THE ALDERMEN WIPE OUT SEVEN SALOONS.

Upper Board Refuses to Renew the License of Seven Saloons.

THE LIGHT PROPOSITION NOT BEFORE THE BOARD.

The bond company took up the saloon licenses of the grog purveyors of the city and demanded a commensurate measure of reform in this respect, as every argument and evidence were rejected, which meant the proposition of the improvements in this doing business without a license, if they would. Mr. J. R. Thomas, Mr. J. N. Hewitt, Mr. Otto Longstreet, Mr. J. A. Ward, Mr. J. D. Calhoun, Mr. J. M. Reaves and Mr. F. F. Bridge were among those who attended the meeting. The attempt to report the application of the city had so many points and drawbacks to cover the ground.

THE CEMETERY OF THE SOCIAL DEPOT

Mrs. E. F. Byng has Passed Away.

OCT. 22

The following is a notice of Mrs. E. F. Byng, who passed away at her residence on Second street, last evening. She was a beloved member of the Presbyterian church and of the Social Depot society. She leaves a host of friends and admirers who will miss her. The interment was held at 4 o'clock this afternoon, in the cemetery of the Social Depot. The service was conducted by the Rev. Joseph A. Smith, pastor of the church, and the Rev. Mr. Green, chaplain of the depot. The body was laid to rest in the quiet and peaceful domain of the loved. May she rest in peace!

The Mulcahy’s Rise

The Troublesome Right
Friend—Sir, my dear, it’s time you left for your evening concert.

Mr. Mulcahy—Oh, indeed? I believe you are right. I can’t understand how you have managed to persuade me.

Mrs. Mulcahy—Very well, then, I will call you after the concert.

Mr. Mulcahy—Thank you, my dear. I shall be sorry to leave you, but I must comply with your wishes.

Mrs. Mulcahy—Good-night, my dear. I shall be waiting for you at home.

Mr. Mulcahy—Good-night, my dear. I shall be back as soon as possible.

The next day.

Mr. Mulcahy—Good-morning, my dear. How did you sleep last night?

Mrs. Mulcahy—Very well, my dear. I had a pleasant dream.

Mr. Mulcahy—What was it about?

Mrs. Mulcahy—I was dreaming that we were rich.

Mr. Mulcahy—That is interesting. I have never heard of a woman dreaming of being rich.

Mrs. Mulcahy—I suppose it is because I have never been rich before.

Mr. Mulcahy—Well, I shall try to make you as comfortable as possible.

Mrs. Mulcahy—Thank you, my dear. I shall always be grateful to you for your kindness.

Mr. Mulcahy—You are welcome, my dear. I shall do my best to make you as happy as possible.

Mrs. Mulcahy—You are a wonderful husband, my dear. I shall always be grateful to you for your kindness.

"Don't you find it a little embarrassing to be engaged to a widower?"

"Well, yes," admitted the young girl frankly, "I do. Every once in a while I find myself starting to ask him if I am really the first girl he ever loved."

There was a brief silence. Presently the commuter's wife looked at her husband's flushed face, at his wilted collar, and at the tie beneath.

"Thanks," said the commuter. "The theft was the paint I used to put on my waistcoat."

"Then the optimist proceeded to relate his previous conversation with the cynic. The young man listened with keen appreciation. He did not get mad."

"Of course," said he, "you can't squeal. You've awed to let the fellow keep the pin, and you're bound to do it, but I'd demand an explanation if I were you. The circumstances found. Who does it belong to? This gentleman has it.'"

"Sir," he said; when it came his time to talk. "perhaps I am not such a villain as you think. I could describe his pin ... last two years. I am married now and I want to get the opal set in a ring for my wife. I thank you for returning it to me."

"A customer thing happened on the train this morning," said the commuter. "Perhaps I am not such a villain as you think. I could describe his pin ... last two years. I am married now and I want to get the opal set in a ring for my wife. I thank you for returning it to me."

The aged servant, aged 98 years old at the time of her death, vied to proclaim pride's victory, and he passed away, taking his secret with him, leaving his mystery unsolved. --Chicagur Daily News.

The ancient church of St. Piran (Cornwall), which was recently discovered in the sands at Perran, cornwall, was an important religious center in the medieval period. It is believed to have been a place of pilgrimage and learning. The church has been rebuilt and is now a popular tourist attraction.

The memory of the past is richly represented in the form of old photographs, maps, and documents. These items provide valuable insights into the history and culture of the region. The museum also contains a collection of artifacts and relics, which offer a glimpse into the daily life of the people who lived in the area.

The museum is located in the heart of the city, and is easily accessible by foot or by public transportation. It is open to the public on a regular basis, and admission is free. Visitors can explore the exhibits at their own pace, and are encouraged to ask questions of the staff members. The museum is a valuable resource for anyone interested in learning more about the history and culture of the region.
