BASSETT AGAIN HEAD OF KITTY LEAGUE

An effort of Hugh Wise, Owensboro manager, to have Dr. Frank H. Bassett ousted as president of the Kitty League met with failure Sunday, as the chief executive was returned to office by a vote of six to two in a meeting in Mayfield. Chasing that Dr. Bassett's other business was too pressing and that he even failed to answer correspondence on league matters Wise suggested that Fred Russell, sports editor of the Nashville Banner, for the position. The poll, however, found Bassett back in office. Ed Hanneph, president of the Fulton club, was also in favor of a new president for the circuit.

Ben F. Howard of Union City was chosen vice president of the league. More than 40 attended the session which started the ball to rolling for 1937. Despite the attempt to oust Bassett, things went along smoothly. Representatives of all eight clubs were present.

The group decided to open the campaign May 11, and close Labor Day, September 6. This is the third year for the Kitty League since its revival, following an absence of 12 seasons. Dr. Bassett was among the re-organizers.

Shaulnessy playoff was suggested as an aid to the league by Jimmy Hamilton, business manager of the Nashville Vols. However, the meeting deferred action on the play-off, or the split season, which has been in vogue, until a later date.

The clubs voted to send a message to W. G. Branham, Durham, N. C., president of the National Association of Professional Baseball, protesting the reinstatement of Manager Bertie and seven players of the Paducah Indians club.

A committee composed of Ed Hanneph, Fulton; Cecil Moss, Union City; and president of the Mayfield club, was appointed to draft the constitution and by-laws for the league. The next meeting of the league officials will be held in Fulton shortly.

NEGRO ACCUSED OF ORPHEUM ROBBERY

James A. Wright, negro 20-years old, was sent to the county jail at Hickman after a preliminary trial here Tuesday, on a charge of breaking into the Orpheum Theatre here Sunday night. His case will come before the grand jury in session today.

The negro prized open doors to enter the theatre, obtaining nothing but a clock, a fountain pen and other small items, which led to his arrest by identification of the clock. Money to the amount of $800 was in the office safe, which was untouched.

FULTON MAN HELD UP BY MASKED MEN

Four masked men held up and robbed Lawrence Canepari, owner and operator of the C & G Distributing Company at Fulton, between 3:30 and 4:00 o'clock Friday afternoon, near the home of Buster Owens on the Fulton Union City highway. Money to the amount of $3500 was taken from him, 500 $20.00 worth of checks were returned to him. Canepari is a regular depositor in Union City bank and was on his way to deposit the money when he was robbed.

Canepari said that as he looked down behind a truck topper gun, the four men drove up beside him, and crowded him out of the highway, throwing their guns at him. After robbing him they took him down the Harris road, bound and gagged him and attempted to crowd him into the rear trunk of his automobile. They took the keys from the car and left, warning him that he would be shot if he came out within an hour. As soon as the robbers cut off, Canepari made his way to the highway and to John Naper's store, three miles this side of Union City, to telephone his liquor store.

Canepari said the robbers were driving a black Plymouth sedan, a late model, but Sergeant Crowe, of the Tennessee State Highway Patrol, who arrived within 20 minutes of the holdup said that he did not notice the fleeing car in the heavy traffic on the highway.

The Fulton County Farm Bureau tied Henderson County for first prize in the state award given by the Kentucky Federation of Farm Bureaus, a communication received here by Cecil Burnette, president of the local bureau, from Ben Kilgore, Executive Secretary of the state organization. The county bureau received a check for $92.50, and an individual award of $46.25. The contest was open to all counties in the state. Fulton county increased from 253 to 405 to win the capital prize, with J. B. McGeehee leading as the individual securing the greatest number of new members.

"The fiscal year for 1936 of the Kentucky Farm Bureau closed on December 31, which brought to a close our regular state convention contest," Mr. Kilgore stated. "Even though we did not reach our 1000 goal we can be proud of our 6,900 loyal members secured this year. We are very happy to list your county as one of the winners and I certainly want to congratulate you and your leaders on the splendid work that you have done."

The following counties qualified in the contest: First and second, Fulton and Henderson counties; Third, Shelby county; Fourth, Union county; Fifth, Fayette county; Sixth, Carroll county; Seventh, Christian county; Eighth, Nelson county; Ninth, Hopkins county.

The State Convention of Farm Bureaus will be held at the Brown Hotel in Louisville, January 13-14. The prize money will be used to send delegates to this convention. The Fulton County Bureau will hold its annual banquet and election of officers at the First Methodist church, on the latter part of January.

The Fulton County Farm Bureau won $90 in the national contest, and the following delegates have recently returned from the national convention held at Los Angeles, December 10-12: Cecil Burnette, Roscoe Stone, Chas. Hornsby and A. G. Campbell.

HELM'S HENS WIN THREE OF FOUR FIRSTS IN EGG CONTEST

Never in the history of the Illinois Egg Laying contest has one breeder come so near to winning all of the awards as did the Illinois Hatchery this past month.

They had the Champion Pen and Hen of the Contest, also the second high pen and hen as well as a great number of other awards in both the heavy and light classes.

Their high hen contest at White Rock laid 29 eggs in the 30 days. During the past 60 years pens entered by Helm have been making consistent winnings in the National Egg Laying contests defeating some of the leading breeders of the U. S.

This is the first time however he has come so near to winning all of the prizes offered in one month. Following is a list of the awards won by Helm's birds in the Illinois Egg Laying Contest according to reports received Dec. 12th:

Champion Pen of the Contest; Second High Pen of the Contest; Second High Individual; High Pen of Light Breed Class; High Hen of Light Breed Class; Second High Pen of Light Breed Class; High Hen of Heavy Breeds; Third Light Breed Individual; Fourth Light Breed Pen; Fourth Heavy Breed Pen; High Leghorn Pen; High Leghorn Hen; High White Rock Hen.

25-YEAR WEIGHT IS BEST TO KEEP

The real time to worry about overweight in middle age is while still relatively young, 25 years old for instance. Anyone who at 25 years weighs the average amount for his height and years should not start putting on pounds. By gaining a pound a year at 45 years of age, there will be 20 pounds of overweight to care for. It is estimated that this amount of fat adds about 12 miles of blood vessels through which must be pumped, making a definite tax on strength and efficiency.

To avoid overweight, eat plenty of fruit and vegetables, drink plenty of milk, and use a moderate amount of meat and eggs, as slow on cereals, fats and sweets, eating only enough for energy needs, advises the University of Kentucky Home Economics Department. If the scales begin coming up, it is obvious that too much is being consumed.

If anyone already has the extra 20 pounds, what can be done safely? It is well to get rid of the extra poundage, but use discretion in doing it. No matter how much exercise is taken, and whether reducing or gaining, the amount of tissue building food needed is the same. Therefore, meet that need with a pint of milk and an egg a day, and a serving of meat three or four times a week, and eat only what is needed, and whether reducing or gaining, the amount of tissue building food needed is the same.

When more than two pounds a week are lost, a little more bread and butter should be added to the day's food supply.

CONDEMNNS SEVERE PRUNING OF TREES

The mutilation of beautiful shade trees, done on the theory that pruning every year or two is necessary to keep them in such a manner," Prof. Elliott asserted. "The number of trees, especially in towns and cities that have been treated in this way is amazing, and the results of such treatment are never satisfactory. Home-owners should stop and realize that it takes years to grow large beautiful trees that can easily be permanently injured in a few hours by pruners who measure the effectiveness of their work by the amount of trash they remove."

Occasionally shade trees do need some pruning, but Prof. Elliott would limit it to careful thinning where a few of the overlapping branches are removed or headed back slightly. In removing branches, the cuts should be made close to the main stem or lateral and the wounds painted with a good grade of paint.

The work should be done during the winter, when the tree is dormant. Branches can be removed at that time with less injury to leaves and young growth. Trees damaged by storm should have the wounds treated as soon as possible.

RURAL GROUPS TO MEET AT FARM AND HOME CONVENTION

Farm organizations to meet in Lexington during the 25th annual Farm and Home Convention at the University of Kentucky January 26-29, include the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, the Kentucky Federation of Homemakers, the Kentucky Beekeepers' Association, the Kentucky Rural Church Council, the Kentucky Holstein Cattle Club and the Bluegrass Jersey Cattle Club.

There also will be special sessions for farmers interested in problems of marketing and finance, in livestock production, and in special problems relating to soils and crops. There will be a general session for farmers throughout the four days and another for homemakers.

The list of speakers includes: G. A. B. Chandler, who will address the general session January 26; Dr. E. G. Nourse of the Brookings Institution; Dr. W. I. Myers, governor of the Farm Credit Administration; Dr. H. R. Tolley, administrator of the agricultural conservation program; Bess M. Rowe, editor of The Farmer's Wife; Judge Camille Kelley, Memphis, Tenn.; Dr. Allen A. Stoeltdale, Washington, D. C.; Miss Fannie Brooks, head of the home economics department of the University of Illinois; Ernest Rice of the Farm Credit Administration; E. A. E. Nile, secretary of the state horticultural society; and A. H. Teske, Virginia fruit grower.

LAUNDERING SUGGESTIONS

Because of the many labor-saving aids available at a fairly reasonable price, many women prefer to do at least part of their laundry at home. The good results the home economics department of the Kentucky College of Agriculture offers the following suggestions:

Use powdered soaps for heavier fabrics, but be sure that it is a soap not containing lye. Use soap flakes for fine fabrics, silks, woolsens and colored clothes, or else shave a good soap and dissolve it in warm water. Be sure it is all dissolved before adding the garments.

Horses, Mares and Fillies

I have just returned from the Western Country and have bought over 1000 head of horses and young mares, broke and unbroke, but real good heavy draft stock. I have fed these horses 6 months and they have already had colds and distemper. They are all fat and ready to go to work. I will be shipping these horses every week from now on throughout the season. I also have over 100 head of good young mules any kind, big or little. Come to my Horse & Mule Market at any time after January 17, where you can see from 200 to 300 head of good horses and mules at any time. I sell on 12 months time with good security. I deliver by truck right to your place with no extra charge.

VANISHED HORIZONS OF SPEECH

Only sixty years ago—the telephone was invented. Only twenty-one years ago—New York was linked with San Francisco. In less than ten years—North America's telephones have been brought in voice-reach of 69 countries in every part of the world.

During the last decade, there have been seven successive voluntary reductions in the "long distance" rates.

Unceasing scientific research and continuous improvement of operating methods have provided for you a system for talking with almost anyone, anywhere; quickly, clearly and at low cost.

You can use long distance telephone service to advantage, sending your personality across the far horizons while you remain at ease in your home or office. And remember, the cost is small wherever you call.

JIM CROW
A little over a century ago the comic Negro was introduced to the American public in the character of Jim Crow. T. D. Rice, a Negro minstrel, won great popularity in 1835 in this role and played several times in Kentucky. Too often since then this side of Negro life has been regarded as the only one. Black-face comedians have made this character known everywhere. It would be hard to separate the actual Negro comedian from the white man masquerading as such. These actors have chosen to reveal the high good humor of the Negro, usually the younger Negro, his fondness for gay attire, his innate love of music and dancing, his agility to ward a razor. The radio in our own time has many a blackface team, known all over the world, carrying on the Jim Crow tradition.

From the professional actors and radio teams have caught much of the air of the Jim Crow type, there is still much to be learned from actual characters living in every part of the South. Every section has a comic Negro philosopher or clown. He does not seem quite aware how funny he is; it usually ruins his impression when he does learn that he is naturally comic. He sees the incongruities of his own time and place and almost unconsciously imitates them. I met many a pool hick with the hoe in the field listening to Curt imitate the variations of the Mt. Zion congregation. We hear a lot about one-curt imitations. Curt was a one-man troupe of actors. From the pompous dignity of the preacher to the high-pitched wailing of a shouting auntie he could change in a twinkling, keeping all the time a seriousness that would be the envy of professional actors. You wouldn't have called Curt irreverent; he just saw the comedy of his life and expressed it with little or no effort.

Not so much has been made of the female comic Negro, but Eda, one of our neighbor girls, was a match for Curt. She could cakewalk like every person she knew. From the gayest youngster to the oldest victim of rheumatism she could shoot on all the scales and reproduce all the effects of sermon, song, and shout. She, too, seemed unaware of her acting ability and was not trying to lose any of her church-people into disrepute. She reminded me then of small children who unconsciously repeat words or gestures of those a-

Poor Richard's Day

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinel of the Republic

Throughout our country thousands of organizations are striving again for the annual celebration of Poor Richard's Day. Its purpose is to honor Benjamin Franklin, journalist, advertiser, scientist, philosopher, author of Poor Richard's Almanac, statesman and above all a Great American.

As a reminder of the principles to which our nation is dedicated, the annual celebration of his birthday on January 17 should rank high on America's patriotic calendar. The counsels of Benjamin Franklin are reflected not only in our greatest historical documents—the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution—but in the entire life and fabric of our Republic.

Wise and true when the nation was born, those counsels have remained through a century and a half, enduring beacons for the political guidance of all our people—whether in public office or in private life. Here, for example, are a few of his comments on subjects still dominant in our thoughts:

Patriotism
"Where liberty dwells there is my country."

The Constitution
"I hope, for our own sakes, as a part of the people, and for the sake of our posterity, that we shall act heartily and unanimously in recommending this Constitution... and that we may turn our future thoughts and endeavors to the means of having it well administered."

Public Debt
"He that goes a-borrowing goes a-sorrowing."

Self-Reliance
"They that can give up essential liberty to obtain a little temporary safety deserve neither liberty nor safety."

This is the type of wisdom for which generations of Americans have honored Benjamin Franklin. Clearly and simply expressed, it remains a applicable today as during the years of his life. America might well hope that its statesmen will continue to honor that wisdom today. In no way could our nation pay greater tribute to Benjamin Franklin or reap greater benefits from his sage counsels.

found them. Each new Sunday at Mt. Zion was enough to call into play her acting ability. She interrupted the washing of dishes to take a turn across the kitchen in the manner of some sister marching up the aisle to deposit her weekly offering; she would cakewalk from the dining room to the kitchen with an armload of dishes, occasionally with dis-

Behind the Scenes

New proofs of railway progress come to light almost daily, yet many remain behind the scenes, little known to shipper or traveler.

In the shops the work of repairing freight cars has been modernized by adoption of the assembly line method and use of toil-saving tools.

These and many other improvements behind the scenes on the railroad make possible the improvements in service which have commanded nation-wide recognition. They too are part of the amazing record of railway progress and achievement.

The number of men at work on the Illinois Central has kept close pace with the rising tide of traffic. We thank our friends for the patronage that has enabled us to increase forces—both on stage and behind the scenes.

THE 150 POUND COW Makes Money??

How much profit does the average farmer in western Kentucky make? That is the question of great importance to every farmer in the Fulton territory.

Suppose that the average cow produces 150 pounds of butterfat. This sells for 30c per pound or $45.00. The 150 pound cow will eat $45.00 worth of feed. This leaves no labor income.

What of the cow that produces 250 pounds of butterfat per year. This also sells for 30c per pound or $75.00. If this cow is fed $50.00 more per year than her 150-pound sister she will make $25.00 profit for her owner.

Let's consider the third cow in the herd. This cow produces 350 pounds of butterfat per year which sells for 30c per pound or $105.00. If this cow ate $50.00 more feed than her 250 pound sister and $100.00 more feed than her 150 pound sister, she will make a $50.00 profit for her owner.

ABE THOMPSON NEW
K. U. HEAD HERE

Abe Thompson, Hickman, succeeds E. C. Hardesty as manager of the Kentucky Utilities Company in Fulton. Mr. Hardesty has been transferred to the construction division.

What would be the results of three farmers keeping small herds of 10 cows each. Let's consider that these farmers raise all the feed for their herd.

Farmer No. 1 has 10 cows producing 150 pounds of butterfat each or 1500 pounds per year. This sells for $450.00 which means no labor income.

Farmer No. 2 has 10 cows which produce 250 pounds of butterfat per year or 2500 pounds. This sells for $750.00, profit, $250.00. No. 3, gross income $1050.00, feed cost, $550.00, profit, $500.00.

The Fulton Chamber of Commerce has bought 17 young Jersey bulls whose dams have produced from 450 to 700 pounds butterfat in one year. These bulls are available for the use of every farmer near Fulton.

There are five rules that every farmer near Fulton can follow and build up their herd to a 350 pound average. 1. Weigh each cow's milk night and morning, at least once each week during her lactation period. 2. Each time the milk is weighed take a sample and have it tested at your cream station. 3. At the end of the month calculate the amount of butterfat each cow produces and add the difference to find each cow's production for the year. 4. Save the better calves from your best cows to replace your old herd. 5. Breed your cows to the Chamber of Commerce Jersey Bull that is in your community.

Big Business Ahead
Nuffield, Rockefeller
Government Steps In Sing Sing

This is the last column by the late Arthur Brisbane. It was found on his desk after his death December 25.

The old-time spirit broke away the bounds of the last remnant of the depression years.

The great boom in air travel, railroads and all forms of transportation during this Christmas period augurs great things for the coming new year.

Prosperity and optimism are the forerunners of this Christmas period to usher in the New Year.

Arthur Brisbane

Lord Nuffield English, is a generous giver; his automobile manufacturing makes it possible. He gave $10,000,000 to the University of Oxford, has established a trust of $10,000,000 for his employees, and has given $10,000,000 to the British government "to help the needy." His giving in the past eleven years amounts to about thirty-seven million dollars.

If Lord Nuffield were to multiply his gifts by ten, he would still be far from the giving record of our home-grown John D. Rockefeller; also, he would be surprised to know how much prosperous Americans contribute to their government "for their needy" in the form of income tax.

The governor of Pennsylvania spent three days carefully investigating illegal coal mining and selling by idle workers, "bootlegging" more than thirty million dollars worth of "stolen" coal each year. At the end of his investigation, the governor "took action," but of a kind that probably will surprise mine owners.

He ordered the arrest of four executives of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron company, accusing them of involuntary manslaughter in connection with a coal mine disaster three years ago that killed thirteen. The officials and company are accused of employing eighty-five men in a mine section on which only seventy-five could be legally employed. An explosion killed thirteen. Mine owners with grievances will think carefully before calling on Gov. Earle again.

There are twenty-seven murderers in the death house at Sing Sing prison, nearly all boys or very young men. Six of the twenty-seven are young ruffians, of assorted races and religions—three of them under twenty-one years of age—surrounded a defenseless man, murdered him in cold blood to get a few dollars, all in subway nickels. Governor Lehman of New York is urged to pardon the six murderers, some because they are young, some because they did not fire that fatal shot. The governor replied he ought not to pardon any murderer under twenty-one years of age, because "I frankly see no difference in the guilt of the man who is twenty-two and one who is twenty."

The "big shot" gangsters hire men, usually very young and well supplied with drugs, to do their killing for them. It would be too easy for these emperors of sixteen if they could take boys from sixteen to twenty and guarantee them, "in the first place, they won't catch you; in the second place, if they do, they can't execute you; we'll get you acquitted or get you out of jail."

Murder has become a "business," and businesslike murders must be made dangerous.

Suggestions for Lloyd's insurance. In the United States, where some business is rather timid, accident insurance companies automatically terminate accident policies when the beneficiaries reach the age of seventy.

Yet, at that age, men are often safest from accidents. They stay at home, walk slowly, take few risks.

The British Lloyd's might find a good field in a selected list of United States citizens past seventy. This would be no hardship on American companies, since they do not want the business.

Mexico plans to establish 2,000 new primary public schools, in the coming year, having established 3,000 such schools in 1938.

Representatives of the Catholic church, which includes in its membership 95 per cent of Mexico's population, object strongly and officially to the kind of education alleged to be offered to Mexican children.

France figures up a deficit of four thousand three hundred and thirty-six million francs; divide that by twenty-five, and you find that it is just "chicken feed" in dollars. In this country, $133,000,000 is no deficit, only petty cash.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
 By WILLIAM BRUCKART
 NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—The Capital city has returned to normalcy. It is not the normalcy of January, 1935, or the years immediately preceding, but the normalcy of the year in which that quadrennial spectacle, the inauguration of a President, takes place. But Washington's normalcy is a condition that comes in cycles and it matters not how the wheel of life turns, those who are resident here get used to it and of necessity they take the condition in regular stride. That sounds like Washington residents are blasé. And they are to a greater extent than residents of most cities. But paradoxical as it may seem, native Washingtonians and a certain percentage of those in the political field become so excited that they lose all sense of proportion on occasions such as an inauguration ceremony. The answer seems to be personal vanity—a desire to be "out in front" and to "show off" by having important places in parades and having their names and pictures in the newspapers. But there is another side of this Washington normalcy. It is the side of the political powers who have little concern about the District of Columbia as such or what goes on therein unless those affairs strengthen the position of these political powers held among their constituencies "back home."

Hence, under the dome of the great Capitol building, there is all the activity of a bee hive. The old timers among the legislators have learned to proceed with caution and to develop their plans slowly, but the newer members of the house and senate are all agog, each one with his own pet idea for saving the nation; each one with a varying conviction about his own importance as a member of the national legislature, and each one determined not to overlook a single opportunity to show the folks back home that their representative or their senator has become a national figure.

Then through the corridors, the halls, committee rooms and offices there are the hurrying feet of newspaper correspondents, representatives of this interest or that, messengers and lowly members of the Capitol's vast staff of carpenters, cleaners and chore workers.

"Downtown" Washington has another picture. In the executive departments, in the bureaus, commissions and agencies of which scores have come into being under the Roosevelt New Deal, there is intense activity. Policy makers of these various units make plans, study, confer, propose or reject ideas for consideration of the new congress and the administration heads. These fellows are less concerned about the folks back home than are the legislators. Their chief concern usually is perpetuation of their jobs, development of their units or agencies into places of such importance that the country cannot do without them. There is a personal interest hardly less to be condemned than that of the self-seeking politician.

On top of all of these—the governmental activities of the government—there is still another normalcy in Washington. It is the social side. Of course, all Washington society springs and has its being in White House reflection. From the great mansion at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue, there radiates every kind and condition of a social engagement. Outstanding among these obviously after the inauguration of a President is the Chief Executive's dinner to his cabinet. A reception to the Supreme Court of the United States and the other members of the judiciary follows. In rapid order come receptions to the legislators, to the army, navy and marine corps, to the foreign diplomats resident here and all of these are interspersed with smaller official dinners in the great state dining room at the White House.

In various sections of the city and in the hotels dinners, receptions, cocktail parties continue in ceaseless chains. And if the brutal statement must be made, the truth is that nearly every one of them has a purpose above and beyond personal enjoyment, but the selfish interest is quite frequently so deeply concealed that those who are being "cultivated" may not realize what the objective is.

These random observations have been presented chiefly to show the gloss and the glamor that is self-imposed upon the hundreds of persons who combine to make up what we know as government. They play, as they have a right to play. They must have diversion. Frequently this diversion serves useful purposes for the country as a whole because through personal contact those charged with responsibility many times gain information, understanding, of the problems with which they must deal in official positions.

And so it that, as Washington returns to normalcy, we have a congress—the seventy-fifth—beginning its labors with perhaps a confusion as great as any in recent years with the exception of that which opened the first term of the Roosevelt administration. In my own mind, I doubt that the confusion of 1933 was as great as it is now because in that period of emergency, the important wheelhorses of government were concerned with only one thing, namely, quick enactment of policies that would help in bringing order out of the economic chaos in which we found ourselves.

The current congress gets down to work, however, in a different atmosphere. Agencies of the government time after time have held lately that the emergency is over; that policies considered now must be considered on a permanent basis and that if there is to be a new order, the make-up, the consistency, of that new order must be examined with the idea of fitting the various pieces into a compact and workable whole.

It is in this atmosphere, therefore, and under the circumstances of an overwhelming landslide of votes by which President Roosevelt was returned to office that the administration must take stock of what has happened in the last four years and must analyze the prospects as far as the future discloses them.

Probably the most serious long range problem confronting the country involves the relationship of government and business. For weeks, I have sought information and views of individuals concerning the real crux of this problem because it has so many different phases. From all of this research I am inclined to the opinion that the fundamental question to be answered is that peril that faces the portion of our people that have passed the age of forty-five.

It may seem like a broad statement to pin down the relationship of government to business to that one question of what to do with workers above forty-five but I verily believe that is the crux.

It will have to be treated briefly in these columns but nevertheless it seems to me that all of the growing howl about "social security" centers on this one point. It centers there because politicians and starry-eyed wishers have made so much noise about the government looking after the aged that a natural reaction has taken place in industry and, in consequence, there is a growing disinclination among employers to take on workers past forty-five.

Under the whip of competition and in an effort to offset the costs of the present social security program, manufacturers everywhere have been looking for methods by which they can substitute machines for human workers. Where that was impossible, they have turned to younger workers so that the increase in protection per worker, according to the best calculations, is not all due to the use of machinery. Greater efficiency has come from the employment of people able to go at high speed throughout the working period.

This development has been in progress in the manufacturing industries for at least 20 years but it has received its greatest impetus in the last three or four years since it became evident that the federal government was going to force upon commerce and industry protection for the older employees.

One of the Best Things in Life Is Moral Victory

To demand victory without an antagonist is to demand something with no meaning... If you take all the evil out of the world you will remove the possibility of the best thing in life. That does not mean that evil is good. What one means by calling a thing good is that the spirit rests permanently content with it for its own sake.

Evil is precisely that with which no spirit can rest content; and yet it is the condition, not the accidental but the essential condition, of what is in and for itself the best thing in life, namely, moral victory.—Archbishop Temple.

"Well, this mornin' them detectuff's was up early," the boy continued. "I'd what'd they do?" Curiously, he looked about, enjoying immensely this moment of importance. "They start blowin' powder on 'at ole crowbar, 'nd atekin' black lape over 'th powder 'nd showin' it to Ezra."

"Th' sergeant, he's th' boss. 'Nd he says to Ezra; th' feller who handled th' crowbar 's th' fella who left his thumb print inside th' box. 'Xen they poked up 'at ol' tin cup 'nd went to work on it, blowin' powder 'nd they says to Ezra 'at if th' prints on 'at ol' cup 's th' same 's th' others, they c'n git their man by reachin' out fer him!"

"Jus' now, 'at was," he declared. "Jus' now, they're blowin' powder on 'at ol' tin cup..."

The group pressed close and closer but it had one less member, now; one less, because Tod West was walking blindly, staggering a bit, toward his house. And as he glanced across the river to where two tall young men walked on either side of Ezra Adams toward the trestle, he began to run.

The spruce forest grew close to the back door of his house. It was but a moment's work to secure his rifle, a supply of ammunition, and then disappear through the trees. Panting, he fled up-stream and crossed in gravel shallows and plunged through the bush northward.

He had a gun and food for his chamber. He knew where he could get an ax. With an ax and a gun a man may live in the woods for long, provided he knows the woods and their ways. Tod West knew that vast country better than any other. He could hide there, could remain in safety for weeks, for months. He could not, of course, stay forever; and when he did emerge he would need more than an ax and a gun. He would need money. On his way up to his first sanctuary he could retrieve money...

CHAPTER XV

Under the driving of the wedges the tree split and its halves rolled apart at Kerry Young's feet. A great mass of brood and comb and oozing honey glistened in the sunlight. Trickle of the golden fluid ran across the freshly broken wood. In great sheets, the comb ran up the cavity, great folds, ... And near the bottom of the hive, about the length of a man's fore arm from the entrance, imbedded in comb, snug and tight and safe, was the thing which belonged in no bee's storehouse! Young moaned as he dropped the sledge and tore into the comb with his gloved hands, wrestling from that sticky mass the cylindrical shaped object his quick eyes had detected. Honey dripped from it; bees swarmed about his hands as he turned it over and over.

"What a place!" he muttered. "No mouse could gnaw, no prowling bear find it. Nothing, Tod West, except the bees knew it! ... And who'd hunt for this tree? Who, if you hadn't left honey sticking to that old crowbar?"

He shook off a bee which stung his wrist. He moved away from a buzzing cloud, making his way to the leaf dappled spring and, stooping, plunged the smeared roll of bills into the crystal waters.

The honey washed away quickly, dissolving even in the cold water. He saw a figure on the currency; it was a hundred; many more were there, ... He washed them briskly and Tip came close.

"Got it, Tip!" he cried. "Got dear Nan's cash! We've ... He broke off. A part of the smear would not wash away. He examined it carefully and the dog, snapping at a bee, did not catch that the agonies of hell itself tearing at his left shoulder.

So it was Tip who rushed Tod West, who charged forward as the man emerged from the brush, rifle at ready, ... Tip who, with teeth showing, and eyes wicked with an orange flare, stood alone between Nan Downer's money and the man who had cached it so cunningly!

Again the rifle crashed and the dog, yelping, snapping at his right hind leg, went end over end through the underbrush, threshing, rolling, screaming with pain as Tod West charged past him...

Young had fallen face down into the muck about the spring. His right hand lay limply in the water and away from it, rocked by the little ripples which still disturbed the surface, floated the roll of bills, turning slowly around and around.

West saw the money. With an oath he snatched it up and pumped a fresh cartridge into the rifle chamber. He poised there above the figure of his Nemesis, dropping the muzzle quickly to the back of the barred head.

And then caution asserted itself. How far behind pursuit might be, Tod did not know. Already, he had fired twice, and sounds would carry well today. He stopped, listening. The pound of his heart, the rasp of his own breath were loud. He lifted his hand and smacked the water dully.

Then, with cruel craft, he placed his foot against Young's cheek, shoved his face down into the spring and leaped the now rocky pool.

"Breathe 'nd drown, damn you!" he growled shakily and set off at a slow run...

It was the tugging of the whining dog on his collar which stirred Kerry. He stirred and gulped and gasped. With a herculean effort, he raised his head and half rolled over; then dropped it to the ferns and lay there moaning lowly. He should not be there; he knew; he had something to do; some-where to go; a matter to attend to...

Tip's tongue was frantic against his closed lids; Tip's breath hot in his own nostrils. Consciousness came back with a nauseating surge.

"Oh, God!" he moaned, getting his knees somehow beneath him. "Oh ... It's gone ... Tip! It was West ... It was ... And he's got it!"

Fighting down sickness, shaking his head against blindness, he searched the money was gone. The money was gone! Tears coursed his cheeks as he shouted that at Tip and then stopped, leaning close to see better as the retriever licked savagely at his thigh.

"Oh!" he gasped. "And he almost got you!" With his good right hand he touched the creature's leg. "Broken!" he muttered as Tip winced. "The two of us ... And he's making his get-away with Nan's money!"

A great and godly rage shook him, lifted him above pain, above dizziness for the moment, sent a savage surging through his broken body.

"Tip, it's up to us! Shy an arm, shy a leg ... Which way, Tip?"—reaching for his gun and sobbing. "Which way? Come ... He ... Here!"

Footprints in the muck gave him a lead. He walked bent over, following the sign in the soft forest mould, dog on three legs, whimpering with hurt at his heels.

West had been running. His footprints were far apart and deep. That made trailing easy, but it was gaining on this feeble pursuit of cripples.

Kerry breathed through dry and open lips. He staggered once and stopped, leaning against a tree, looking backward. He had come such a little way!

"Up to us ... He panted. "... us cripples ... He lie on, Tip!"

The dog looked into his face and, with a moan, dropped his muzzle to the ground, sniffing. He reeled as he lurched along; his tongue lolled but he was trailing and his tail wag!

Young began to laugh, a bit crazily. "The old dauber's up!" he gasped. "It's still up ... He can't beat us, chum! Not on your life."

He reeled along after the dog. Now and then he could see the trail himself; at other times sickness engulfed him, the trees swung and tilted crazily, he could scarcely see Tip. But he kept on, up a gentle rise, out onto a limestone ridge...

door he could see movement that was no trick of his vagrant senses. A man in there was flinging things to the floor, dropping to his knees beside them, making wild, extravagant motions as he crammed articles into a pack sack. Young closed one eye tightly to concentrate on recognition. The man was unmistakably Tod West.

Kerry staggered on a few steps, trying to get the rifle to his shoulder with one arm. He could not do it. The thing was a tremendous and unwieldy weight. He needed a rest for the barrel ... Yonder was a rock and he lurched toward it. An upstanding slab of limestone, it was, split by frost with a crack into which he could have laid his arm.

But he did not try to lay his arm there. He laid the rifle barrel in the opening and stretched himself laboriously on his belly.

Carefully he sighted on the doorway and worked his tongue in his parched mouth, striving to conjure moisture there so his speech might be good. "Put up your hands!" he croaked. "I've got you covered and—"

West reared on his knees, rigid. Young's finger was on the trigger, ready to thwart any move ... And then his man was out of sight, throwing himself sideways along the floor.

Kerry fired and the shock of recoil sent fresh agonies through his body. He saw a leg of the table, on the far side of the room and opposite the doorway, splinter ... Then silence.

When he rallied the strength, he called: "Come out, West! I'll give you one chance!"

No response. "Come out!" he tried to shout, but his voice broke ... "To hell with you, Young!"

Kerry drew a great breath which tore at his wound. So that was it. West had confidence. Desperate, he would be defiant. The only means of exit were on this side; the door and the one window. So long as he could remain in this position and keep his eyes and mind clear, West could not emerge ... But how long would that be?

Tod West spoke again. "I'll wait you out, Young!" he taunted. "When you've bled enough, I'll finish the job!"

He shut his teeth and tried to pray because he could feel a renewed trickle of blood down his side.

"Oh, God," he began, mumbling "give me strength to scotch this snake! Oh, God, let me hold out to save for Nan what's hers! ... Please, God!"

Tip, beside him, moaned and trembled and began licking at his leg again. Thereafter was no speech, no movement for a long interval. The shadows shifted beneath the march of the sun.

He sat at the telephone in Nan's office. "Sergeant Parfit, Commissioner," he said over the long distance wire. "Yes, sir; we've got everything cut off, except to the northwest. We're organizing a posse now to work that way ... No ... I'm sorry, sir. Yes, sir; if he's gotten into that country it'll be tough going for us ... I'm sorry, sir; we don't know. Yes, sir, I've got the best trailers in the country. What? ... We're nearly ready to start. Yes, sir ... Of course ..."

He hung up, the flush caused by rebuke still staining his cheeks.

"Now, coroner," he began as he rose, and stopped.

He bent to stare through the window. "What's the matter with that dog?" he muttered.

He had come a long way; he had come slowly. His one leg dragged behind him, now. His eyes were glazed and his lips caked with mud where he had licked wet earth from the ruts. His head weaved from side to side and his tail tip moved in circles as he tried to hold it bravely up!

Ezra shoved up his spectacles and stared. "I declare!" he said. "I declare, officer, that's Young's dog!"

The sergeant of police was outside with long strides. Others were running toward Tip, collapsed in the road, now. Jim Hinkle was there, chattering in excitement. "What's matter, Tip? What's matter?" "Mad!" someone warned. "Stay back! Look out!"

Burgos, "First City" of Rebel Spain, Has Intriguing History

Venerable Place Was Once the Capital of Old Castile.

Burgos, "capital" of rebel Spain, while new to the ears of present-day observers, has played an important part in the Spain of the past, says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Burgos, with only 32,000 inhabitants, rises from the heart of a rolling plateau about 130 miles due north of Madrid," continues the bulletin.

"As capital of the province of Burgos, it was normally a quiet city which the hard-working farmers, shepherds and foresters in the province used as their market place. Irrigated fields form green patches along the valley of the Aranzon river, but much of the district surrounding the city is arid and barren like parts of the tableland of Mexico. Where water is available, however, good crops thrive—chiefly grains and chick peas.

Once Capital of Old Castile.
"While Burgos may have no boast as to high rank among urban centers on the Iberian peninsula, it is rich in history and in architectural treasures. Until 1087, when the royal residence was moved to Toledo, it was the capital of Old Castile. It is hinted that the crumbling castle above the city is one of the main reasons for the name of Castile.

"Even after the transfer of the royal residence, Burgos was still the scene of much royal pomp, splendor, and treachery. Several kings were crowned there, and some were born within its walls.

The Past

IT IS because so much of the past still exists in our lives that it is so dear to us. These are compensations for the loss of old and fresh impressions; and one learns little by little that a thing is not over because it is not happening with noise and shape or outward sign; its roots are in our hearts; and every now and then they send forth a shoot which blossoms and bears fruits still.

—Anne Ritchie.

Great minds erect their never-failing trophies on the firm base of mercy.—Massinger.

Fillmore, "Luxury-Loving Monster," Brought in Tub

Uncritical writers are fond of observing that Millard Fillmore was the most uninspiring and least impressive of all Presidents. But he did one big thing for the country. He introduced the bathtub to official and polite society.

Eighty-five years ago, a Cincinnati merchant imported one from England and Fillmore had a chance at it, and then he ordered the war department to call for bids. In 1831 the White House bathtub was installed and Fillmore was denounced as an unholly plutocrat, a luxury-loving monster!—Tulsa World.

le, then a magnificent stronghold, was the scene of his marriage to Ximena, who is buried with him in the Cathedral. One of the town's saddest days was that of their hero's return, when all doors were closed against him by the jealous king's command, and the grieving populace had to do their hero-worshipping silently from their windows.

"Remnants of warlike days survive in the city. The castle, demolished by the French after it had successfully resisted the forces of the mighty Wellington, flaunts its ruins from the hill. Four fortified gates remain, as well as a pleasant walkway, called the Paseo de los Cubos, the Promenade of the Tubs, because it passes a row of tublike circular bastions of the old wall.

"On the outskirts of Burgos stands the convent of Las Huelgas, to which only noble women were admitted. Its abbess for 500 years ranked second only to the queen of Spain, and had power of life and death, 'the gallows and the knife,' over all who came within her jurisdiction."

YOU CAN ALWAYS GET TO TOWN

with Firestone GROUND GRIP TIRES

GROUND GRIP TIRES bring a new freedom to the farmer—freedom to go anywhere, any time, in any weather. No longer do bad roads, snow and thaws mean isolation.

In deep snow, mud or sand, Firestone Ground Grip Tires go right through without spinning or stalling—you can always get to town.

The Firestone Ground Grip Tire was developed to overcome the difficulties of winter transportation on the farm. Firestone engineers, working under the personal direction of Harvey S. Firestone on his Columbiana, Ohio, farm, tested and proved the Ground Grip Tire under the worst possible weather and road conditions. This tire is so different in design and so superior in performance that a patent on it was issued by the United States Patent Office. The heavy rubber lugs of the tread are without equal for traction. They take hold and keep going where other tires get stuck—and you don't need chains.

Don't let bad roads and bad weather keep you isolated this winter. See your nearby Firestone Implement Dealer, Firestone Tire Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store today.
