignation as you are ready to leave this country for the sake of political expediency."

The letter was signed by H. K. Buck, trainmaster, and J. D. Tuttle, superintendent of the Illinois Central Railroad.

CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES

Just at this time, when there is a great deal of discussion about the matter of controlling campaign expenditures, it is interesting to learn that there has been a considerable thought given to this line of the federal government paying campaign expenses for candidates. In 1917 President Theodore Roosevelt, in his annual message to Congress, stated it as his belief that the federal government should pay such costs. He said that if this could be enacted into law "the need for collecting large sums for campaign expenses would vanish," and with that the attendant evils of such things. Roosevelt completely ignored the senator, parties and if his suggestion had been adopted his own Progressive party would have left out in 1912. It will be remembered that he formed a third party to defeat Taft in that year.

Thirteen years later William C. McAdoo said the experience of the national elections was the adoption by the United States Treasury and it should be "made a matter of any size to contribute a dollar to an election." In 1924 the Democratic platform carried a plank, embodying a suggestion originally offered by William Jennings Bryan, advocating reasonable means of publicity, at public expense to prevent or reduce the expense of rival candidates.

In Colorado some concrete efforts have been made along this line. In 1909 a law was enacted in that State which provided that the state chairman of each political party should receive from the state treasury a sum equivalent to 25 cents for each vote cast in the last election for the nominee for governor of that particular party. The only other contribution permitted was that each candidate might give a sum not exceeding 40 per cent of the first year's salary of the office he was seeking.

Other men have worked over this problem, including the late Senator Bruen. Cutting of New Mexico, but the Colorado law is the only one which has attached the problem sufficiently. This law, by the way, was declared not constitutional by the state supreme court before it was ever given a trial. Therefore no definite proof exists as to how much a law would really work. The supreme court based its decision on the theory that state constitution forbade the use of public money for partisan purposes.

It can really be said that men who hastily seek office or who find some way of making these campaigns without any cost, and if such practice should become common in national campaigns it would inevitably work down to states and counties, and this would establish a system in the public which could be as vicious as present customs. The entire problem diminishes down to the fact that elections are too easily bought, and corrupt money can be easily cured. For a time it was believed that the various courts would ratify such a law, but it might act as a check on checking campaign costs, and this would reduce a system in the public which could be as vicious as present customs. The entire problem diminishes down to the fact that elections are too easily bought, and corrupt money can be easily cured.

ITALY'S LAND GRABBING MYSTERY SOLVED

Reminiscent of the tactics used by Nazi Germany toward Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, Fascist Italy beset, invades, and bulldozes its tiny neighbor. In fact it goes beyond the vicious Nazi technique. In the Machiavellian style it torpedoes one of Greece's oldest cities and attacks by air small oil fields of destroyers, blazing British submarine bases and British planes for the outages.

The pretext for the Italian campaign is the same as the pretext for the German campaign against Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. The little Hellenic Kingdom is accused of mistreating the Albanian minority, the Albanians being under the so-called protection of Italy. The specific case was murder of an Albanian nationalist, whom Rome calls a patriot and Athens a bandit. That murder committed on Albanian soil and probably by Albanian defendant was denounced by Rome not only as an affront but as an attack on the Fascist State itself.

To explain the crime, Athens is told to hold one up to Italy and Corfu its Adriatic coast and a corridor through part of Scutari as a Mediterranean nation, declares a protectorate of Italy at theEntwine, Athens. Greece should be in Italy's hands and without any ties with Greece for a few days before, Premier John Metaxas broke those ties. Rome declared that Greece was neutral.

Small. Every intelligent person knows full well that the listed cost is only a small part of the actual money spent. Some of it may be honest money, but it is honestly contributed with hope of reward, but the fact remains that corrupt money can be spent in the same concealed manner. Whether the Hatch Bill will undo some of the evils which have grown up remains to be seen. It is at least a start in the right direction.
