Considering Our Duties

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Chilled, diced oranges mixed with pineapple and sprinkled with coconut make a delicious dessert.

Healthy experts find food poisoning of human beings large pig experiments and cases in food poisoning were recorded in the year 1921 in Ohio. The germ that causes this disease is a dysentery bacillus known as the "pig-camp" or the "dysentery of the pig-camp." The disease is caused by spoiled or over-refined meats, fish, or eggs, or by milk that has not been properly kept. The symptoms are diarrhea and fever, which may range from mild to severe. The disease is spread by contaminated food and water. The best way to prevent food poisoning is to cook food thoroughly, to wash hands and utensils before and after handling food, and to avoid eating raw or undercooked meats, fish, or eggs.

How to Throw Off a Cold

To throw off a cold, gargle at least four times a day with a solution of salt and warm water. This helps to moisten the throat and reduce inflammation. The solution is made by dissolving 1/2 teaspoon of salt in a glass of warm water. Gargle for at least 30 seconds, allowing the liquid to flow down the throat. Repeat four times a day until the cold is gone.
