MRS. NAPIER ENDS LIFE WITH PISTOL

Mrs. John Napier, wife of John Napier, merchant who operates a general store on the Fulton-Union City highway, ended her life early Friday morning with a pistol in her hand. She had been in ill health for some time, which was given as the cause for her act. Mr. Napier had just left the house to open his store nearby when the shot was heard. He called in neighbors, but death was instantaneous, the bullet fired from a pistol, having entered her heart.

Funeral services were conducted from the Union City First Baptist church Saturday afternoon by Rev. E. L. Carney. Interment followed in East View cemetery there. Deceased is survived by her husband, four sons, two daughters; her father, Jake Smith and one sister, Mrs. Ora Hammonds of Union City.

Quake Is Felt In Reelfoot Lake Region

A slight earth tremor last Friday near Tiptonville, Tenn., injected a new and fearsome element into the Mississippi valley flood fight where 115,000 men labored with shovels and sandbags to hold levees intact against the destructive super flood. Levee workers and townspeople there reported brief trembling of the earth early Friday morning, in the area where a century ago an earthquake formed famous Reelfoot Lake. Fearing a break in the levee would destroy Reelfoot Lake, a hasty inspection was made with no damage by earthquake indicated.

SO. FULTON SCHOOL

By James Donald Hall

LETTER

Lillian Vaughn recently received a letter from Japan as part of a project in Geography. The letter was from Yukio Kitaguchi, an eighteen-year-old student. It was written in a good hand and excellent English with good spelling. The writer of the letter stated his subjects in school were English, German, Chinese, Japanese, and Economics. He is a member of the Y. M. C. A. His greatest ideal is to "realize the Kingdom of God in Japan." A beautiful Christmas card with a painting by Hiroshige, one of the great Japanese painters, was enclosed in the letter.

SENIORS

The Seniors presented an unusually interesting program at assembly last week. It was in the form of a tableau, representing the various stages of life—childhood, school days, sweethearts, marriage, middle age, and old age were presented effectively.

RED CROSS

Many donations of bundles of things for the refugees have been brought in by pupils of all grades. These have been turned over to the Red Cross.

EDITORIAL

Complaints are often heard by persons who say they have no opportunity to get an education. The following is an excerpt from a paper edited by a former South Fulton student: "There is no excuse today for the ignorant man. No matter what his condition may be, he remains ignorant by choice, not by necessity. No man must leave his work for one hour in order to gain an education. He can educate himself while he works."

SCHOOL CONTINUES

With an adequate supply of coal and good attendance there seems little likelihood that the school will close.

HI-Y

Nothing has been heard from the Hi-Y Club lately. Wonder what has become of it?

VISITOR

Hussell Polsgrove visited in school Monday. He is home from Busch College in Paducah on account of an oversupply of muddy water in the school.

Games scheduled with Troy Friday night were not played on account of the use of the Troy gymnasium for refugees. Greenfield will play at South Fulton Friday, February 5.

Mrs. Thomason was called home from school Monday because of the illness of her husband, Miss Blanche Howard, fourth grade teacher, has been absent a few days with Mrs. D. D. Legg and Mrs. Clara Mae Kirkland have been filling in for them.

The freshman class is very proud of their class poet, Miss Dorothy Nanne. The following poem was composed by her.

There's many ways of death that is gruesome to see, But a flood seems to be one of the worst to me.

A flood, the enemy all over the land I can picture a ghastly light of a pale new moon

As it brings out the terror and the faces of those marooned. Death hovers around grim and mocking

While once happy homes are now in yellow waters rocking. Those waters reaching up snatching at human lives,

Separating children, men and wives Whirling along, a song of death Slushing, rushing, grasping,

Without asking, Until none is left. From my heart, Oh, hear this plea, God have mercy on the refugee.

CAIRO, HICKMAN AND SOUTH FULTON TEAM LAKE BATTLE FLOOD DEFEATS UNION CITY

Unless unexpected rainfall in regions at the headwaters cause additional rises, the flood, which has spread over the Ohio Valley, will have receded from many communities by the end of the week. The Ohio river is falling fast at Louisville and with Paducah entirely evacuated, it is believed to have suffered its greatest damage.

Levee workers at Cairo, Hickman and Reelfoot Lake region have been working what is believed to be a successful fight against the downpouring flood waters, and will doubtless be out of serious danger by the end of the week.

A strong wind out of the north caused some alarm at Tiptonville and also Hickman early in the week but reinforcements placed on the levee wall during the past few days have free board of two feet. No deaths have been reported from the levee break at Besiege, and relief workers believe that there will be few if any victims. Livestock losses have been heavy.

Fraser To Manage Parisian Laundry

D. Rayburn Fraser has been obtained to manage the Parisian Laundry here. R. C. Peoples, proprietor, announced this week. Mr. Fraser comes here from Paris, Tenn., where he was in charge of the Troy Laundry & Dry Cleaners for the past four years.

Mr. Fraser and his wife are graduates of the University of Mississippi. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, and Mrs. Fraser a member of the Delta Gamma society. He was a member of the Paris Rotary Club and chairman of the Community Service Committee.

Back in 1932 he operated a laundry at Union City until it was destroyed by fire and he has many friends in this section. Mr. Peoples, who is also owner of the Peoples 5-10c Store here, has secured Mr. Fraser to manage his laundry, in order that he may devote more time to other activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Fraser will move to Fulton to make their home, and will be welcomed by friends here.

Schools Reopen After Aiding In Flood

The Fulton City Schools will probably re-open Monday morning, February 8th, after being dismissed for the expected ten days. The gymnasium is ten days and the Bulldogs will continue their basketball schedule.

Some schools in Fulton, Hickman and Union counties, which have been closed to aid in flood relief, county schools, both high and elementary, not housing flood refugees, reopened Monday by order of W. H. Baldree, Graves County.

The schools have been closed since the flood relief. The schools have been closed since the flood relief. The schools have been closed since the flood relief.

WARNING TO FARMERS

The Agricultural Conservation office is asking farmers to be careful of buying alfalfa and red clover seeds because of the small supply of these seeds some dealers have purchased. European and Argentine seed, which are not adapted to the cool weather and will freeze out this far north. All seeds are required to have a tag on the bag indicating the place where they were grown and also all foreign seed has a small percent of seed that are stained with some coloring material, which makes them easy to identify from home grown seed.

The program and committee cannot approve payment for saving unapproved seeds and the indications are that unadapted alfalfa and red clover will not be acceptable.

WHY EARLY CHICKS

It is just about this time that an old question comes to the fore. This conversation will probably take place in many homes in the next few weeks, so let's drop in on the Jones' and see what they have to say.

"Now, John, you know it's going to turn cold any day and it will be hard on the chicks. Besides, chicken prices are so low that I can't see how we can make any money."

"I just think we ought to let them do for this year."

"The chicken business does look mighty discouraging when you look at it that way, but just because it's that way, doesn't mean it will stay that way. Look at it this way, Mary. Egg prices have been good all fall and they are in a temporary slump now due to the warm weather up north and the storage of eggs that are being moved on the market. Egg prices will go up in a few weeks. Now, there are very few chickens or cattle left in the mid-west due to last summer's drought. There is a shortage of beef and pork and wages are getting higher. Therefore the people are getting hungry and they need meat. That is going to create a big demand for chicken."

Even if they didn't buy more meat, the ordinary demand would be great enough to raise the price of meats what with the shortage of meat they will have. There you have a good price for meat coming this year."

"But, John, feed prices are so high this year, how can we afford to pay to feed them properly and make any money?"

"There again you have to look ahead, Mary. With all the rain we've been having it looks like this is going to be the biggest crop year we have had in a long time. Everybody is planting more acreage of grain this year and it looks like grain and winter wheat will be dirt cheap next fall. All get-out to feed chickens. Therefore I think we ought to keep on with the chicken business. And I cause we should get early chicks, because even with our home-made brooder and we will have the chickens ready to sell when the market is paying the highest prices for broilers. Then our chickens will be we grown out before the hot days of summer. They'll have their full growth and start laying in September. That way they will lay highest. We can cull the birds in October and do a better job of culling and hit the high market on springers."

"Well, maybe you're right, John. That discussion is worthwhile thinking over. John seemed to know what he was talking about; he has some very good reasons."

FLOOD CONTROL

This country faces a great national economic problem in solving the flood situation that exists in the Mississippi and Ohio valleys. Gradually, year after year, these and other sections of the country have seen streams grow fuller and fuller, covering wider areas. Floods are becoming more devastating, more widespread.

Floods are damaging to lives, property and business. This section has felt the disastrous effect of floods recently more than ever before, and can readily realize the vast importance of a real flood control plan. Before the lands were cleared the forests acted as a sponge, absorbing a large part of the excess rains and holding the moisture, thus preventing ing such floods.

Today the great bulk of the land in all watersheds of our great rivers are cleared and rains run off into the land just like water pours off concrete. So year by year the flood hazard has increased and along with it the damage from erosion, for when the water runs off so rapidly it carries the best top soil with it.

The result has been that even great rivers like the Ohio and Mississippi now rise as rapidly as a small creek. The ultimate solution seems to be the building of reservoirs in the headwaters of all the small rivers that feed the big rivers, to hold back the excess waters just as the forests did years ago.

But meanwhile a great flood is devastating a large section of our nation; hundreds of thousands are homeless and suffering.

A FRIEND IN NEED

(From Lexington, N. C. Dispatch)

A recent official summary of the high spots of the Resettlement Administration's work to date shows that loans to enable farm families to get a new chance have been made in 386,412 instances, with an average loan of about $230 per family. These are merely figures, but the news of it is that 76.5 percent of the money due on installments had been repaid when the summary was run up. Failure of crops in drought areas had prevented others from making any payments in which cases the due dates of the loans were merely extended.

The loans per family hardly amounted to as much as the same families would probably have drawn in relief funds, which would not have been repayable but would have been a total loss to the taxpayers. The Resettlement loans, it appears, have helped most of these farm families to make their own living and at the same time have enough advances made them. Some will have to have additional advances, no doubt, but there are said to be many instances where such in time has saved the other nine and hope has replaced discouragement.

The supervision that the Resettlement workers have furnished has been such as to enable the aided families to make many improvements in their style of living, and here is reason to believe that the benefits will raise the social and spiritual level of many, as well as the economic level. That was what President Roosevelt intended this money should accomplish. Where the aim is accomplished the whole society will benefit materially and culturally.

MORE BALONEY

A fellow citizen said to the Editor of this great family newspaper the other day: "When are you going to quit writing that baloney about buying in Fulton?" The Editor promptly replied: "Just as soon as you wake up to the fact that you are cutting your own throat to buy everything you want outside of Fulton."

So if you are also tired of reading about buying at home you had better skip this. We know as well as you do that there are limitations to buying at home, but if we all make a real effort to buy in Fulton many of these limitations would be removed. For instance, one kick is that you cannot get certain items here, but if everyone tried to buy them here the local merchants could afford to carry them and would.

Also there would be great rejoicing if we landed a new industry employing 50 people, but it is not any exaggeration to say that if everyone bought everything they could in Fulton, another 50 people could be and would be put to work. This would help every person in the community and would lead to further betterment. When you spend your money at home it forms an endless chain for good in the community.

If we were just a suburb of some other community—as they would like us to be—it would not make much difference, but we are not. Fulton is a community itself. A fine community with a fine future and it can realize that future if each of us will develop the right kind of spirit of enlightened self interest and realize that the community is merely the combination of all of us and what helps the community helps us.

So until our typewriter breaks down, or the big bad wolf gets us, we intend to hammer away at what we consider the most important thing to the community as a whole and to each individual in it.

APPROVED SOIL PRACTICES FOR 1937 ANNOUNCED

Rates of payment for soil-building practices in 1937, together with other provisions of the agricultural conservation program for Kentucky, are announced through the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Acreages of crop diversion this year will be about the same as in 1936, except that the maximum diversion from the barley tobacco base for which payment will be made is 25 percent instead of 30 percent.

Soil-building payments, in addition to diversion payments, will be made for carrying out soil-building practices. The maximum amount that can be earned as a soil-building payment for a farm is called the soil-building allowance, the same as in 1936. The soil-building payment will be the amount actually earned for carrying out specified soil-building practices.

The method of determining the soil-building allowance is different than was used last year. In general, farms not eligible to earn a diversion allowance will have slightly larger allowance than similar farms that are eligible to earn a diversion payment.

On farms eligible to earn a diversion payment, the soil-building allowance will include $1 times the minimum acreage of soil-conserving crops on the farm. The minimum acreage of soil-conserving crops for a farm will be the acreage of soil-conserving crops normally grown on the farm plus the number of acres diverted from soil-depleting bases in 1937.

On farms not eligible to earn a diversion payment, the soil-building allowance will include 75 cents times each acre of crop paid on the farm. In addition, the soil-building allowance for small farms, whether eligible to earn a diversion payment or not, will also include $1 for each acre of commercial or orchard crops on the farm Jan. 1, 1937.

On each acre on which only one crop of commercial vegetables were grown in 1936:

$2 for each acre on which two or more crops of commercial vegetables were grown in 1936.

25 cents for each acre of fenced, non-crop, open pasture land in excess of one-half the number of acres of crop land on the farm.

Legumes and Perennial Grasses. The following rates of payment are provided for planting approved soil-conserving crops:

Alfalfa, $2.50 an acre.
 Red clover, mammoth clover, sericea, kudzu and bluegrass, $2 an acre.
 Austrian winter peas, vetch, crimson clover, alsike clover, sweet clover, annual lespedeza, orchard grass and reed canary grass, $1.50 an acre.
 White clover, bur clover, crutchgrass, redtop and timothy, $1 an acre.

In case a mixture is used, the rate of payment will depend upon the kind and quality of legumes and grasses in the mixture.

Green Manure and Cover Crops. The following rates are provided for plowing or disking under crops of green manure after the crop has attained a normal growth of at least two months, or leaving on the land certain of these crops grown in 1937:

Soybeans, velvet beans or cowpeas plowed or disked under, $2 an acre.
 Crimson clover, Austrian winter peas or vetch, plowed or disked under, rye, barley, wheat, Italian ryegrass, oats, buckwheat or mixtures of these, plowed or disked under, sudan grass, millet, sorghum or rape, plowed or disked under, soybeans, velvet beans or cowpeas, not grazed or pastured or harvested for grain, when all of the forage is left on the land, and lespedeza left on the land, $1 an acre.

Payments also are provided for special orchard practices for growing crops to be left in orchards and for applying mulching materials in commercial orchards.

For planting forest trees payment will be made at the rate of $7.50 an acre when planted on crop land and at the rate of $5 an acre on other land. Payment also will be made for thinning desirable species of forest trees, if approved in advance by the county committee, at the rate of $2.50 an acre.

Limestone
 Payments for applying ground limestone will be based upon the number of tons applied, rather than the acres covered, as was the case last year. Also three different rates of payments will be applicable in the state, depending upon the cost of limestone in the respective counties.

For applying not less than 1,000 pounds an acre of ground limestone, or its equivalent, on crop land or non-crop pasture land, or not less than 500 pounds an acre, if the application is made by drilling with the seed of specified legumes or perennial grasses, payment will be made on a quantity not exceeding 2 1/2 tons an acre at the rate of $2.50 a ton in Knott, Leslie, Letcher, Perry and Pike counties; at the rate of $2 a ton in Bell, Breathitt, Clay, Floyd, Harlan, Johnson, Knox, Magoffin, Martin and Whitley counties, and in all other counties at the rate of $1.50 a ton.

Superphosphate
 For applying not less than 100 pounds an acre of 20 percent superphosphate, or its equivalent, on any permanent pasture, or in connection with seeding or maintaining specified legumes or perennial grasses, payment will be made on a quantity not exceeding 500 pounds per acre at the rate of 75 cents per 100 pounds. If the superphosphate is applied in connection with specified legumes or perennial grasses seeded in connection with soil-depleting crops, the payment will be at the rate of 37 1/2 cents per 100 pounds.

In connection with the practice of applying superphosphate, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration will make available a supply of triple superphosphate, which is approximately 40 percent phosphoric acid, at Sheffield, Alabama, within the limit of this supply, farmers may, upon request filed at the county office, and the payment of freight and handling charges obtained and use the triple superphosphate in lieu of receiving the payments which are otherwise provided for terrace crop land or non-crop pasture land which the county committee finds is in need of terracing with a sufficient amount of properly constructed terrace to give adequate protection against erosion. Payment will be made at the rate of 40 cents per 100 feet of terrace.

KAY FRANCIS IN "STOLEN HOLIDAY" AT ORPHEUM SUNDAY
 Kay Francis, perpetual favorite of this city, comes to the screen of the Orpheum Theatre in "Stolen Holiday," a First National film which depicts the rise of an obscure little French mannequin in a tiny modiste shop, to the position of queen of fashions for the whole world.

The name of Kay Francis instantly conjures up visions of magnificent gowns and no list of ten best-dressed women in the country fails to include her name, but "Stolen Holiday" is said to be not merely a fashion show. It is a tense drama, with rioting mobs on the streets of Paris, international, political and financial complications, and no end to suspense.

While advance reports indicate that there are plenty of "1937" gowns to be seen as Miss Francis advances her career as a designer, the beautiful costumes are merely incidental to the story.

Claude Rains, who triumphed in "Adventures in Paradise," appears as an unscrupulous financier who backs up in her ventures, until at last his complicated schemes crash about his head.

Ian Hunter, who has appeared in her recent several pictures, provides the love interest for Miss Francis in this one.

Alison Skipworth, Alexander Gray, Betty Lawford, Walter Connolly, Frank Reicher, Frank Conroy and other well-known players make up the balance of the nicely-rounded cast.

Michael Curtiz, who directed the sensational "Charge of the Light Brigade," guided the making of "Stolen Holiday" from a screen play original story by Warren Duff and Casey Robinson, based upon an Virginia Kellough.

KEYNOLDS PACKING CO. SHOWS INCREASE IN 1936
 The total amount of sales of Reynolds Packing Company of Union City showed an increase of over $170,000 over that in 1935, it was revealed in the report of W. G. Reynolds, president, at a stockholders meeting last week. The amount of sales in 1936 was $1,061,462.48 as compared with $887,934.62 in 1935.

The comparative tonnage for the two years also showed a substantial gain, 6,760,267 pounds being sold in 1936 and 5,076,688 pounds in 1935. Both tonnage and total sales for 1936 were even greater than the boom year of 1929.

Directors who served in 1936 were re-elected for the coming year, with one exception, Sol Shatz taking the place of Fenner Heathcock. Directors for 1937 are: W. G. Reynolds, W. P. Beard, L. M. Shore, A. F. Tittsworth, H. P. Moss, D. N. McClure, and Sol Shatz.

The Reynolds Packing Company has been in business since July 17, 1917.

FARM LOANS MADE AVAILABLE IN FLOOD STRICKEN AREA
 Thousands of dollars in farm credit loans will be made available to farmers of Western Kentucky as rehabilitation starts within the next few weeks, H. C. The Curse of Progress

Thespians

The class in public speaking was to give pantomimes that afternoon. One frosh got up when called on, went to the platform and stood perfectly still.

"Well," said the prof. after a minute's wait for something to happen. "What do you represent?"

"I'm imitating a man going up in an elevator," was the quick response.—Illinois Guardsman.

Conscience Hurts

Two men were seated in a crowded railroad car. One noticing that the other had his eyes closed, said: "Bill, are yer feelin' well?"

"I'm all right," said Bill, "but I do hate to see ladies standing."

She Knows

"Mummy, why must the orchestra eat in the interval?"

"I don't know what they do. Why do you ask?"

"Cos the program says that the second half of the concert will be played by a fuller orchestra."

THE RACE

By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

By L. L. STEVENSON

The term pocket miner doesn't mean the same in New York as it does in the West. Out where men are men and rocks are hard, the pocket miner is a legitimate citizen who digs gold out of pockets in the earth. In New York, the pocket miner is one who digs bills out of pockets of night club frequenters. He doesn't do it with deft fingers because police deal roughly with pickpockets, and there is always the chance of getting caught. He does it by trickery. The patron who has enjoyed a wet, wild night receives callers at his hotel room or office the next morning. They inform him that the night before, he wasn't himself. Seeing that he was a good fellow, the club had settled for a small amount and he had told them to call the next morning and collect the balance. If the victim shows signs of getting tough, they tell him that he'll either settle or there'll be unfavorable publicity. Most of the victims, in the throes of a hangover, have settled. Thus the racketeers flourish.

Recently two waiters and a clerk called on a local gentleman. He didn't remember much about the night before but when asked for two hundred dollars, he became suspicious. He didn't argue about the matter, however. He merely told his callers to come back the next day—presumably when he would feel better—and there would be a settlement. The trio accepted the invitation. The business man was as good as his word—he met the demand in full. There was just one catch—he had taken the precaution of having a couple of detectives stowed away on the premises in a place where they could both see and hear. So the waiters and the clerk were taken with their loot right on them and at the moment are roosting in the hoosegow. Other pocket miners are laying off because when a victim squawks and gets away with it, the game becomes too hot to handle.

Ordinarily a peace-loving citizen, there have been numerous times when the desire has possessed me to drive a tank or some other indestructible car along the highways of New York and bang into road hogs and those motorists who hurl insults when accidents, of their own inviting, are missed seemingly by a miracle. Hence an incident on Williamsburg bridge has a peculiar appeal. Two gentlemen in a car were not only driving too fast but carelessly. A passing motorist advised them as to their shortcomings and the two informed him what he was and where he could go. The other motorist speeded up and beat them to the end of the bridge. There they found a traffic officer acting as a reception committee. The quiet man they had insulted happened to be Lewis J. Valentine, who as police commissioner, is boss of all the cops.

As you know already, local merchant tailor designers hold that the well-dressed man must possess at least 19 suits and overcoats, the list being: Six business suits, a riding suit, an informal walking suit, a cutaway suit, a dinner suit, a host jacket, a full dress suit, a dress evening topcoat, a plain blue topcoat, a blue heavy-weight topcoat, a guard's coat, a yachting suit and a sport suit equipped with several pairs of trousers. Well, counting in the two white linen suits, one acquired in Trinidad and the other in Barbadoes and both several years old, as well as a two-season-old tropical worsted, I'm only 14 shy of the quota.

Under the energetic direction of Park Commissioner Moses practically the entire Hudson river front, from Seventy-second street to the upper end of the island, has been transformed, or is being transformed. In the course of time, it will be one long parkway, accessible to all who care to visit it, and that means hundreds of thousands. The Hudson river panorama at any season is one worthy of attention. It does look queer with many of the old landmarks missing.

Bustop eavesdropping: "He's no Clark Gable and he can't afford orchids, but I'm for him—he sneaks gifts to friendless old people."

Washington.—Two messages to congress by the President have created more excitement and attention upon such things, as the new session settled down to its annual consideration of public affairs. In each of these were Presidential declarations that are beginning to reverberate and that means they are highly controversial.

In Mr. Roosevelt's annual message "on the state of the Union," he took occasion to tell congress how much he appreciated its "co-operation" with him. He followed that bit of back patting with probably the boldest statement he has made since entering the White House four years ago for the first term. He called upon the Supreme Court of the United States, in a roundabout way to "co-operate" with the other two branches of the government, the legislative and executive.

The other wave of excitement, not to say disturbance, was caused by the President's special message asking congress for a wholesale reorganization of the executive departments and agencies—calling this proposal a plan for modernizing the government.

One can circulate through the corridors and offices of the Capitol and office buildings and hear mutterings aplenty and even a considerable bit of outspoken criticism by senators and representatives of the two circumstances I have mentioned. There are many members of the legislative branch who are entertaining a feeling that the demand for Supreme court co-operation was equivalent to carrying the ball out of bounds. But that part of the Presidential pronouncement is not likely, in the end, to produce the battle on the floor of the senate or house that will result from some phases of his "modernizing" program.

The fact is that our national government has become a structure, insofar as the executive agencies are concerned, that sprawls out like an octopus. About 75 per cent of these units and agencies are products of the New Deal recovery program; they work at cross purposes; they move in their own sphere and make their own policies with almost no direction from the White House. Certainly, the time is ripe to clean up that mess.

Yet, in cleaning up these conditions, in reorganizing, it is undoubtedly the consensus of those charged with responsibility for the job that common sense must be used and discretion employed or else untold damage will be done to the government and to the whole economic structure of the nation, including the taxpayers.

The Presidential reorganization program was sweeping in character and that is the reason why it has run into obstacles.

For example, the plan calls for placing the interstate commerce commission, the general accounting office, the federal trade commission and the civil service commission largely inside of old-established departments over which cabinet officers preside. Now, a cabinet officer is and always has been in the past a political appointee, an individual who had been active in promotion of a party campaign and usually one who has made important contributions of money to his party's campaign fund. So, it becomes plainly evident, I believe, that to place such agencies as those I have named in regular departments, is to place them completely under political domination.

Where it is good, therefore, to place strictly administrative agencies under cabinet control, it becomes equally dangerous to place under political domination such quasi-judicial agencies as the ICC and the general accounting office. There can be no doubt of that fact. That is the crux of the disturbance among the legislators under the reorganization proposal.

Those of us who have had long experience as writers and observers in Washington have seen evidence in almost every administration of attempts of politicians to get their fingers into the pie of railroad rate making. They have adopted all sorts of tricks; they have used subterfuges and they have employed strong political pressure time after time to gain control of railroad rate making. Through all of these years since the ICC was established, there has always been enough sane minds in congress who, with White House backing, could resist this political move. Naturally, therefore, it is a matter of some question why President Roosevelt should attempt to toss the interstate commerce commission and its rate making power straight into the laps of the politicians.

Of course, the Presidential message on this point appears on its face to provide against the end that I have mentioned but old timers in congress point out how this wedge, driven only a little further, will bring about political domination of the ICC.

It is hardly necessary here to set down all of the potential dangers that can emanate from political control of such a vast structure as the railroads of the United States. It is unlimited in its possibilities. Dangers are inherent in any program of that kind with which the politicians are identified and it appears to be a circumstance in which congress, if it is going to serve the people properly, should call a halt.

As to the general accounting office and the plan to include it in the Treasury again under the rule of an auditor general, the reorganization scheme simply will set control of public expenditures back a quarter of a century. One of the earlier Presidents made no effort to conceal the use that could be made of the auditing unit of the government when he said, on an occasion where the chief auditor ruled an expenditure illegal, that if it were not possible to change the ruling under the law, it still was possible to change the chief auditor.

I am not making a charge that the present administration desires to spend congressional appropriations illegally; but one cannot dodge the conversations that are taking place around the Capitol in which legislators recall how President Roosevelt criticized John R. McCullum when he was comptroller general for a decision that prevented use of public money in a manner desired by the President. To sum up this particular phase of the situation, one hardly need say more than that if the auditor general is a subordinate of the Secretary of the Treasury, he is likely to take orders from the Secretary of the Treasury, whoever that Secretary may be. And, since the Secretary of the Treasury is an appointee of the President and serves only at the President's pleasure, in my mind a link is established whereby the White House again will control determination of legality and illegality of expenditures.

There seems to be more support for inclusion of the civil service commission in the form of a civil service, administrator under an executive department than there is support for breaking up of the federal trade commission as the President proposed. Neither of these agencies has such an important bearing on the public as a whole as do the other two I have discussed. The plan to make the civil service administration subject to cabinet control was softened considerably by the President by inclusion of a proposal to make all government employees slow policy-making grades subject to civil service laws. That is a big step forward, provided it is not a ruse to permit packing the lists with adherents of one political party or the other, whichever may be in power.

The federal trade commission, like the interstate commerce commission, is a quasi-judicial body. There has been objection to its present setup as prosecutor, judge and jury but many legislators believe this can be corrected without emasculating the agency and destroying its identity by putting it into an executive department. It ought to be free and independent and ought not to have any politician in a cabinet chair telling it what to do when it seeks to make business be honest.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle-aged surgeon, is possessed of seemingly supernatural powers. He is able to anticipate what people say before they utter a word; occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Mrs. Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, however, is in love with Dan Carlisle, an assistant professor at the University who has little means.

"It was terrible," she assured him, smiling through tears. "I thought I'd die! Nothing ever did hurt so. Please be sorry for me."

"Sorry? Honey, I'd—" He hesitated, and his eyes clouded, and he released her. He said awkwardly: "I'll get your coat. You'll be chilled."

"I'll never be cold again, darling," she vowed.

But he left her while he fetched her coat and his sweater. She looked ruefully at the red blaze on her knee.

"That's going to be black and blue," she told him, when he returned.

"And red, and orange, and yellow," he predicted. "You let your father look at it. It might need something."

"I think it's grand," she said, smiling at him as he knelt beside her, drawing him near. "I hope it stays that way for days and days."

And a moment later she said: "If I'd known it took that to make you—do this, I'd have let a ball hit me long ago!"

He frowned miserably. "Nancy, I shouldn't have—kissed you."

"Why not?" she demanded. "I liked it. I think you should do it again."

He protested: "You know darned well I can't, darling."

"Why can't you?" she challenged.

"It's just a matter of common sense," he urged. "You know what your father and mother—"

"Is it them you want to marry?" she demanded hotly. "Dan, you make me tired!"

"I know," he said. "And I'm sorry. But—my salary is less than your dress-allowance. And it will never be much larger. I'll be a professor, eventually, of course; but you know what that means. It might be years before we could even manage to keep a cook!"

"Will you please get it through your thick head," she insisted, "that I want to marry you. Do you think I'm afraid of working, of being poor, or anything, as long as I have you?"

"It isn't what you think, sweet," he said. "It's your mother and father!"

She said after a moment, seriously: "Mother's all right. I can count on her. She knows you, your people—knows how fine you are. But father might be unreasonable."

Her brow furrowed. "I've never felt that I—know father very well," she confessed. "He's given me everything, done everything for me; and I know he's proud of me. But I always have a feeling it's a sort of impersonal, possessive pride. Sometimes I'm afraid of him!"

"Nonsense," he urged. "He's a mighty able man, and a fine man. I don't blame him; but Nancy, from his point of view, you rate some one a lot better than me!"

She drew the coat more snugly around her shoulders. "He shouldn't interfere," she said, a faint desperation in her tones; and suddenly she clung to him. "Dan, Dan, I want you. I want you."

He held her close and tenderly; and when he spoke, his head was high. "All right, Nancy," he said simply. "I don't know how well I manage it, but what you want is what it's going to be. We'll work it out, somehow. I'll see your father."

He saw her eyes shadow with faint fear. "Not yet," she objected. "Let's not tell anyone yet."

He chuckled reassuringly. "Whatever you say," he assented. "Now run along and get that shower! Good-by."

When, an hour or so later, Doctor Greeding came home, he alighted from the car at the side door, and came into the house while Thomas took the car to the garage. But in the small side hall, he paused, attentive, and stood for a moment motionless, almost as though he were listening; but there was nothing to hear. Yet his posture suggested that he heard something, or sensed something.

And this was in fact the case. After an instant he saw the rackets and balls where Dan had laid them down; and he crossed and picked up a ball, and then a racket, and held them in his hands. He frowned faintly, and looked right and left. The question in his mind was answered now, and the answer was unwelcome.

He put down the tennis gear and ascended the stairs. Nancy's room was opposite the head of the stairs; he hesitated, then knocked on her door. She called sleepily:

"Who is it?"

"Mother home, Nancy?" he asked.

"I don't think so. I don't know. I've been asleep," he protested.

"All afternoon?" he protested, without opening the door. "On a fine day like this?"

After a moment she replied, "No," she said. "I played tennis for a while."

"Who with?" he asked, carefully casual.

Again it was an instant before her answer came. "Judith Plank came over," she replied at last.

At that word, the man's brows drew together, and a surge of unaccustomed anger swept him; but without comment, he went on toward his own room. He closed the door behind him and stood alone there, his head bent, his thoughts racing. For he knew that Nancy had lied; and that his daughter should lie to him, since it implied a criticism of himself, woke in the man a fretful rage.

It was a moment before he perceived in her mendacity the further implication that she was fond of Dan Carlisle; and Doctor Greeding's eyes flickered at the thought, as heat lightning on a sultry day flickers along distant hills.

He saw that the door into Mrs. Greeding's dressing room was open, and crossed to the door and spoke her name; but she was not there.

He stood in the doorway, looking around this room furnished in a fashion so distasteful to him. The black-and-white chairs, the gaudy draperies, that hideous, ridiculous malformed chunk of marble, shapeless, meaningless. All the anger aroused in him by the knowledge that Nancy had lied, and what her lie implied, concentrated suddenly upon this ugly marble.

He crossed and picked it up in his hands, turning it over and over, hating it. He wished to break it into bits, smash it to dust. He abhorred this harmless chunk of marble with an unreasoning venom. It was the scapegoat upon which he poured out his wrath.

And while he stood thus, holding the marble in his hand, a strange thing occurred: Suddenly the statuette was no longer in his grasp. Rather, it was snatched away from him as though by an invisible force. The thing left his hands, and for an instant, while time stood still, it seemed to waver in the air. Then it fell to the floor. The fall was no more than a few feet; yet the solid marble, even before that impact, appeared to burst apart in midair. It lay in a litter of shards and dusty fragments.

Doctor Greeding's eyes distended with an incredulous astonishment, with something like dismay. He stood for a long time looking down at this rubbish. Then he wiped his brow and went softly back into his own room.

CHAPTER II

Doctor Greeding closed the door behind him, as unceremoniously as a guilty small boy. Mrs. Greeding, he knew, treasured that absurd statuette; she would be when she saw it broken, querulous and angry. But this in itself was not enough to account for the inward disturbance which shook him.

It was incredible that a fall of three or four feet upon a hardwood floor should have shattered that solid chunk of marble into a hundred pieces; yet it had! Another man would have dismissed the incident as casual mischance; but Doctor Greeding even in this moment suspected that something within himself, something violent and explosive, had struck the statuette and shattered it to dust. He rejected the thought with all the power of his logical and scientific mind; yet it persisted.

And he had, too, that sensation common to every man: the certainty that somewhere, somehow, this had happened to him before. He was even able presently to identify this memory. As a boy on the farm he had been whipped one day, and sent to his room to reflect upon his sins. There a lamp, at which he was staring unseeing through a mist of angry tears, somehow toppled off the table beside him and fell and was broken. Accused, he denied—in honest sincerity—that he had touched either table or lamp, and was whipped again for his denial. His father, between strokes of the strap, said vehemently:

"One thing I can't stand is a lying young one, Ned! I'll take it out of you!"

And Doctor Greeding remembered that hour now. That day, sent to his room, he had been in a brooding fury at the thrashing he had just received. This day like-wise he was filled with a tempestuous rage. After his conversation with Ira Jerrell, the discovery that Nancy had been playing tennis with Dan Carlisle was enough in itself to disturb him. Dan, from Doctor Greeding's point of view, was a penniless instructor, with no prospects worth considering—and no discoverable ambition likely to lead to financial success. Certainly he was not equipped to rival Ira Jerrell.

Yet he was young, and even Doctor Greeding could perceive a certain charm in him. So, finding that Dan and Nancy had been this day together, the man was quick to a jealous alarm. When Nancy lied to him, his uneasiness became anger—which, translated and focused upon a material object, had shattered solid marble into dust!

Doctor Greeding contemplated these facts in silence, conscious of strange stirrings in himself. Presently he pressed the bell. Ruth, the second maid, answered. She was a thin, pale, black-haired woman, who habitually wore an expression of pained disapproval. She and Margaret, the fat cook, had served Doctor and Mrs. Greeding loyally for many years.

"Fetch me a cocktail," Doctor Greeding directed.

"A cocktail?" Ruth echoed, in protesting astonishment; for Doctor Greeding was an abstemious man, not given to drinking alone.

"Certainly," he said crisply. Then with a cautious feeling that some explanation was necessary: "I'm tired. I'll lie down awhile. Are we dining at home?"

"No sir," she told him. "At the Jordans'."

And she disappeared.

He had removed his outer garments and put on a dressing-gown before she returned with the shaker and a glass upon a tray. She set them grudgingly on his table and withdrew; and he drank two or three cocktails, quickly, standing at the window where he might watch for Mrs. Greeding's return. There was a deep impatience in him; and when his wife's open roadster presently turned in from the street, he swung about toward her dressing-room, waiting for her to come upstairs.

He could hear her in the hall below giving some instruction to Ruth; and he resented the delay. Then he heard her come up the stairs, heard her open the door of her dressing-room, next his own; and then her instant cry of consternation, and then her call:

"Ruth! Ruth!"

The maid came hurriedly up the stairs, and Mrs. Greeding demanded: "What happened to my statuette, Ruth? Look at it!"

The Doctor stood by the closed door between their rooms, listening.

"I don't know, Mrs. Greeding," Ruth indignantly protested. "I didn't know anything about it. I haven't been in the room since just after you left."

"Who's been here?" Mrs. Greeding demanded. "Who's been up stairs? It couldn't just fall; and even if it did, it wouldn't break all to bits like that! That statuette was valuable, Ruth. If you did it, you might as well tell the truth."

"I didn't, Mrs. Greeding," the woman insisted stiffly.

And Mrs. Greeding said apologetically: "Of course not. I didn't mean to seem to doubt you. But who else has been upstairs?"

"Only Miss Greeding, and the Doctor," Ruth returned.

Then Doctor Greeding opened the door between the two rooms. "Hello, Myra," he said casually.

"What's the trouble?"

Mrs. Greeding turned toward him. She was a large, fair woman, with hair a little too insistently yellow.

"Ned!" she cried. "Some one's broken my statuette! See!"

"Probably fell off the stand," he suggested.

"Nonsense!" she cried indignantly. "A fall might have cracked it; but it's just ground to bits. Look!"

"It must have been an accident, Myra," he urged impatiently. "Never of mind that now. You can get another. I want to talk to you!"

He looked toward Ruth, and the woman grimly disappeared.

"Another?" Mrs. Greeding cried indignantly. "Another indeed! Ned, don't you realize that works of art don't come by the dozen! That statuette was unique! It was one of Payson's things, and he's practically my discovery, and that would have been priceless when he became known. Another! Ned, sometimes you're the most irritating man!"

Doctor Greeding fought to keep his voice under control. The affair of the statuette was disquieting enough, certainly; but there were other matters better worth discussing. He managed a smile.

"I'm sorry, Myra. Perhaps if you subsidize Payson sufficiently, he'll do you a copy. I expect he'll be glad of the commission."

"But he can't, Ned! Works of art—"

Doctor Greeding said sharply: "Tosh, Myra! Drop it, can't you?"

"But it looks as though some one had just pounded it and pounded it," she urged, in an increasing mystification. "It couldn't possibly break all up that way just by falling."

He said irascibly: "Will you be still! Forget the fool thing. It isn't worth all this talk, surely!"

She stared at him shrewdly.

"Ned, you've been drinking!" she cried. "I can always tell. Your eyes are red. Whatever has happened to upset you? It isn't like you to come home and get drunk and—"

He cried in a deep exasperation: "Stop it, Myra!"

She was, suddenly, pale. "Why, of course, Ned," she said placatingly. "I didn't mean—"

She seemed puzzled, incredulous. She came to him, kissed him. "I'm sorry, Ned. I didn't mean to bother you. Had a hard day?"

"No," he barked.

"Then you're worrying about one of your patients?"

He shook his head, patted her shoulder roughly. "Not at all," he insisted. "I'm a little tired, nothing more." He released her, and she turned back to the dressing-table.

"We must dress now," she said. "We're dining at the Jordans' you know."

"Ruth told me," he assented.

She began to undress. "You'd better hurry, or you'll be late," she said.

He hesitated, but the time was in fact short; and in such matters he was punctilious. He went to his own room, to the shower. But presently, fitting his studs, he came to the door between their rooms again, and saw that she was brushing her hair; he asked in a tone carefully casual:

"Nancy going with us?"

"No," Mrs. Greeding told him. "She's going somewhere with Judith."

His collar pinched his neck as he fumbled with the button; he made a wry face. "Not alone, surely," he protested. His tone was light, amused. "I don't suppose two girls as pretty as Nancy and Judith are likely to go anywhere alone."

"I don't know," she admitted. "I didn't ask! Ford Minick, maybe, or Ethan, or Pete Master, or some of that crowd."

"Nancy doesn't seem particularly interested in any special young man," he remarked. "Or at least, if she is, she conceals the fact from the paternal eye."

"Probably there will be, by and by," his wife agreed. "Nancy'll tell us when she's ready."

The Doctor was conscious of a reservation in her words.

Worn Teeth in Predmost Skulls Puzzle to Scientists Who Welcome Suggestions

What the ancient men of Predmost, in Moravia, carried in their mouths to wear down their teeth, is puzzling European archeologists. As far back as 1871 fossil bones were found at this little hill not far from the modern university city of Brno. Fifty years ago a Moravian schoolmaster named K. J. Maska discovered bones of 20 or more human beings apparently buried in a common grave and enough like each other to make experts regard them all as members of the same family group.

Bones of the extinct elephant called the mammoth disclose the Predmost dwellers as hunters of this beast. Skillfully carved objects of bone and other artistic remains, as well as the prevailing large size of the Predmost skulls, prove the people to have been one branch of the famous Cro-Magnon race. Recently Dr. Jirnich Matiegka, of the University of Prague, reported a new study of all human skulls found at the Predmost site.

Like the skulls of all primitive people, these show much wear of the teeth, usually blamed on sand and grit in food. Among the Predmost adults, however, the right upper jaw shows a special kind of molar tooth. Tobacco was unknown in Predmost days so one cannot imagine this wear caused by stems of pipes, recently stated the Baltimore Sun. A habit of carrying pebbles in the mouth has been suggested but there seems no special reason for this.

The climate was not dry enough to cause much thirst. Perhaps blowpipes of some sort were used but no remains of such pipes have been found. Dr. Matiegka and other Czechoslovakian archeologists will welcome any reasonable suggestion.

Writes His Play After Audience Arrives

Thackeray and some other great Victorians used to write their novels with the publisher's messenger waiting at their elbow, but Mr. Aubrey Menon, a young London dramatist, is currently beating even this record, by writing his play after the audience arrives. This recalls the Italian Commedia dell'Arte of the Middle Ages, when the actors improvised the play. The Commedia dell'Arte, however, was helped by dealing with stories long established by tradition. But Mr. Menon lets his audience choose the subject of his play out of the evening newspapers. — Philadelphia Inquirer.

Doeskin and chamois gloves become stiff and harsh unless washed in tepid suds and rinsed in slightly soapy water.

Going to the Party?

WHERE is the party? At Mrs. Smith's on Walnut street and it looks awfully much as though the principals were caught by the candid camera. Luckily, however, they're perfectly groomed for their parts.

Introducing Janet.
Janet in her jumper (Pattern 1996) is asking Mother which glassware to use. Her plaid blouse in taffeta makes her feel very dressed up. Mother chose this style because the many possibilities for change make it a wardrobe rather than a dress and she knew it would be easy-to-make. Your own little girl may have this same ensemble in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1 1/2 yards of 39 inch material for the jumper and 1 1/2 yards for the blouse.

Mother, the Hostess.
Mother is the perfect hostess, calm and assured, because she knows her all-occasion frock with its sprightly crisp apron (Pattern 1220) is becoming and appropriate. For house wear she made up this model in print. She is wearing here the crepe version and knows that it will be delightful for later on in cool black and white. It comes in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46. The dress and apron in size 36 require 5 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. The apron alone requires 1 1/2 yards.

Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fourth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins. Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical; only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

Why Laxatives Fail In Stubborn Constipation

Twelve to 24 hours is too long to wait when relief from clogged bowels and constipation is needed, for then enormous quantities of bacteria accumulate, causing GAS, indigestion and many restless, sleepless nights.

If you want REAL, QUICK RELIEF, take a liquid compound such as Adlerika. Adlerika contains SEVEN cathartic and carminative ingredients that act on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Most "overnight" laxatives contain one ingredient that acts on the lower bowel only.

Adlerika's DOUBLE ACTION gives you relief in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight results. This famous treatment has been recommended by many doctors and druggists for 35 years. Take Adlerika one-half hour before breakfast or one hour before bedtime and in a short while you will feel marvelously refreshed.

DON'T RUB YOUR EYES

Rubbing your eyes grinds invisible particles of dust and dirt right into the delicate tissues, making the irritation just that much worse. A much better way, as thousands have discovered, is to use a little Murine in each eye—night and morning. Murine may be depended on to remove eye irritation because it is a reliable eye preparation containing 7 active ingredients of known value in caring for the eyes. In use for 40 years. Ask for Murine at your drug store.

How to Ease a Cold Quickly

1. Take 2 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets and drink a full glass of water. Repeat treatment in 2 hours.

2. If throat is sore, crush and stir 3 BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in 1/2 glass of water. Gargle twice. This eases throat rawness and soreness almost instantly.

Get Quick-Acting, Quick-Dissolving Bayer Aspirin. Take 2 Tablets

The modern way to ease a cold is this: Two Bayer Aspirin tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on. Then repeat, if necessary, according to instructions in the box.

At the same time, if you have a sore throat, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. And gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will act to combat the fever and pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain, acting like a local anesthetic on the irritated membrane of your throat.

Try this way. Your doctor, we know, will endorse it. For it is a quick, effective means of combating a cold. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's—not for "aspirin" alone.
