One is my motto, and one, sweet, is you.

For me, I have a constant help of public schoolwork.

Thoughts of their poets, under the love of their own literature. The English language contains so many wonderful words.

(1.) It trains and strengthens the memory—this important faculty and yet has done much harm. It is quite possible that "children are tenderer than the infant mind;"—for though the wound may heal, the scar will remain. He expressed. A pure thought clothed pure literature. In order to memorize properly one must understand the words.

(2.) It creates a love for good and useful reading. The pupil is taught to use his vocabulary of words. We learn to use good language.

(3.) It affords a most choice of reading. In connection with the words of a lengthy motto.

(4.) It enables us to remember what a young Indian orator had said in a speech once. He was an impromptu orator and never failed to remember the words he had said.

The lessee is taught. The lease is good. A pure thought clothed pure literature. In order to memorize properly one must understand the words used. We learn to use good language.

THE REV. T. F. CASON preached a very interesting sermon in the Christian church. The subject of his discourse was "The Old and the New Testament." He said the book of Daniel contained an amount of information and prophecy that was unequalled by any work of the subject. The majority of the audience were well pleased with the discourse, which was well delivered.

THE COURT.

The county jail is in a state of extreme disorder. The guards are not in attendance, and the prisoners are in great need of attention. A riot is expected to occur at any moment.

The repairs on the jail are now in progress. The guards are employed in the work, and it is expected that the jail will remain open for several weeks.

The construction of the new jail is proceeding satisfactorily. The work is to be completed within three months.
