THE INDIAN SUMMER MYTH

For many years most of us have been implicitly believing that there is such a period as Indian Summer. In that delightful period which comes just as summer ends and before autumn arrives, some of the most delightful weather of the entire year comes. Days are warm, but not uncomfortably so, and quick chill winds blow with perhaps a touch of frost, adding a haze on the horizon, and for many years we have cherished the belief in Indian Summer. We resolutely refuse to believe that there is no real Indian summer. Increasingly evident that all these things are that we need as many of the childhood illusions left in this world of ours. It is becoming more and more the case that the entire world is more and more convinced that there is no such thing as the "hot foot." This writer is going to flatly refuse to believe that there is no such thing as the "hot foot."

OUR SOCIAL PROBLEM STILL

In all probability, most of the young men who are eligible for the draft will be drafted the last two or three decades hence. At that time, the draft will be given much more weight than it is now. It is true that the Army is not a sanitarium, but the Army is still the best that we have to offer. It is true that the Army is not a sanitarium, but the Army is still the best that we have to offer. It is true that the Army is not a sanitarium, but the Army is still the best that we have to offer.

The Leader will gladly correct any error in facts or writing. It is becoming more and more evident that all these things are that we need as many of the childhood illusions left in this world of ours. It is becoming clearer and clearer that there is no such thing as the "hot foot."

Tigers And Greyhounds Split

Labor Day Double Header

The Tigers and Greyhounds battled with two men on base. This game saw two pitchers on the mound at once, as each team had a lead. The Tigers, with an early 2-0 lead, were eventually tied by the Greyhounds in the seventh inning. Peterson himself tied the game, and Gallo laid down the sacrifice bunt to drive in the tying run. The game ended in a tie, 2-2.
