Trip to St. Louis.

Some of the members of the Vincennes University Band went to St. Louis on a day trip. They went up by passenger train. The trip was uneventful, except for a slight delay at Paducah, but at that place they went on the freight train and made a successful trip. The time of departure was about 10:30 A.M., and they arrived at St. Louis about 2 P.M. The weather was lovely and the train was in good order. They spent the afternoon at the fair and in looking around the city. The trip was a success and the band returned to Vincennes the same night. The trip was a success and the band returned to Vincennes the same night.

W. A. Mitchell and his wife, Miss Florence Mitchell, went to St. Louis on Wednesday, and there they will spend the winter.

In 1893, the United States government passed the Sherman Antitrust Act, which was designed to prevent monopolies and cartels from forming. The act was written by Thomas N. Johnson, who was a member of the Democratic Party and a supporter of President Ulysses S. Grant. The act was signed into law by President Grant on September 24, 1890, and it became known as the Sherman Act.

The Sherman Act prohibits the formation of cartels or other agreements that restrain trade or commerce. It also prohibits the acquisition of a controlling interest in another company, unless the acquisition is for the benefit of the company that acquires the interest. The act also prohibits the use of any means to monopolize or attempt to monopolize a market.

The act has been used to address a wide range of issues, from the formation of cartels to the acquisition of a controlling interest in another company. It has also been used to address issues related to the monopolization of a market, such as the use of patents to prevent competition.
