As we hasten to fortify Alaska, the Bering Sea takes its place belatedly among the earth's historical "touped waters," the Mediterranean, Caribbean, South China and North Sea.

The Bering was long immune to human desertion. Because it lies outside the routes of commerce, the Bering's frigate boats neither hurt nor harm. But the wrong approach to the North Pole. Viewed from that point of vantage, however, the Bering is a formidable body of water. It covers some 800,000 square miles between the Aleutian and continental tips of the straits.

Alaska's Bering Sea forms a vulnerable angle of our Pacific defense. The Aleutians extend like stepping stones for plane hops across the Pacif- ic to Kamchatka whence the Japa- nese archipelago continues its drive down the Asiatic coast. Russia is said to be constructing an air base on its side of the straight, but that is a remote and insignificant danger to us right now. Thousands of miles of mountains and continental arctic climate separate it from Soviet supply bases by land and 2,000 miles by sea. Our Pacific defense contests other serious threats.-Exchange.

POLIO VICTIM IN LUNG GIVES BIRTH TO SON

Indianapolis—An 18-year-old victim of infantile paralysis, Mrs. Ruby Cook, Darlington, Ind., farm wife, fought the germ of an "irregular" baby today after leaving the respirator long enough to give the air to a three-pound boy.

The child was born prematurely last Saturday evening in a Chicago hospital. It died at 6 a.m. today.

Unable to breathe, Mrs. Cook was placed upon the respirator through an incision during the operation. She is in a critical condition.

Mrs. Cook became ill a week ago. She has lived in the respirator ever since last Thursday.

Shortage Of Labor May Appear
Probable As Defense Work Starts

New York, — Signs indicate that the task of universal military training and quickened production of defense equipment will be on job back of the Defense Board, and the labor situation, as it bears upon the problem of shortages in specific industries, could soon take a turn.

The problem of labor shortages has been a threat to industrialists and workers alike, as the nation geared up for war. The shortage of labor has been particularly acute in areas where defense industries are located, such as Kentucky and Louisville.

Battle Of Rival Caves Is Now Being Fought Out In Courts

Ogden, Ky. — A battle of the state's most famous caverns, lasting for years in the lower-level entrances to Mammoth and Mammoth Cave, reached new phases Monday in Barren Circuit Court, operators of the two popular attractions engaging in competitive methods.

Management of Mammoth Cave National Park and of Great Onyx Cave, a private cavern west of the park—have been seeking to make the other quit trying to lure tourists into their caves.

In the interior hearing in Barren Circuit Court, the witnesses have been accused of telling "packs of lies" and posing as people they weren't in order to lure tourists into their caves.

There's more beneath the surface in the cave business than just the rock in trade. It appears from Monday's account of how "bills"excavate from one cave to another in various phases of a cave that all the parties are seeking to outdo each other.

Mammoth Cave operators have been in court for more years, in constant battle with tax disparities and recently as the result of a court order to correct the condition. But this is the first time such a battle has been fought.

Great Onyx Cave operators have been in court for many years, in constant battle with tax disparities and recently as the result of a court order to correct the condition. The court has ordered the parties to cease and desist from any further action.
