VOLUME 7.

BENTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY EVENING, DECEMBER 5, 1894.

NUMBER 6.

Elder Martin Ball.

This Baptist divine has been here for ten days, and during that time he has preached the doctrines of the Bible as he honestly and conscientiously understood them and believed them. He is tall and portly, and will up the beam at over 200; he is good looking, has an honest face on him, and is, in our opinion, a true christian gentleman. He is pleasant in his manners and conversative in his conversation he is a good speaker, and uses good language but he talks rather loud and seems to labor more than is necessary in his sermons. Before he came here we heard that he was a religious partisan and a pulp fighter, but if we had a preconceived opinion of him in a respect before he came, it has been changed after hearing him. He is a Missionary Baptist from the top of his head to the tips of his toes, believes and glories in its doctrines, yet he is not so bigoted and so grounded in his own people as to believe there are no christians outside of his own denomination. For a man of this force and power, and his temperance, he is indeed conservative, and shows in his walk and conversation that the salvation of souls is uppermost in his mind, and that instead of making religious enemies he prefers the peaceful friendship of men and women of all denominations. He is a fine specimen of physical manhood and he bids fair to live to ripe old age and do much good in the world. He is devoted to his wife and his home, which is another trait of character to draw people to him. He is a native Mississippian, and his wife a native of Georgia, and this combination of southern sentiment is indicative of their true devotion to family, church and state. He belongs to a family of people, noted for their bravery, chivalry and patriotism, and it is said that in his younger days he would not go out of the way for a brawl or fight, but the civilizing effects of the christian religion came just in time to save him, and for years he has been giving his time to his work and the care of his family. He is one of the men that a chain and character of circumstances have done much to make him a good and useful minister. He has visited our town twice, and during his stay of these short intervals he has gained a warm place in the hearts of this people. Such men are useful and the world would be better off if it had more of them in it.

Poor Digestion

Leads to nervousness, fretfulness, peevishness, chronic dyspepsia and great misery. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the remedy. It tones the stomach, creates an appetite, and gives a relish to food. It makes pure blood and gives healthy action to all the organs of the body. Take Hood's for Hood's Sarsaparilla cures.

Hood's Pills become the favorite cathartic with every one who tries them. 25 cents.

There are no short cuts to happiness. The only way a man can be happy is to be true to himself and his fellow men and do his duty. Such conduct leads through difficult and disagreeable ways oftentimes, but after all it is the only road to happiness. The man who is willing to be a rascal to-day in order to get money he fancies will make him happy to-morrow, and get farther away from peace and tranquility with every breath and every heart beat. The man who is honest and doing faithfully his duty as he truly sees it, is the only one rich or poor, who finds real happiness.

Not long ago a London preacher indulged in a little bit of sarcasm over a small collection. He did it very neatly in a preface to his sermon on the following Sunday. "Brethren," he said, "our collection last Sunday was very small one. When I look at this congregation I say to myself, 'Where are the poor?' But as I looked at the collection, when we counted it, I exclaimed, 'Where are the rich?'"

Lady Lisburn's Trouble.

BY "WANDERING JIM."

SIR ROBT. LISBURN and his wife were not among the silliest. For one thing, Sir Robert was 30 something, and when you are 30 something gravity comes. But he was very much in love with his young wife. He handed her out of the family carriage carefully and the very prettiest ankle and the tiniest shoe peeped out for a moment as she stepped down.

As she tripped up the broad carpeted stairs to her room, there was a look of great happiness in her eyes.

"And is my dear girl quite happy?" said Sir Robert.

Young Lady Lisburn (she was tall and pleasant looking) turned to him affectionately.

"Your dear girl," she said, "has had her worries in her life. She had one big worry."

"How big?"

Lady Lisburn widened her arms to give an idea of the size.

"But it's all over now, and I am very happy."

"Perhaps," said Sir Robert, "perhaps the dear girl will tell me all about it some day."

"She may—some day," said the young bride, flushing. "Just now she is so contented that she doesn't want even to think about it."

The next morning they went off to the Engadine. It was two months later that they returned; trunks and portmanteaus plastered all over with square and circular labels—Hotel Bolleone and Hotel Beau Rivage and a lot of others. Both Sir Robert and Lady Lisburn looked very jolly and well.

There were letters waiting for Lady Lisburn. She read them in her bedroom. As she saw the writing on one of the envelopes she grew red, and then very white. She perused the letter again and again, with hands trembling and a face that looked into the mirror with a frightened look. Then she turned off the electric light and sank on her knees and sobbed. They stayed in town several days.

They drove out a good deal visiting; but young Lady Lisburn looked ill and all out of sorts and scarce spoke to her husband. He seemed to be repelled by her coldness, and I noticed there was no kissing. It made me quite melancholy to see how quickly they had forgotten the happiness of a while ago. Once or twice Lady Lisburn tried to rouse herself; but the look of worry quickly came back, and her husband, placid and even as he was, could not help feeling disturbed.

One evening in the latter part of the week Lady Lisburn was sitting at the open window of their room, her face resting on her hand, looking out into the square and I am sure, seeing nothing.

A page boy entered with a foreign message. She opened it, read the type-written words, and crumpled quickly the sheet in her hand as Sir Robert came in.

"I want to say something to you, Robert," she said in a shaky voice. He came over to her.

"I want to go away from you for a few weeks."

"A few weeks?" he repeated blankly.

"A few weeks unless you want me to be a miserable woman all my life, you must let me do this. Let me go; and when I come back I shall be quite jolly, and I shall love you more than ever, and we—"

"My dear," said Sir Robert, "you are perfectly unreasonable! You are not yourself!"

"Unfortunately I am," interposed the young wife sadly.

"Or you wouldn't dream of proposing such a preposterous thing. Now, love, just you go to bed early to night, and have a good rest, and you'll be all right in the morning."

"If you don't let me go, Robert,

I shall never be able to rest again. I shall be nothing but a curse to you and a misery to myself for all my life. Do let me go."

"My dear love," said Sir Robert, rising with a very decided air, "if you absolutely refuse to tell me the motive of your disappearance I absolutely refuse to let you go."

"Then I—then I must go without your permission."

She said this without defiance and in the humblest way.

Sir Robert went down stairs and stood at the door for a few minutes, smoking his cigar rather quickly. Then he turned and went to the telephone room and looked in the book and rang up. Lady Lisburn white and set on face, returned to her room, and prepared for her journey.

It was a surprise to Sir Robert to find in the hall not ten minutes later the man for whom he had telephoned. He was a burly, scarlet-faced man, and he gave his card to Sir Robert with awkward fat bow:

THOMAS BESTER,

Frederic Sweetser & Company,
Inquiry Agents.

"Come into this room Mr.—Mr. Bester."

Mr. Bester wiped his boots with particular care.

"You'd like something to drink, perhaps?"

Mr. Bester pulled his waistcoat down and coughed slightly, and said that he didn't know as a drop of whiskey would do him any particular harm. At any rate he said (he said this with the air of a man prepared for any experiment in the interests of science) he'd try.

Sir Robert ordered a large whiskey and gave instructions that he was to be told when Lady Lisburn left the hotel.

"We need not hurry until that happens," said Sir Robert. He explained to Mr. Bester what was required.

There was to be no fuss, insisted Sir Robert, and no interference. All Bester had to do was to follow Lady Lisburn, and if she was in any danger to wire Sir Robert at once and himself take such steps as he might think were necessary.

"That's the way," said Mr. Bester, with approbation: "take things calmly. Much better in the long run. I ought to know I've been at it in the yard and out of the yard, 30 year come next February."

"I suppose you've had some interesting cases to deal with," remarked Sir Robert, politely.

Mr. Bester stood up and looked at himself in the mirror for a moment and then sat down again heavily.

"The most interesting," he said, "are them that nobody don't deal with."

Mr. Bester took another sip from tumbler and essayed to rest one knee on the other, but found the position for a gentleman of his rotundity uncomfortable and relinquished the endeavor.

"Look here, Sir Robert," said Mr. Bester: "here's a case in point. Just what you may call a little incident. Look here. This (taking a wax match from the box and sticking it upright on the table) this is Mister Bertie Ellenborough; and this (taking another and sticking it upright) this is Miss Whatshername. Really I forget her name. However that don't matter."

The door opened softly but neither of the men noticed it.

"Very well then. Few years ago Mister Bertie Ellenborough (that's this one) knows Miss Whatshername (that's this one); and she loves him and writes him warm rapturous letters—letters that she would be ashamed now to read, as for any one else to read. Still, a good girl, mind you. Mister Bertie comes up to town, forgets her, goes to the bad, slips himself off to America, and gets worse and worse. He becomes hard up, and what does he do then but blackmail Miss Whatshername?"

"Damn'd scoundrel!" exclaimed Sir Robert heartily.

"Blackmails her. I happens to go out to trace a chap, and I meets Mister Bertie in a saloon, and he tells me all about it."

"Ought to be hanged!" remarked Sir Robert.

"But that isn't the worst. I tells him for a lark that I'm a bit of a scamp myself and brags a bit; and then Mister Bertie goes one better and assures me that he burned the letters."

"There is a scamp for you. Making a regular income out of it, too."

"Girl married, I wonder?"

"So I understand," said Mr. Bester.

"Poor girl," said Sir Robert.

"Wonder who her husband is?"

"Sir Robert," said a voice. They had not switched on the light and the room was growing dark.

"My love?" he said.

"They told me you wanted to see me," said Lady Lisburn; "and, my dear, I'm—I'm not going. I could not have known what I was talking about just now."

"My dear heart exclaimed Sir Robert delightedly. "Tell me what it was that was worrying you."

"Why, absolutely nothing," answered his wife decidedly. "There was no excuse for it."

They took each others hand.

"Shall I look in again, Sir Robert?" said Mr. Bester, respectfully.

He had been standing aside and pretending with excellent savoir faire to look out of the window.

"Oh, I beg your pardon, Bester," said Sir Robert. "No, you needn't look in again. I'll send your people a cheque for your trouble."

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house, and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it if procurable. G. A. Dykman, drug-gist Catskill, N. Y., says that Dr. King's New Discovery is undoubtedly the best cough remedy; that he has used it in his family for eight years, and it has never failed to do all that is claimed for it. Why not try a remedy so long tried and tested. Trial bottles free at Lemon's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1.

Judge Barr has ordered the sale of more than 77,000 acres of mineral and timber land, situated in Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia, belonging to the American Association, Limited, to satisfy the holders of $1,500,000 of the company's bonds. The American Association, Limited, is an English syndicate that has spent its millions so freely in the effort to build up big enterprises at Middleborough, Ky., and elsewhere around Cumberland Gap.

Spitting Blood

Given Over by the Doctors!

LIFE SAVED BY

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL

"Seven years ago, my wife had a severe attack of lung trouble which the physicians pronounced consumption. The cough was extremely distressing, especially at night, and was frequently attended with the spitting of blood. The doctors being unable to help her, I turned her to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was surprised at the great relief it gave. Before using one whole bottle, she was cured, so that now she is quite strong and healthy. That this medicine saved my wife's life, I have not the least doubt."—R. MORRIS, Memphis, Tenn.

A GREAT REMEDY."

It is said that proprietary medicines are usually endorsed only by the lower and more ignorant classes of the people. Germetuer is a notable exception. Its endorses and its friends are everywhere among the very best and most prominent people. Its very pleasant taste and harmless nature, its singular merits and unquestioned superiority recommend it to intelligent people everywhere as the safest, surest and best remedy known to medical science for the relief and cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Nervousness, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Bile Complaints, Fever and all Malarial Disorders.

THE BLACK-DRAUGHT for Dyspepsia.

We understand there is now a petition circulating asking for the Benton postoffice, when the present postmaster dies or resigns. This shows some enterprise at least and would lead a man to conclude that it is just about as safe to be dead in times like these as to be alive, but if a man can be appointed postmaster while another is in without death, resignation or removal, he is certainly a dandy.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic

"Says Good Old GRANNY METCALFE"

I am 85 years old and have used about all of the cough and lung remedies that have been sold during my life, and for the benefit of the suffering, I will say that I have never used any remedy equal to Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey. It gives quick and permanent relief in grippe, as well as other coughs.

"DR. BELL'S PINE TAR HONEY."

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Double Marriage.

Two couples of our neighbors ran away to Paris, Tenn., last week and were married. Their names are Andrew Smith and Miss Nola Camp and Rowland Vaughn and Miss Roselle Minter. The young men are not hurt with beauty, but are clever and hard-working, but they both married beautiful young women and should feel very proud of their conquest. The editor of the Tribune wishes them a long life of joy, happiness and prosperity.

The town trustees had a stormy meeting Monday night and did about as they should have done, ignored the late lamented levy of the outrageous ad valorem tax recently placed upon the property of the town. The board sometimes gets wrong, but it gets right just as often. The trouble is the members of the board don't pay attention enough to the law.

It will not be long until some another visit to Union Hill whither he is called to see his patient.

THE BLACK-DRAUGHT for Dyspepsia.

We understand there is now a petition circulating asking for the Benton postoffice, when the present postmaster dies or resigns. This shows some enterprise at least and would lead a man to conclude that it is just about as safe to be dead in times like these as to be alive, but if a man can be appointed postmaster while another is in without death, resignation or removal, he is certainly a dandy.
