KITTY LOOP MEETING IN FULTON SUNDAY

Officials of the Kitty League, representing clubs from Paducah, Mayfield, Owensboro, Fulton, Lexington, Jackson and Union City, will attend a conference at Fulton Sunday. Dr. Frank Bassett, president of the league, will be present. Dr. Bassett told R. L. Myre, who shares ownership of the Paducah franchise with Holland G. Bryan, over the telephone Tuesday that schedules would be issued and each club owner presented with a copy of the league rules at Sunday's meeting.

The Shaughnessy playoff system adopted at an earlier meeting of the Kitty, is due to encounter some opposition at Sunday's parley. The Shaughnessy system provides for the first four teams at the end of the season to stage a playoff to determine the league champion.

If a club should finish in fourth place 20 games behind the leader over a season's stretch and then beat that team in a short series, it would be awarded the league championship.

Paducah's new deal baseball magnates will attend the meeting here Sunday. W. G. Branchman, president of the National Association of Professional Leagues, has advised the Paducah baseball club that he has requested Joseph Carr, director, to aid Paducah in its effort to secure a connection with a team in a higher league.

Ned Porter Signed As New Fulton Baseball Manager

Ned Porter, of Apalachicola, Fla., was signed this week as manager of the Fulton Kitty League team. Billy Atkins, secretary of the Fulton Baseball Association, announced. Spring training is scheduled to start here April 20th, and most of the players with the club last season will be back again. The Nashville association will co-operate with the Fulton club this year, furnishing seven of the players for the try-outs. Porter, who is a pitcher and plays in the field during his relief periods will be a player-manager. He is an experienced baseball man, having played in various classes of the game including major leagues. It is believed that Fulton will have a much stronger team this year.

Several improvements are to be made at Fairfield park here, including enlargement of the grandstand and construction of new boxes for visiting clubs.

Rural Electrification Meeting On March 19th

On Friday afternoon, March 19th at 1:00 P.M., Mr. J. Warner Pyles, a representative of the Rural Electrification Administration at Washington will address the farmers of Fulton county on the possibilities of organizing and securing electricity for the rural sections of the county.

It is important that all farmers that are interested in electric service attend this mass meeting as it will be the only meeting of this nature in the county unless the meeting is attended the development will be slow and no assurance can be given as to when action can be expected on the project.

Under the proposed plan no customer will have to pay any of the initial cost to have lines constructed and no customer will have any liability of any kind except to pay for the electricity that he uses. No mortgages will be placed on any of the farmer's property and he will not be liable for any damages done from falling wire. The purpose of the program is to serve rural people with electricity at a low price in order that they may use the power for labor saving machines that will give the rural family the same conveniences that are enjoyed by the people living in the city.

The Administration also has a plan whereby a loan can be made in order to wire homes and buy electrical appliances, water pumps and plumbing.

This is the opportunity that we have been waiting for, and it is hoped that every farm family will attend this meeting in order that it will be possible to determine the amount of interest in the project.

Committee Hits Snag In Factory Plan Here

A committee of the Fulton Development Company and the Fulton Chamber of Commerce have struck a snag in the plan to construct an addition to the old cigar factory building, contracted for by the Henry I. Seigel Co., and further developments remained uncertain up to press time today.

When the project was first started J. E. Fall, president of the Chamber of Commerce, pointed out, it was believed that only $35,000 was needed to build the addition. Later it was decided that $40,000 would be required to construct the addition, install heating plant and sprinkler system for fire protection. Several Fulton men agreed to underwrite the difference of some $5,000, and directors of the Fulton Development Company were authorized to let a contract up to $40,000.

But recently when bids were let, the lowest figure for construction work as entered by one of the nine bidders, was a little more than $52,000. That figure tops the subscription some $12,000, it is announced officially.

Several propositions have been submitted to the manufacturing concern, and these proposals are being considered in the New York office. Until an answer is given from that source no further plans are being made for the factory.

TAXPAYERS MUST PAY MORE SCHOOL TAXES

Taxpayers of Fulton will have to pay an additional 15c per hundred dollar assessment, following the recent action of the Fulton School Board. During the regular meeting Monday the board raised the school levy from $1.10 to $1.25 per $100.00 valuation.

In explaining this raise, the board declared that it was necessary in order to meet the budget as outlined for the year. It was found that under the present rate there would be a deficit of some $1,700, and that during the past few years there has been a shortage of funds to improve and repair the buildings. Another teacher is also needed, it is pointed out. It is believed that the increased rate of taxation will help to reduce the short time indebtedness of the schools.

The bonded indebtedness and street debt on the First Methodist Church of Fulton has been reduced from $41,721.58 to $22,000.00, Rev. E. M. Mathis, pastor, announced here today, after the new financial program had been completed. Bonds to the amount of $22,000 are now owned by members of the church, and will be paid off in eleven years, with $2,000 liquidated annually. This can be easily handled and will lighten the burden on the congregation.

The Methodist Church here was built in 1927 during the tenure of the late Rev. J. V. Freeman. The church has a membership of 800 and Rev. E. M. Mathis is the present pastor. A. G. Baldridge is chairman of the Board of Stewards, Vodie Hardin, treasurer, and Warren Graham, secretary. Dr. J. L. ## Court of Appeals Reverses Decision in McGehee Case

The Court of Appeals of Kentucky Tuesday reversed the case of John R. McGehee against J. R. Dorman Banking Commissioner and liquidator in charge of winding up the affairs of the Farmers Bank here.

The Banking Commissioner sued Mr. McGehee under the double liability statute for five shares of stock standing in the name of McGehee's deceased wife, claiming that under the law McGehee was liable for this stock, even though it stood in the name of his deceased wife, since under the law of distribution he, as husband, took half of the stock.

The Commissioner in his suit asked for $1,000, but the trial court, Judge L. L. Hindman, awarded the Commissioner judgment for half of the par value of the stock in the amount of $250.00, and the Court of Appeals reversed this judgment. Herschel T. Smith represented McGehee and Steve Wiley represented the Banking Commissioner.

School children walking along streets and highways are not safe when an epidemic of rabies is prevalent in a community."

Unmuzzled dogs seen running at large are dangerous, and persons seeing them should notify the police department or the sheriff's office. The health officer said. Every dog should be kept tied up or muzzled to prevent the spread of rabies.

The tocsin of the 1937 farm program was sounded Tuesday night during the fourth annual banquet and convention of the Fulton county Farm Bureau, when national, state district, and county farm leaders heralded the advantages of farm organization before a crowd of more than 300 farmers gathered at the Science Hall here. ## Supervised Loans Offered Farmers

THE PEOPLE OBJECT

Rerouting of Highway 51 through the city of Fulton has caused quite a stir among civic organizations, city officials and business men in general. So much dissatisfaction has been caused by the change that the Chamber of Commerce, and other organizations, are protesting the move to our good friend, Bob Humphrey, who heads the state highway department.

Until changed last week this particular highway came down Fairview to Edgings Street, then down Fourth to Lake Street to intersect with Highway 45 from Mayfield.

But now Highway 51 comes down Fairview to Edgings Street, then down State Line Street. The new route crosses four through streets into West Fulton, which intersections would have to be provided with traffic lights. Besides the new route penetrates the heart of the school zone and church district. Too this route misses the business district which is objected to by business interests. And that is only natural. Paducah, Mayfield and other cities have contended for location as to these highway routes, and with just cause.

The change of route 51 through Fulton will necessitate considerable expense on the part of the city, and places a greater danger on lives due to its routing. It is entirely unsatisfactory, and Fulton is making definite efforts to obtain the reconsideration of the Highway Department.

OUR FARM BUREAU.

We all should be proud of our Fulton County Farm Bureau. Those who keep in close touch with the activities of this organization can safely say that it is one of the liveliest and most progressive associations in this section.

Fulton was glad of the honor of being chosen as host city to the annual farm banquet and convention held here Tuesday night. It was truly a representative group that gathered at the Science Hall here—members of the farm bureau, home demonstrators, 4-H Club workers and county farm leaders.

We want to commend Cecil Burnett as president and J. B. McGeehee as secretary-treasurer of the Fulton County Farm Bureau for the fine work they have done with the splendid co-operation of others in the past three years. Too, we wish to extend to the new president, Roscoe Stone, and other officers of the organization our heartiest congratulations, and may they bring this farm group to even greater victories. The News, your farm and home paper, is in deep sympathy with the ideals and progress of the farmers of this vicinity, and hopes that we shall be able to do our part in the promotion of the general welfare of our farmer friends during 1937.

FULTON LOSES IN SEMI-FINALS TO KIRKSEY QUINTET

After defeating Milburn 19 to 13 in the first game of the regional tournament held at Murray, Fulton lost its battle with the strong Kirksey team 56 to 25.

Nanney, one of Fulton's star players, was hurt in the first half of the Fulton-Kirksey game in a collision with another player. He received a severe ankle injury and had to be taken from the game. Washer, Copeland and Adams did most of the scoring for Kirksey.

Pilot Oak's fine basketball quintet upset Kirksey 29 to 23 Saturday night in the finals to win the first regional championship of the KHA.A. The victory was well-earned but unexpected, Kirksey having beaten the new champions twice during the regular season just ended. Pilot Oak displayed a well-conceived attack, passing cleverly and working the ball in repeatedly for close shots.

A Typical Fulton Store is Reviewed

Dropped in at Graham Furniture store early this week, Warren, Ray, Robert and Alexander Inman were all in Union City, attending a district Frigidaire meeting. Got to talking with J. R. Graham, Sr., and he took me off into one of the varied display rooms. As we entered, he turned a switch, which not only turned on lights, but started a fire over in a handsomely arranged fireplace. Around this room in neat order was arranged a beautiful living room suite, tables, floor lamps, etc., to charmingly set off the display. It was a cozy little spot and so home-like.

Then Mr. Graham called my attention to a kitchen display in the window, where a kitchen sink, with auxiliary tables and cabinets, a Florence stove, and an electric Frigidaire—all in beautiful white enamel—composed a delightful combination. After seeing these two displays, it is guaranteed to make you feel that "Your Home Should Come First."

CHAPMAN BURNELL CEREMONY PERFORMED FRIDAY NIGHT

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Gugenheim of Marion, Kentucky, announce the marriage of their sister, Miss Charlotte Chapman, to Joseph Henry Burnette of Mayfield. The ceremony was performed Friday evening, March 12, at eight o'clock at the home of Mrs. Thomas H. Chapman on Second Street, with the Rev. W. D. Daugherty, pastor of the First Christian Church of Mayfield, reading the impressive single ring ceremony, in the presence of only the immediate families.

The nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Clarence Maddox, using Elgar's "Pavane" and Schubert's "Serenade." The bride entered the living room on the arm of her brother, Gibson Taylor Chapman, to the strains of Lehengrin's wedding chorus. She was met by the groom, attended by Sam Gugenheim as best man, in an archway formed by a profusion of ferns and spring flowers. White tapers in candleabra flickered from each side.

The bride was lovely in a gown of printed crepe. She carried an arm bouquet of pink Briar Cliff roses and gladioli and her only ornament was a lovely pearl necklace. She is the very popular daughter of the late Gibson T. Chapman of Uniontown, Kentucky. She attended high school in Uniontown and later attended the University of Kentucky. She has resided in Fulton for the past five years and is one of the most popular and beautiful members of Fulton's younger social set.

Rural Road Program Starts on April 1

Rural highway construction in Kentucky is expected to reach its maximum this year, and is scheduled to start on April 1, as indicated by Rural Highway Commissioner Cecil Williams. All counties in the state will have approximately the same amount as allotted in 1936-37, but in 31 counties there will be available extra money in the amount of $437,369.96, the remainder of a flood relief appropriation made in 1927. Of this amount Fulton is to receive $11,707.44 and Hickman county will get $6,362.26.

With the much broader program in mind, engineers and supervisors from the Rural Highway Department are now conferring with officials in each of the state's 120 counties, preparing projects. Commissioner Williams declared that work would start in all sections immediately after April 1, and before mid-summer it will be at its height. Engineers and county officials are urged to give first thought and preference to secondary or feeder roads over which school buses and rural mail carriers must pass, as it is hoped to have the majority of these roads graded, drained, and surfaced before the end of the fiscal year.

Congress and appropriated to the state of Kentucky the amount of $490,000 for each of the federal fiscal years of 1938 and 1939 for use on secondary highways. These funds must be matched dollar for dollar. The rules of the U. S. Department of Agriculture permit approximately 1-17 of this amount to be spent on the state highway system and the remainder, or $240,000 per year, on the secondary highway system. All county judges and fiscal courts in the state have been notified that the $240,000 sum is now ready and to make plans accordingly.

These federal funds will be available July 1, 1937, and bids may be taken as soon after April 1, 1937, as plans and estimates are available.

TENANCY FIGURES HIGH IN KENTUCKY

Kentucky has more than 103,000 tenant farmers and 37 percent of all the farms in the state are tenant operated, Earl Mayhew, state director of rural rehabilitation, Resettlement Administration said today. The rural rehabilitation program is helping a new number from this group to get a new start, he stated.

More than 6,000 Kentucky farmers, a majority of whom are tenants, already received rehabilitation aid in the form of supervised loans, according to Mr. Mayhew. This is regarded as an important beginning in the movement to halt the growth of tenancy and provide a basis for increased farm ownership.

"Tenancy, with its attendant land abuses and rural poverty, is a serious threat to the permanent agricultural welfare of the state," he declared.

Latest agricultural census figures show that Fulton county, at the extreme western tip of the state has the highest percentage of tenant operated farms with 57 percent. Pike County, at the extreme eastern tip of the state, has the largest number of tenants, with 2,143 operating 34 percent of the county's farms. Kenton and Campbell counties, at the northern tip of the state, have the smallest percentages of tenants, with 21 percent each. Kenton County has the fewest tenants of all Kentucky with 265.

FARM BUREAU MEETS

ried forward more. He heartily endorsed bureau activity and farm organization, declaring that every field except agriculture has been organized for years, and that the farm is just now coming into his own by organized effort, which will have a tendency to promote the general welfare, health and happiness of farm families. He illustrated by pointing out benefits derived through farm bureau activity in his county: soil saving program, cooperative dairying bringing higher prices for milk; strawberry growing until today has become a million-dollar business; home demonstration work; improvement of livestock.

W. O. Parr, toastmaster, and Purchase district farm organizer, was the spark plug of the meeting. He compared farmers to the Israelites called Moses to end the bondage of slavery and misery. Today the farm bureau organization is preparing the way for better and happier days for the American farmer. He announced that a farm meeting will be held at Bardwell the latter part of April, and plans for the year and rural electrification will be discussed.

John J. Lacey, as principal speaker sounded the keynote of farm bureau activity, when he called upon farmers to organize themselves into a united front so that they might better their conditions by seeking jointly parative prices for their products. "It is up to the farm organizations to raise the standards of their business and not to destroy means by which industry and labor improve their economic conditions," he said. "What the farm accomplishes will be done by organized effort, the co-ordination of the farm bureau, agricultural extension work, and the co-operation of the federal government in a recognized plan to encourage the growth of agriculture. Farm prices are parative today with those of 1914. But the farmer must have parative incomes, too. Sit-down strikes affect farmers, raising salaries of industrial employees, passing on these advance costs of production to the consumer, and the farmer is the biggest consumer of manufactured products. Price inflation is as bad as price deflation. Industry, labor and agriculture must work out the national economic problem together, and until this is done there will be no permanent stability. It is a fallacy to believe money is wealth by producing and consuming more until the needs of all are filled. Up until recent years the national policy was to encourage industry and let agriculture do the best it could. But the day of exploitation has passed. We're in a new age. When the farmer or the laborer suffers, others suffer. The foundation of our country is the soil, and when the farmer lives in comfort so goes the rest of the nation."

The honeymoon is also over when the bride starts complaining about the amount of noise the husband makes while he's getting breakfast.

To Make NEW FRIENDS AND Keep THE OLD

Your telephone is a means of quick personal contact with those friends and relatives whom you do not visit as often as you would like, especially those who live in other cities.

More and more people who are separated by distances are using "long distance" telephone service to keep friendships alive and to enjoy the pleasure of friendly, cheerful visits, free of the expense and value which are almost prices.

For the cost of a telephone conversation between friends or relatives who are miles apart is surprisingly low. You can get an idea of the low cost of "long distance" from the lists of cities and rates which you will find in the front of your telephone directory.

If the town you wish to call is not listed in the front of your telephone directory, just ask your "long distance" operator. She will gladly quote rates to any point.

THE ATTIC
By no means do I mean to contend that the modern home does not have several places that are gradually filling up with discarded or useless household plunder, but I think it obvious that the habit of saving everything is hardly so religiously followed as formerly. Sometimes it seems a pity that we do not recognize the value of what is now in existence and make efforts to save enough representative material to be able to reconstruct our past, whether near or remote. Every time we enter a museum, we are struck with the fact that we have let disappear many things that now would be priceless as exhibits of other times and places. It is the attic as an earlier form of museum that I wish to speak.

Some houses were large enough to afford a lumber room, where out-dated things could slumber in dust and cobwebs, but for most houses this vacant space was "up in the loft." Lighted by a small window in the gable or not at all, all the things that we ought to have destroyed or given away, but didn't, live on until the old things wear out or have inroads made on them by antique hunters. Sick and afflicted furniture, but rare still too good to burn, old files of magazines and newspapers, scraps of clothing saved from the original garments, discarded pictures in their frames and probably robbed of their protecting sheets of glass, empty fruit jars, extra quilts or blankets—but I am not called on to give an Homeric catalogue of heroes, however poetic it all might seem. Browning has Rabbi Ben Ezra say:

"All that is at all Lasts ever past recall."

I wonder whether Browning ever rummaged around in an old attic. When days used to be gray, it was a habit of many children to play in the attic among the discarded things. Dressing up in outmoded clothing was one of the surest ways to keep rainy days from becoming tiresome. Finding old mementos often brought the whole family into the attic. The stuffy atmosphere all comes back when we remember the games of "going to see" that we played when we dressed up in Mother's or Father's old clothes and swaggered with a pompous dignity that neither of them ever assumed during our times.

So economical were our immediate ancestors that they saved everything, regardless of its value. It has been easy, therefore, for museums and libraries to find all sorts of exhibits. Many a thing that seemingly has been lost to history in Europe has been turned up in America, where it had been lovingly kept for a long time and then preserved, like a mummy, by being let alone for a few generations. I feel pretty certain that in Kentucky attics there are now enough authentic relics of the pioneers to make a museum larger and more interesting than any that have yet been built. Some one has laughingly said that if it were necessary to burn a witch, some one could be found who would know the correct procedure; I am equally certain that any event recorded in our history since the first days could be connected up with dust-covered but authentic things that have long reposed in some old forsaken attic.

"THE NEWS" WEEKLY SCRAPBOOK

Week's Best Recipe

GINGERBREAD— $\frac{1}{4}$  cup fat; 1 cup of sugar; 2 eggs;  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup molasses; 2 teaspoons cinnamon; 2-3 teaspoon cloves;  $\frac{1}{2}$  teaspoon nutmeg;  $\frac{1}{4}$  teaspoon salt; 1 cup cold water;  $2\frac{3}{4}$  cups flour; 1 teaspoon soda; 1 teaspoon baking powder. Cream fat and sugar. Add rest of ingredients. Beat two minutes. Pour into shallow pan lined with waxed paper. Bake 25 minutes in moderate oven.

Kitchen Hints

When boiling ham, salt beef or tongue which is to be served cold, always leave the meat in the liquor until it is cold. Never leave egg whites after they have been beaten stiff. If left to stand, they will flatten and will not beat up again. A discolored vinegar cruet may be cleaned by cutting up a potato and putting small pieces into the cruet. Shake until it is clean.

The Beauty Shapote

Digestive disturbances are a common cause for puffiness under the eyes. Try a simple nourishing diet, plenty of outdoor exercise and at least eight hours sleep each night. Hot moist applications, followed by cold will also help reduce the puffiness. Two minutes of heat, two minutes of cold, and repeat. Dip cloth in witch hazel, cover the eyes and lie down to rest for 15 minutes.

In The Sick Room:

Don't feel you are doing the sick friend a kindness by taking the children along when you call on her. They are much more apt to make her nervous than to cheer her up in her weakened condition. Let the children play outside while you make a short call.

Worth Remembering

Light scorch stains on cotton or silk may often be removed with peroxide of hydrogen. Dampen a cloth with it, lay it over the scorched spot, then put a dry cloth over the dampened one and press this with a warm iron. Do not allow the iron to touch the cloth that is wet with peroxide. Light scorch on wool may be brushed with fine emery paper.

It is good to know we are almost past the season of the year when most Fulton motorists use warm language to start a cold car.

More Building On Farms Last Year

Reports of county agents indicate that 9,084 new buildings were constructed on Kentucky farms last year. The agricultural engineering division at the College of Agriculture at Lexington last year distributed 1,125 building plans among farmers. These included houses, tobacco barns, general barns, dairy houses, poultry houses, hog houses, storage houses, lime sheds, water and sewer systems, silos, self-feeders and many other types of buildings and equipment. The college has 329 different plans of farm buildings and equipment. Just at this time requests are being received for remodeling and repairing plans for buildings damaged by the flood.

People around Fulton who are easily shocked seem to have an unfailing instinct for locating the things that shock them.

Rail rates make commerce flow freely, create new markets, develop industry and agriculture. Thus they move the nation's business.

The important work of making rates that will move the nation's business calls for complete and up-to-the-minute knowledge of every known product of factory, forest and farm, of markets, routes and rates.

With everything, everywhere, moving on the railroad this is a vast undertaking. It is so well organized that comprehensive rate information is available to every shipper—as handy as the telephone.

It is through such inclusive service to shipper and traveler that the railroad has made a community of a continent.

The painstaking work of employees in the handling of rates is one reason for the excellent reputation our railroad enjoys. They share with their co-workers in every department the responsibility for the good name of the Illinois Central System.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Meanderings and meditations: Those women newspaper vendors who look after stands at the City hall . . . Have been there for years . . . Dress for warmth and not for style . . . Have to as they are out in the weather all day . . . The big thermometer of the Sun . . . A lot of folks will turn up their coat collars when they look at it on cold days . . . and fan themselves next summer . . . That triangle where Nassau street comes into Park Row and newspapers are sold at the feet of Benjamin Franklin . . . With the World gone and the Tribune moved, that statue loses some of its significance . . . But maybe it's a guardian of memories . . . As is Horace Greeley in Herald Square . . . With the Herald Tribune seven blocks uptown . . . and the old building occupied by shops . . . With a swirl of shoppers filling the square . . . Which, as is so often the case in New York, isn't a square but merely an open space.

Night sights I like: The steady flashing, now white, now red, of the airplane beacon on the Manhattan tower of the George Washington bridge over the Hudson . . . The red light atop the slim spire of Riverside church as seen from the Fort Lee ferry . . . From mid-stream on dark nights, it looks like a fireball hanging from the heavens by invisible strings . . . Morning-side drive as seen from the roof garden of Butler hall . . . The view from the top terrace of Jean and Ray Deinenger's penthouse on West Twelfth street . . . So intensely urban it's really gripping . . . The tumbling gray sound from the windows of the Larchmont Shore club . . . Times Square crowds at theater time . . . Broadway's terrific glare . . . The glowing tower of the Empire State building.

Mitzi Hajos, who plays the part of an actress with a load in "You Can't Take It With You" . . . and who holds it time to go to sleep when she sees snakes . . . Incidentally, those green snakes in the aquarium on the mantelpiece aren't real . . . The reason they act up as they do is that Al Burkhardt turns a crank behind the scenery . . . May Todd, airplane hostess who was "up in the air" when interviewed on the air . . . But who is never "up in the air" while up in the air . . . Figure that one out . . . Mabel Loucks, who teaches bridge up in Westchester and who's just back from a Florida vacation.

James Cagney coming out of the Waldorf . . . Get a giggle out of a Newark happening . . . At a wedding party, there were two punch bowls . . . One for the toasts and the other for those who dally with snickering soup . . . The officiating clergyman got to the wrong bowl . . . and when he said grace, returned thanks for the punch . . . Get another giggle out of the plight of a newly-married youngster who came back from a short business trip with his Gladstone filled with women's silk things . . . The bag bore his initials but there really had been a switch . . . Which was finally straightened out by the railroad company's lost and found department . . . but not until many tears had been shed.

Ragamuffins in a free-for-all at Broadway and Fifty-second street . . . and quick peace as a cop approaches . . . Street snap photographers passing out cards . . . Monotonous calls of soft drink and hot dog vendors . . . Crowd watching an Italian restaurant chef doing tricks with spaghetti . . . Wonder where Teddy, my favorite oyster stew connoisseur, is located now? If I could find him, I'd forget about the waistline . . . The clanging of an ambulance bell . . . and a clearing of Broadway traffic.

Bull's-eye: Dave Schooler was being interviewed just before his opening at the Hotel Piccadilly. One of the reporters present asked him what his lucky day was.

"Sunday," was the prompt reply. "Why?" persisted the Fourth Estater.

"Because," returned Schooler, with a smile, "that's the day the stock market is closed."

Monument Erected to Dismembered Leg

Menomonee, Wis.—In the weeds and thicket of an unkempt corner of St. Paul's cemetery, near Menomonee, lies a glistening white monument to the memory of a leg.

The story of the tombstone and the leg "decently buried" there is told by John Loew, a retired farmer.

About 1880, when Loew was a boy, George Krauder, a neighbor, suffered an ankle injury. Krauder was forced to have the leg amputated.

Krauder gave his dismembered leg a fitting burial and marked the grave with a marble slab 18 by 10 inches inscribed—"Leg—George Krauder."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON D. C.

Washington.—Many times in these columns, I have called attention to the confusion that has come to be so much a part of the federal government's general administration. I have talked about the bluster and the ballyhoo and the cross purposes at which so many pieces of the New Deal program have operated, and another outstanding example of this condition now appears.

Two governmental agencies, one a strictly New Deal agency, the other with a beginning in the Hoover administration, find themselves working directly in opposition to each other—and in the end taxpayers will pay.

It is not the fault of the Home Owners Loan corporation that it finds itself in a position where it is going to be landlord to something like 160,000 pieces of real estate—
largely homes.

When the government went into the business of loaning money on private residence it had experience
upon which to base its program.
Many years ago the farm loan system was organized with none too happy results. In the late days of the Hoover administration, however, three or four politicians were able to drive through the legislation creating a system of government loans on residences as distinguished from farms.

I predicted in these columns some three years ago that the government, through the HOLC, was going to be the proud possessor of a lot of real estate. My statements at that time were based upon what I had seen happen in the case of the loans on farms. The article brought me direct criticism from two or three places in the government—but at this time I can report that the HOLC, before another year passes, will own something like 160,000
homes.

It is always difficult for a mortgage or bank institution, privately owned, to dispose of property which it has been forced to repossess through default of the borrowers. It is much more difficult for the federal government to dispose of that type of property, try as it may to get rid of the parcels.

So, we find one governmental agency serving as a landlord on a wholesale scale and with signs por-tending moves by politicians that will in the end cost the taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars.
These politicians are proposing legislation in congress to cut the interest rate on the loans now in default and other loans as well;
the principal of the loans on the defaulted mortgages and they are seeking means by which those in default may have unlimited time in which to make the payments in a way that, superficially at least,
makes the proposals appear actually as an outright gift to those who have bought homes under the government loan plan.

There is no way to tell now what will happen to these various proposals. Undoubtedly, most of them will fall by the wayside and receive no consideration in congress.
Yet, on the basis of observation of many such movements, it does not seem far wrong to guess that the politicians in congress will accomplish something in the way of reduction of these debts where the defaulters bring pressure to bear on the home town political machines.

Now, concerning the other governmental agency involved in the game of cross purposes
that I mentioned.

I refer to the federal housing administration. Like the Home Owners Loan corporation, it is not the fault of the housing administration that it finds itself in a tough spot.
It is commanded by the President and by congress to proceed with a gigantic housing program, to loan money on new homes wherever it can persuade contractors to build and individuals to buy. It is to be remembered also that loans on these properties are guaranteed—
the legislation calls them insured loans—and that makes the federal housing administration liable in case the new home buyers fail to meet their commitments.

The housing administration announced its program to encourage wholesale home building throughout the nation only recently and it was by coincidence, I am sure, that the housing program was announced almost simultaneously with the determination by the HOLC to start foreclosure proceedings in order to maintain its own solvency.

Thus, to bring the picture to a focus, we find one governmental agency that has loaned hundreds of millions of dollars on residences being forced to foreclose in order to protect the money it has spent, at least in part, and a second governmental agency entering the field simultaneously with a gigantic program in which more hundreds of millions will be expended and more people encouraged to place themselves in debt.

I cannot criticize the housing administration policy any more than I can criticize the program of the HOLC. The point is that there is simply no co-ordination in government policies as they concern these two agencies, and consequently, one group is building new homes and another is taking over old homes for which the buyers have been unable to pay. In my humble opinion, it does not make good sense.

I have heard considerable talk among influential New Dealers to the effect that new homes will sell more easily than the old ones and therefore the housing administration plans are held to be justified. Yet, it does seem to be a perfectly natural and logical thing that new homes become old homes as time elapses and there are many who believe that the government, because it has guaranteed the loans on new homes, will have to take over a large percentage of them as well. That is, it will have to take over at least a normal percentage because whether the loans are made by private financing companies or by the government, a considerable number of buyers are unable to fulfill their obligations. It is not always the fault of the buyers. Sickness, loss of jobs or a thousand and one other circumstances may develop that prevents the buyer of a home from carrying through his cherished dream of own the roof over his head. It is the way of life that a certain percentage will, and of necessity must, fall by the wayside.

I never have been able to agree that the federal government has any business in the Wrong Principle
field of financing
homes or extending credit to individuals.

I have always criticized the Hoover administration for creating the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the Roosevelt administration for expanding its operations. The principle is wrong because it uses money either borrowed by the government or paid into the Treasury by the taxpayers to finance, to build up, personal funds of individuals or corporations.

It seems quite clear to me that the HOLC, following the experiences of the farm loan system, justifies the conclusion that the federal government cannot successfully engage in that field. In the first instance, I think it is bad business for government to go beyond the protection of life, liberty and property, with all the implications carried in those three words as a governmental policy. Further, and with much more emphasis, I am sure that any time government engages in that field it opens the way for politicians to be tempted, to be forced, to do things in a legislative way that cannot be justified as economically sound.

Earlier in this article, I suggested the difficulty always surrounding the sale of property that has been taken back from the original purchasers. Officials of private mortgage companies and other financial institutions have grown many a gray hair in their efforts to recover money loaned in cases where the borrowers have met with unfortunate circumstances. The government, finding itself in the position of the private lender insofar as repossession of property is concerned, has about one-half the chance of liquidation that the private lender would have. And beyond that, there is too much chance for favoritism, scheming and even crookedness when the government attempts to do a job like the HOLC now is facing. I say that regardless of the honest purpose that I know characterizes the present HOLC management.

CHAPTER VI—Continued

It was hours after his wife's death before Doctor Greeding at last realized that he was free. Terror had ridden him hard, till he put on grief like a seamy garment. But at the end he came to sudden comprehension that he was loosed from the fetters that had bound him. His bonds were broken! He was untrammelled, free!

In a high exultation the man came back to the house at last. He came straight across the island through the shadowed woods. Yet if he had looked up, he might even then have seen, through the foliage above him, the unwinking stars.

Mrs. Greeding was buried in Cambridge, on Tuesday, in the afternoon. It was a hot, sunny July day, with no breeze to stir the heavy foliage of the trees that shaded the scene. Nancy would always remember, at some distance, the hiss and murmur of cars passing along the nearest street, the far whisper of the heedless world.

Dan and Mary Ann and Professor Carlisle and others were there. Among them, Ira Jerrell. Nancy did not at first discover him; not till they all turned away, and her eyes cleared, and she could look around. Then she saw him near her father, saw him clasp Doctor Greeding's hand. When presently she and her father were in the car again, Doctor Greeding said:

"I asked Mr. Jerrell to drop in for a while, Nancy."

She nodded indifferently. They came home together, and she went for a moment to her room. Doctor Greeding stayed downstairs.

When she heard Jerrell arrive, heard their voices in the library, she descended and appeared in the open door, halted and ready to depart. Doctor Greeding looked up in surprise.

"Going out, Nancy? Best stay with us."

She met Jerrell's eyes straight-forwardly and frankly. "I won't be gone long," she said. "You've Mr. Jerrell for company."

She took the little roadster and drove rapidly, as though anxious to make her escape before something happened to detain her.

She was strongly drawn toward Dan—she felt this deep attraction more keenly than ever before; but also she was thrust toward him by some force behind her, by something intangible which her instinct had discovered in her father's mind.

In his grief and loss she should have been drawn toward him to comfort him; but she recognized, honestly, that there was in her no genuine solicitude for him. Rather, her instinct bade her avoid him, avoid the neighborhood of his influence and control.

She found Mary Ann and Dan together, and Dan kissed her, and Mary Ann too. But Mary Ann, with a wise understanding, said smilingly:

"Take him away somewhere, Nancy. You don't want me around, you two; and I've nowhere to go, and people may come in. Go along with you."

Nancy nodded. "Yes, I do want to be with Dan," she said.

Once they were alone, she was for the moment content; and without speaking, she drove out through Watertown and Waltham toward Lincoln.

He said, later: "I suppose you and your father will go back to the Lake soon."

"Not right away," she told him. "I won't go till he can. I wouldn't want to be there alone. Not with Mother—down here." Her tones were husky; she said: "Father starts his vacation next week-end. He may want me to go away somewhere with him; or he may want just to go to the Lake. He loves it there. I'll do whatever he wants."

Dan nodded. "It's a grand place," he assented.

"If we go up there, Dan," she decided, suddenly near panic at the thought of being alone with her father, "you must come up. I can't be alone with him. I'll miss Mother so."

He said doubtfully: "I've had about all the vacation I ought to take."

"I'll need you dreadfully, Dan," she said, and he cried:

"God knows I'll need you, Nancy! Always!"

She turned off the highroad into a byway; the road degenerated till there were only wheel-ruts in the sand. They passed through an oak wood which closed like a screen behind them, and she stopped the car at last on a turfed slope, fragrant in the slanting sun. Below lay the marshes and the meandering river, and far away the wooded hills rose gently.

Nancy stopped the engine, and looked at Dan; and he leaned toward her, held her for a moment close and tenderly.

They descended from the car. On the firm turf, she lay at length, her arms across her eyes, in the full beat of the sun.

He sat down beside her. After a moment she looked up at him, and her eyes drew him down. He said, huskily: "Your lips are trembling."

"I'm not—trembling, or afraid, or doubtful any more, Dan," she whispered. "I know what I want."

His eyes were troubled. She covered her eyes with her arm again, and spoke slowly and carefully.

"I won't argue with you, Dan, my dear," she said. "I've made up—our minds." Her lips smiled faintly.

"No need of going, over the same ground again and again and again. Of course, we will wait—a little while, for Mother's sake. But waiting will be hard, and it mustn't be long, because the world is settled, for us. No matter what you think, you're going to marry me."

"We'll be deadly poor," he confessed. "I've nothing but my salary—never will have."

"Dan, my dear, you're so commercial," she reproached him whimsically. "A body'd think you were bent on marrying money."

He said laughing with a deep delight: "You're as obstinate as—I'm not," she protested. "I'm not obstinate. It's only obstinate when you insist on doing the wrong thing; so you're the obstinate one!"

Her arm reached up and drew him nearer. "Don't be so strong and stubborn, Dan."

He whispered, stammering and breathless: "Nancy, you'll have me—drunk with your sweetness, in a minute. Let me keep my head."

"I want you drunk and quite mad, and wholly irresponsible," she insisted. "I don't want you to keep your head. Her arms were tight around him. "Dan, Dan, I want you with me, to fight with me, to stand with me, to hold me."

"Never let me go," she whispered. "Never let me go."

And she said: "I want it settled, finally, and absolutely, and always and forever, between us, Dan. Do you hear?" And she cried, a half sob in her tones: "Oh, it's only so that nothing can happen, so that I can stand up to Father, and so that I can cling fast to you, Dan. No matter what he says, or does. Her eyes questioned him. "Dan, you mustn't argue, and find reasons, and think of obstacles, ever any more. Promise?"

He agreed helplessly: "Anything, Nancy. Yes. If you're sure."

"I want to count on you always," "You can."

She said soberly: "This is as binding as anything any minister can ever say over us, Dan."

The sun was low, sinking swiftly now, and a light breeze began to blow, as though approaching dusk shepherded the hot afternoon air away before it. They stayed awhile watching the purple flood that flowed across the marsh; and it grew cooler, and Nancy said at last, in a tone of surprise:

"Dan, my dear, I'm hungry!"

"It's dinner-time," he assented, laughing at her. "Why shouldn't I?"

"Why?" she asked curiously. "I will, of course, if you think so, Dan. But why?"

"No man likes to find himself in the position of making love to an engaged girl," he explained. "It makes him ridiculous; and Jerrell's too much of a man for that."

"If he doesn't want to be ridiculous, he shouldn't make love to a girl half his age," she protested mischievously.

Dan insisted: "I like him, and respect him, Nancy, you do it."

She said demurely: "Who am I to oppose you, Dan, my dear? I'll do exactly as you say." She urged then, happily: "But let's not tell anyone else, till we're ready to be married the very next day!"

He nodded. "All right. But I'd like to shout it."

"I'd like to sing it, darling," she whispered. "Kiss me now." He did. "And good night. Tomorrow night, Dan?"

"All the tomorrows," he promised.

CHAPTER VII

Doctor Greeding decided that he would go to the Lake for his vacation, just as he had planned. He said to Nancy, "I think your mother would want us to," and he explained: "I shall do some work. I've papers to prepare. Miss Carlisle can get the data together and bring the material up to me."

Nancy nodded, and he added: "She's a very capable girl, Nancy."

"Oh, yes," she agreed. "Yes, Mary Ann's fine."

"I've never worked so well as since I took her on," he said. "She—"

He spoke of details, till it occurred to Nancy, incredibly, that he protested overmuch. She said at last, faintly discomfited by his reiterations:

"You don't need to praise Mary Ann to me, Father."

He flushed, but then he laughed. "Fine," he said. "I'm glad you won't mind her being up there with us."

"I'll ask Dan too," she said. "So that I'll have some one to play with while you and she are working."

He hesitated. "I don't know whether that's—wise, Nancy. So soon after your mother's death."

She did not urge the point, assuming that when the time came, Doctor Greeding would be more complaisant.

She was, during these days, and despite the steady undercurrent of her aching grief, quietly happy and content, with a sense of security and peace in the certainty that she and Dan would never be parted. Her interview with Jerrell had been easier than she feared. He heard what she had to say without surprise.

He guessed that long ago," he said smilingly. "Young lovers are—transparent. I knew it, perhaps, before you did." He said gravely: "I think you know how much I wish happiness for you."

"Yes," she assented. "I think I do."

He smiled. "If Dan were not before me," he confessed, "I might have dreamed some absurd dreams myself, despite my age."

"I've never thought of you as old," he told him gently.

The intervening days till their departure for the Lake passed like leaves on the wind. Nancy noticed once or twice that her father read with a frowning attention the financial pages of the newspapers. She herself had no interest in such matters, but she spoke of it to him. "I thought you seemed worried," she remarked; but he answered irritably:

"I'm not. Please allow me to attend to my own affairs."

Yet as a matter of fact, Doctor Greeding, though he denied it to Nancy, was worried, and with cause. His reckless venturing had involved him more deeply than he could bear to contemplate; and in the end, in a sort of desperation, he went to Jerrell, telephoning for an appointment. "I want to discuss some investments with you," he explained.

When he came to the other's office, Jerrell greeted him with a smile. "Surprised me to have you phone," he confessed. "I didn't know you were interested in stocks."

Doctor Greeding hesitated. "Well, I'm not, seriously," he declared. "But I did take a flyer in Cottons, as a result of some of our conversations. I notice they're not doing well, and I'm wondering whether to take my losses, or hang on."

He tried to laugh. "Matter of fact, I went in pretty deep."

Jerrell said gravely: "The whole market has been weak, and it's never wise to fight the market; so we've let Cottons sag, waiting for the turn." He tapped his desk with the end of his pen. "What is the extent of your commitments, Ned?"

Greeding hesitated; but in the end, with a sort of shame, he named the actual figure. Jerrell's astonishment showed in his eyes.

"You should have asked my advice," he said irritably. "Before this. What do your holdings average?" he asked; and when the other told him, he sat in silence for a while. Then he smiled, as though in decision, and relaxed in his chair.

"Well," he said, "as a matter of fact, I expect Cottons will touch that figure this week, Ned. When it does, you'd better unload." He hesitated, then thrust the telephone toward Doctor Greeding. "Put in an order to sell at your price, G. T. C.," he directed.

Doctor Greeding took the phone; but he looked his doubts. "You're sure it won't go higher?" he asked. The pen tapped more sharply. "Ned, man get out with a whole skin and consider yourself lucky."

Jerrell bade; and there was something like scorn in his tones. So Doctor Greeding called Paul Master and gave the order, then turned to Jerrell.

"You have put me heavily in your debt, Ira," he said slowly. "If I can ever repay you—if there's anything you want of mine—"

And he suggested, not looking at the other man: "Why don't you come up to the Lake sometime in August? Nancy and I will be there. I have medical work to do with Miss Carlisle."

Jerrell smiled, shook his head. "You don't owe me anything, Ned," he said patiently. "And—neither does Nancy. But I may come."

That evening Doctor Greeding left the house after dinner. Mary Ann was at the office when he got there; and for two or three hours they worked together. Afterward he insisted on taking her home; and on the way, he said:

"I'm going to drop everything and head for the Lake as soon as possible. I'll want you to finish analyzing these cases, and bring the figures up to me. After I've had a few days' rest. Say next Friday?"

He saw hesitation in her, and he added swiftly: "I'll want you there for a few days; and perhaps Nancy can persuade you to stay on for a while, even after our job is done."

She wished to demur; but before she could do so, he said hurriedly: "I'll need to work, this year, to keep from—thinking!"

She said, in quick comprehension: "Of course, I understand."

He thought, after he left her, that she had seemed almost ill at ease in his presence. Yet not unfriendly—rather, deeply sympathetic for the grief she thought he must be suffering.

But Doctor Greeding felt in fact no grief. That first wave of sorrow had come like a healing flood and passed, leaving him healed—and free!

Their first days at the Lake passed quietly. It had been decided between Dan and Nancy that he would come on Friday afternoon, with Mary Ann. Nancy had not told her father this arrangement. Without admitting it even to herself, she feared some objection on Doctor Greeding's part, and avoided the possibility by her silence.

Doctor Greeding expected Mary Ann's arrival by the evening train on Friday; and he spoke of it to Nancy at dinner Thursday night in such tones that she looked at him doubtfully, discovering something incredible and startling in his eyes.

She tried to put the thought aside. It could not be. And yet this unbelievable possibility suggested by her father's tone when he spoke of Mary Ann remained in her mind disturbingly, and her sleep that night was uneasy, shaken by shadows of formless dreams. She was awake to welcome dawn; and went early for a swim.

When she was dressed and downstairs again, her father still had not appeared, so she breakfasted alone.

Seeing Thomas, she asked him where her father was. Thomas said: "He had his breakfast and took his pistol up to the tennis-court, ma'am."

She went to join her father there and found him in a smiling humor. "Hullo, Nancy!" he called, as she approached. He was at the farther end of the court, affixing a paper target to the frame in that shuttered window in the batter-board. "Sleep well?" And before she could reply, he said: "I slept like a log. Feel better than I've felt for months. This is a great place to rest, up here."

She caught his mood. "Then if you feel so well, I'll shoot you a match; and if I beat you, you'll have no alibi!"

He chuckled, returned toward her. "You never saw the day, Nancy," he retorted. His pistol, a long-barreled automatic of an European design, lay on the iron roller in a corner of the court. She picked it up, saw that it was loaded, and began to shoot.

Her shots, when she finished, were well grouped; and Doctor Greeding applauded her. "Good enough," he said. "But watch me now."

He set up another target, filled the magazine. He fired somewhat more rapidly than she had; and when he finished, went to fetch the target. They examined it together, and she had to concede defeat. Of her shots, three were scattered outside a six-inch circle; but his were all closely grouped.

They stayed there, thus engaged, until the luncheon-bell rang; and he beat her consistently, so that his good humor grew. At lunch he was as amiable as possible; and she pretended chagrin at her defeat, and challenged him to tennis in the afternoon. Her father accepted.

They did not begin immediately after lunch; but they were on the court when in midafternoon the phone rang. The telephone itself was in a closet behind the dining-room, but there was a clanging bell on the side veranda which could be heard for half the length of the island; and Nancy cried:

"I'll have to go answer. There's probably no one in the house." She went running down the path.

But when she came back up the path, it was slowly, disappointment shadowing her eyes; she said:

He chuckled, returning toward her. "You Never Saw the Day, Nancy," he retorted.

"That was Dan. He and Mary Ann can't come till tomorrow. He's got to work tonight. They'll be here on the noon train."

She was engrossed in her own disappointment, but not too much so to see his sudden frown. "Dan?" he echoed. "Is he coming?"

"Yes," she said.

"I didn't know that!" he protested.

This, she recognized, was true; but she pretended a defensive surprise. "Why, we've talked about their both coming, right along," she urged.

He said slowly: "I told you, when you spoke of it, that I thought it best—furthermore, I'm sorry he is coming, just now. It's most inconvenient."

"Why?" she demanded.

"Mr. Jerrell is coming tomorrow," he explained. "He called up this morning to ask if he might, and I told him yes, by all means. I counted on you to entertain him. Mary Ann and I will be busy. You'd better tell Dan not to come, so that you'll be free for Mr. Jerrell."

"But I'd much rather be with Dan," she pointed out, with a grimace.

"Government of, By and for the People" Traced

According to Rev. H. Barker's "English Bible Versions," the first appearance of this phrase "government of the people, by the people, and for the people," found in Lincoln's Gettysburg speech was in the preface of the old Wickliffe Bible, translated before 1384, in which it is declared that "this Bible is for the government of the people, by the people and for the people." The Home Book of Quotations states that a careful examination has failed to disclose this passage in the Wickliffe Bibles available.

Theodore Parker used the phrase in three different addresses, delivered in 1850, 1854 and 1858, to illustrate what he called the American idea of democracy. Daniel Webster used almost the same words in a speech in 1830. John Adams in an address in 1798 employed the phrase "a government made by themselves (the people), for themselves and conducted by themselves." Thomas Cooper in 1795 published a pamphlet in London entitled "Some Information respecting America" in which he stated "The government is a government of the people and for the people."

"Kicking Frolics"

"Kicking frolics" were once a popular diversion in Ohio. When the neighbors gathered at a cabin, the floor was cleared and chairs were placed in a circle in the center. About six young men with strong legs would then take off their boots and stockings, roll up their pants above the knees, and sit on the chairs.

Then the kicking began. But the kicking was by measured steps on wool cloth spread on the floor, and the purpose was to shrink it. While the men kicked, a robust woman would pound the cloth with a gourd, at the same time pouring soap suds upon the material. Another woman kept measuring the cloth until it was shrunk to the desired size.

When the men's job of kicking ended, the girls then set to work wringing out the cloth, after which it was placed outside to dry. All this was followed by a big dinner and dancing. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

How Many Pennies Your Child's Life?*Don't Try to "Save" on Home Remedies—Ask Your Doctor

There is one point, on which practically all doctors agree. That is: Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first.

All mothers know this. But sometimes the instinct to save a few pennies by buying "something just as good" overcomes caution.

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia"—many doctors for over half a century have said "PHILLIPS." For Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is the standard of the world. Safe for children.

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Comes now, also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia." 25¢ for a big box of the tablets at drug stores.

Nature designed the kidneys to do a strenuous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—constantly produces waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
