Information Voters Should Know

Persons who have moved precincts, or who have never registered before in their present precinct, will have an opportunity to register at the court house in Fulton Friday, July 9th, C. N. Holladin, county clerk stated today. The book will be brought here for the purpose of registering people so they may be eligible to vote in the August primary.

In a letter to County Clerk, signed by Attorney General Hubert Meredith, following opinion was handed down in regard to changing party affiliations:

"Where a voter in a precinct was registered at the last preceding general election, the registration as it then stood is the governing one as to his party affiliations, and fixes his right to participate in the next following primary election."

In order to reconcile this opinion with Sec. 1498 bb, sub. section, and Sec. 1550-19, the attorney general further ruled: I am of the opinion as above stated, that a voter cannot change his party affiliation after the last general election, so as to participate in the primary succeeding that general election.

"You have stated to me that there is a court house in Human and another in Fulton, and both in your county, and that the circuit courts are held in each of these places and that you maintain an office in each court house, and you have asked me your office at both places. I see no reason why you cannot take your books to your office in Fulton and allow folks to register before you or after you, at either of these places. In fact, I think you should do so. It was the evident purpose in establishing a court house at that point to make provision for the convenience of the folks in that section of the county. Such action will evidently make it more convenient for those who are accessible to that point to register as voters."

Hubert Meredith, Attorney General.

In order to control mosquitoes oil will be spread on the creeks and lowlands, as this insect is the bearer of malaria. The people are urged to co-operate with the health department in the prevention of malaria, by keeping premises as sanitary as possible. Lots with weeds and old rubbish should be cleaned, alleys and streets kept clean. Discarded cans should have holes punched in them before cast aside to prevent collection of water and providing breeding places for mosquitoes.

POLICE NEWS

An epidemic of criminal offenses seems to have broken out in and around Fulton in the past week, with the police department kept busy.

Prowlers for the third night in succession broke into local homes. Thursday night of last week entrance was gained to the home of Dulon Adkins in Riceville by punching a hole in the screen. Mr. Adkins trousers with approximately $2.50 in change were taken.

The home of Charlie Woodruff nearby was entered, and change stolen from the pockets of his father, including a two and a half dollar gold piece made in 1853, and two half dimes.

Some potatoes and a coat were taken from the porch of Tom Murray in Riceville the same night.

Chief Dalton sent out descriptions of the stolen property to police of surrounding towns, including that of a 19 jewel Elgin watch stolen from B. J. Pigue, and a 38 caliber army pistol stolen from the office of Pierce Cequin Lumber Co.

Chief Dalton and Officers Boaz and Dunn attended the trial of Lewis Harris and M. C. Hale, local negroes, who were arrested here Saturday night with a quantity of illegal liquor in their possession.

Night officers picked up three white boys Friday night as they were caught ransacking automobiles around the Usona Hotel and the Passenger Station. They were held for examining trial.

RAIL PENSION BILL PASSES CONGRESS

The Cresser-Wagner Railroad Retirement bill, agreed upon by railroad workers and managements, after extended negotiations, passed the House last week at Washington, by a vote of 361 to 1. Two days later the measure was put through the Senate without a roll call, after all amendments had been rejected and sent to the White House.

The Act provides all the money needed for the new system and authorizes a refund to employees and carriers of taxes paid under the existing law. The employees will get about $70,000,000 and the money will be distributed to employees about the middle of July. The pension legislation replaces the existing act. Under the latter act about 6,000 pensions have already been awarded rail workers.

This is the third time that retirement legislation affecting more than a million railmen has gone through Congress by a substantially unanimous vote.

Fulton is now facing its greatest progress in recent years. Civic workers have labored hard and faithfully that our community might go forward. This is well and good.

We have in our community a well-rounded set up. We have good churches, fine schools, railways, highways, plenty of good business houses, a good climate, a rich agricultural section practicing diversification. Here we have several nice industries, with others coming. This is well and good.

August 7, 1937, the people of Fulton will go to the polls and select men for the office of mayor and city council. These men elected by the people will face the biggest task of any administration has faced in recent years.

Not only must the council strive to work out problems now existing, but will have to weigh well many matters that will arise as our community readjusts itself to improving conditions. The job is a difficult and hard one—one that brings members of the board no remuneration other than the satisfaction of knowing that they are earnestly striving to service the best interests of their community.

But regardless of who shall serve the people, every effort should be made to place the city's business on a true plane of efficiency and economy. The taxpayers money should be handled with a great deal more care than their own, and every department's operations be kept functioning in business-like order. Politics and personal interests should never enter the council chambers, but the general welfare and progress of the community guarded with constant vigilance.

We reiterate—the task is a difficult one, but we feel confident that our next council will prove equal to the job.

CLEAN UP

Nothing makes a city more appealing than cleanliness. Fulton is as fine a little city as there is to be found anywhere and is steadily growing.

But we have become too negligent about keeping our city looking spic and span. In the down town business district the streets and back alleys are cluttered with trash, old papers and garbage. This should not exist.

Of course it is a hard matter to keep our streets clear of this refuse but a little time and attention on the part of property owners and business places would help matters. And certainly, we all like to see things clean and attractive.

LET'S CLEAN UP our city and keep it clean.

SIX STEPS TO RUIN

Unless the constantly widening gap between government income and outgo is closed, writes Roger W. Babson, one of the outstanding American economists, six financially ruinous consequences will result:

"First, continued deficits ultimately lead to fear of government credit. Second, unsound public credit means unwillingness to lend the government money to pay its bills. Third, the treasury is forced to print paper money to pay its deficits. Fourth, the paper money falls like a meteor in value as prices shoot sky-high. Fifth, the buying power of salaries, wages, savings accounts, insurance policies, and bonds drop to practically nothing. Sixth, the ruined, starving middle class take the reins of government by force to bring order out of chaos."

Mr. Babson does not think it too late to put the government's financial house in order but quick action is essential. On a per-person basis Federal expenses since 1860 have increased from $2 to $55 a year. The average American family of five has an income of $1,700. It owes as its share of the soaring national debt, $1,375. In addition to owing this debt it must pay $275 annually in Federal taxes alone. Only an aggressive public demand for retrenchment and a balanced budget can save us from the "six steps to ruin" Mr. Babson describes.

FOLK TYPES

THE DESPERADO

The American bad man is the lineal descendant of Robin Hood, Dick Sheppard and Jack Wilton, all famous English tradition and English literature. Often he is excused for his exploits, sometimes because he first suffered wrong at the hands of his neighbors or the government. It was a bold, bad man, even though a fanatic, who gave his name as a watchword to the Civil War. John Brown, trained on the frontier, became for millions the incarnation of the spirit of freedom; how deeply shown by the great popularity of Benet's poem John Brown's Body a few years ago. Jesse James represented to many people all the attractiveness of desperado life. "Life in the greenwood" as it would have been in Robin Hood's day, I fear that many identified him with the losing cause and glorified him accordingly. The folk ballads about Jesse James are a bit puzzling to us, with their account of Jesse's nobility and his exploits.

"Jesse was a man, a friend to the poor,
He never would see a man suffer pain;

And with his brother Frank he robbed the Chicago bank,
And stopped the Glendale train."

Psychologically it has been easy for the Americans to find themselves in sympathy with lawless men, for many of our earliest settlers were proudly the enemies of the law and were certainly not adverse to being regarded as people whom the law had harmed. It became for them a suffered, like the early Christians at the hands of cruel governments. Many another group sought out the "land of the free" to escape cruel punishments at the hands of constituted authority. Hosts of individual pioneers were sold outright for a period of slavery because of their political activities in several unsuccessful revolts against what they regarded as the tyranny of rulers. Redemptioners, as they were called, were common in many of the colonies. Many a substantial family of later times owes its American origin to these men who worked out their term of servitude for opposing injustice. So eager have we been to make a clean bill of health for all our pioneers that we have forgotten to be truthful and just when we consider this large element in our early national life. For instance, one of the proudest counties in the state bears the name of a pioneer who served out his term of slavery in New England, became prominent there, and then moved to Kentucky, where he rose to high office and wealth. His son served as a high officer in the Confederate Army; his original holdings today still guaranteed in part to the town where he lived, since he gave land for the railroad depot and for a city park.

The bold, bad man is still alive as an influence, as was shown in recent times by the throngs that drove across the plains to attend the funeral of Pretty Boy Floyd and the handkerchiefs in the blood of John Dillinger. I have no figures on the output of dime thrillers on Jesse James, Buffalo Bill, and others; but I imagine that many a youth of today has furtively read hair-raising tales of bad men and secretly resolved to steal away to Sherwood Forest to join Robin Hood or else go out West and hunt a few buffalos and Indians.

HISTORY IN THE MAKING

Fulton is situated in the heart of one of the most fertile sections of this country, surpassing in its productivity the far famed valley of the Nile. Fulton, a city of beautiful homes, of handsome business and public edifices sits a Queen among the cities of the Purchase, the fairest of them all.

The city is located at the crossing of the great Illinois Central system, and several national highways passed through here. Fulton has every reason to be called "The Hub City". We have around us a fertile agricultural section, supported by industrial activities free of labor troubles.

In 1850 the land upon which Fulton has been built was owned by B. F. Carr, Dr. G. W. Paschall and one or two others. The survey of the C. O. & S. W. railroad was made about that time and the road built through Louisville. It is now part of the I. C. System having been purchased some years ago.

It is said that W. T. Woolridge erected a frame store building on the site of the C. O. & S. W. depot in 1861 and opened the first store, a grocery. The same year T. M. Thomas built the first house on the Tennessee side. The war coming on just at this time no further efforts at building a town were made till the war closed, there being only a dozen or more families here.

Peace having been declared between the North and South, a few pioneer citizens began to build the future city. Among these sturdy men were the Paschalls, Normans, McFalls, Carrs, Eddings, Tomlinsons and others whose families numbered among our best and most substantial citizens. There was quite a wide difference between the little village with its muddy streets and road and log cabins then and the present well built business structures and handsome residences and other buildings of today, its concrete sidewalks and paved streets.

The growing town was incorporated in 1872 under the name of Fulton. About this time the Mississippi Central, as it was then known, now the I. C. railroad, was extended through Jackson, Tennessee to Cairo, being located at the junction of this line and the C. O. & S. W. which had been extended to Memphis. Fulton began to assume some importance. The town was laid off into lots which were purchased by people who came to cast their lot in the beautiful and growing town. This has continued until the present day. One by one improvements were made and people came. The village took on the airs of a larger town and then grew until at this time it contains all the comforts, conveniences and amenities of a modern city.

Fulton is ideally located and is populated by people who are commingling the Puritan and Cavalier, ambitious, sturdy, moral, reverential, refined, cultured and possessing an indomitable spirit to succeed in whatever they undertake, and the elements such as soil, climate and other natural resources are here to aid them. Practically any kind of crop can be grown in this section, and diversification is practiced generally.

The farmer with his grain has made Fulton the natural center for the milling industry, and Browder Mill employs many people, doing an immense business. Grain and grasses have developed the livestock interests and poultry raising industry. At one time Fulton was a big tobacco market, with four or five large tobacco barns, handling five or six million pounds per year.

After the Illinois Central System purchased the C. O. & S. W. R. R. several hundred thousand dollars were spent in raising the track, building a viaduct, division headquarters with superintendent and other offices here. A large passenger station was erected, an elaborate new yards and round house, and Riceville was established in our northern suburbs.

Fulton was for many years widely known as an important lumber center. Magnificent forests furnished millions of feet of timber which were converted by sawmills into lumber and large plants here drew an immense business and employed many people.

A quarter of a century or more back, Fulton's largest department store was the Globe, located on the hill. In an old picture I saw the other day, the following persons composed the personnel of this store: Sam Turner, Jim Butcher, W. F. Akers, J. Kelly Wood, Mike Fry, Tobe Huddleston, Mack Roach, Miss Lela Bard, Mrs. Florence Billheimer, Mrs. Irene Boaz, Mrs. J. Kelly Wood, Mrs. Effie Witty, Miss Pearl Terry, Miss Willie Nix and U. H. Scott.

L. T. Callahan, for several years after 1900, was dubbed the "king of Kentucky" operating a large horse and mule barn on Main street, buying and selling stock throughout West Kentucky, Tennessee and Southern Illinois. Mr. Callahan served as a councilman for several years.

Fulton's only bank was first organized in 1897 under the name of the Citizens Bank, beginning business Oct. 2 of that year with a capital stock of $12,500. On February 1, the following year it doubled its capital, making it $25,000. The institution continued to grow as a State bank until March 15, 1902, when it was changed to a national bank, and the name changed to the City National Bank. It continued to flourish and in 1906 again increased its stock of $80,000 in order to purchase the handsome building in which the bank now has its home. It was fitted up with elegant fixtures in keeping with the splendid record it has made and it is one of the handsomest banks in the state.

The W. K. Hall Lumber Company was once the outstanding concern of its kind in this section. W. K. Hall was a native of Columbus, Hickman county, and came to Fulton in 1880. He was active in civic, club and social activities of the community for years. He was a member of the city council and the Christian church.

FORESTS PROVIDE FEED, WAGES, AND RECREATION

What is the value of forest lands which comprise almost one-third the total land area of the United States. In dollars and cents, says the United States Forest Service, they provide full-time work in normal times for 1,300,000 persons and assure supplemental cash incomes for 2,500,000 farmers.

More than 330,000,000 acres of forest lands are grazed by domestic livestock. From 144,000,000 acres of western forest lands, 2½ million cattle and 12 million sheep get 3 to 8 months' feed each year.

The more than 170,000,000 acres of federally owned national forests shelter almost 75 percent of the remaining big game range. In these forests more than 30 million persons annually seek rest and recreation. The forests are in 37 States and in Alaska and Puerto Rico. A visitor may travel through them and find all the conveniences needed, or he may visit the 70 primitive areas which have neither roads nor civilization.

This new forest economy, says the Forest Service, is one of plenty rather than scarcity; of permanence rather than impermanence.

A Good Spender

In the conduct of its business the railroad is a buyer of practically everything.

It buys a large portion of the country's output of coal, steel, lumber, oil, machinery, rubber, textiles and other major products. It is an important customer of public utilities.

Every branch of business profits from its vast and widely varied purchases—and as the railroad prospers, these purchases increase.

It is an old and true saying that what the railroad earns it spends—spends promptly to bring added employment and prosperity to the nation's business.

"THE NEWS" WEEKLY SCRAPBOOK

Week's Best Recipe

RHUBARB MARMALADE—2 medium-sized oranges; 1 medium-sized lemon; 5 pounds sugar; 4 pounds rhubarb, diced; 1 pound seedless raisins. Force oranges and lemon through the food chopper, mix with other ingredients and let stand a half hour. Cook slowly 45 to 60 minutes or to marmalade consistency, stirring often. Place in hot sterilized jars and seal. One No. 2 can of shredded pineapple can be used instead of raisins if preferred.

For Flower Lovers—

To keep flower pots from toppling off porch railings, drive a blind-headed nail 3 or 4 inches long into the top of the nail so that it will fit into the hole in the bottom of the pot. Sowing seeds in rows has many advantages over sowing broadcast. It makes it much easier to recognize the seedlings as they appear. Cultivation and the removal of weeds is also facilitated.

In the Kitchen—

The maker of delicious soup never allows her soup to boil rapidly. She watches it until it reaches the boiling point and then turns it low and lets it simmer for hours until the meat is completely done and ready.

For Those Who Sew—

Always use a short needle in hemstitching. When hemstitching on linen the thread may be easily drawn if a yardstick is laid along a straight line, being careful to insure the proper margin on the outer edge of the piece. If a piece of hard white soap is rubbed along the linen, the threads may be drawn with ease.

BOARD MEDIATES STRIKE

More Deaths As Steel Riots Continue . . . Russians
Hop Over Pole to U. S. . . . New Cabinet for France

They flew here from Russia: (left to right) Beliakoff, Chekalov, Baidukoff.

Miss Perkins Names Three

THE federal government took a hand in the settlement of the dispute between John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization and the big independent steel companies, as the mediation board of three, appointed by Secretary of Labor Frances E. Perkins, sat in Cleveland to hear the cases of both sides. The government's move was prompted as the steel strikes, affecting plants in several states, threatened new outbreaks of violence which might be beyond the powers of local or even state governments to control.

As the mediators began their task of effecting a compromise, a dozen persons had been killed in strike riots and scores more injured since the strike against Republic, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and Inland started May 26. Eighty-five thousand workers already had lost approximately $10,000,000 in wages.

The climactic incident which finally goaded the government into some action other than occasional "off-the-record" statements was a widely-publicized telegram to President Roosevelt from Gov. Martin L.
Davey of Ohio, fearful lest the bloodshed already occurring in Youngstown and other cities breed into a little civil war.

"Apparently every avenue of approach available to the state of Ohio has been exhausted for the time being," Governor Davey wired. "It appears that the matter has gone way beyond the powers and opportunities of one state to deal with it."

Charles P. Taft II, Cincinnati lawyer, son of the former President and chief justice, and a member of the "brain trust" of Governor Landon's presidential campaign, was named chairman of the mediation board. Appointed to sit with him were Lloyd K. Garrison, former president of the national labor relations board, and Edward F.
McGrady, assistant secretary of labor and a former A. F. of L. organizer under Samuel Gompers.

The mediation board had a job cut out for it. It was to conduct an investigation of the strikes and the grievances of both sides, then make recommendations for a settlement.
It has power to act as arbitrator only if both sides request it to.

Johnstown's Martial Law

MAYOR DANIEL J. SHIELDS, of Johnstown, Pa., where 15,000 were out of work because of the forced shut-down of Bethlehem Steel's Cambria plant, was not so successful in his appeal to the President. Federal action to prevent recurring riots with attendant injuries was refused him. But Gov.
George H. Earle declared martial law there and forced Bethlehem to close the plant, despite vigorous protests. Forty thousand coal miners had announced they would hold a mass meeting to decide upon action in aiding the steel strikers;
rioting between strikers, non-strikers and police seemed imminent, but in the face of the Pennsylvania
police they did not come off.

Death Strikes for Two

TWO C. I. O. strikers were killed and 25 persons were injured as strikers and police fought for three hours in front of the Republic Steel plant in Youngstown, Ohio, before a truce was arranged between Sheriff Ralph Elser and John Stevenson, union organizer. Gov. Davey finally sent state troops.

A mob of strikers had attacked a company of police on guard at the plant, forcing the latter to retaliate with tear gas guns. Snipers among the mob tried to pick off policemen from vantage points on nearby hills.

At neighboring cities of Warren and Canton police were apprehensive because of threats by the C. I.
O. union to prevent a proposed back-to-work movement by loyal Republic Steel workers.

Steel Wants Its Mail

THE Republic Steel corporation filed in the federal district court in Washington a petition for a writ of mandamus compelling Postmaster General Farley to deliver parcel post packages to steel plants in Ohio which local postmasters have refused to deliver.

The petition charged that the local postmaster at Niles, Ohio, was refusing to deliver packages containing food and clothing and addressed to the loyal workers who were being housed inside the Republic plant.

Harry J. Dixon, local postmaster of Warren, at a hearing by the senate post office committee, testified that because of a ruling by W. W.
Howes, first assistant postmaster general, he had refused to accept for delivery to the plants thousands of packages containing food, soap, clothing or other articles considered
"abnormal."

Short Cut from Soviet

THREE Russian airmen successfully completed the first non-stop airplane flight from the Soviet Union to the United States. Taking the short, but hazardous, route over the North pole, they hopped off from Moscow to arrive in Vancouver, Wash., 63 hours and 17 minutes later, after traveling nearly 6,000 miles. They had planned to alight at Oakland, Calif., but poor visibility drove them down 580 miles from their goal.

The three were Pilot Valeri Chek-
aloff, Co-Pilot George Philippovitch Baidukoff and Navigator Alexander Vassilievitch Beliakoff.

French Premier Quits

FACED with one of those financial crises so frequent in recent French history, Premier Leon Blum asked the senate for powers which would make him financial dictator of France for about six weeks. He did not believe it possible to bring order into the treasury without so drastic a measure. When it was refused he and the 20
members of his cabinet resigned. He had served 117 days
of his second year as premier of France—
something of a modern record. President Albert Lebrun designated Camille Chautemps, radical socialist and a former premier, to attempt the formation of a new cabinet. A successor to Blum was not immediately in sight.

The Popular Front government was one of the bulwarks of leftist tendencies in Europe, as opposed to extreme Fascism, and openly expressed its sympathy for the Spanish loyalists.

pen gave to the world many important works of literature, including enty-seven years old.

Cool, Smart, Comfortable

COOL is the word for Carrie when she wears one of these smart new frocks by Sew-Your-Own. No matter whether she's three or thirty, a June bride or a proud mama, Carrie will find what she needs for summer comfort here.

Left to Right. The young frock with the interesting middle and sporty inverted pleat is one that's going in for extra credit at summer school. It has that advanced chic which readily distinguishes co-eds' clothes. If you're campus bound (or just bound for an ordinary vacation) be sure to have a couple of versions of this fashion first with you. Then you'll be set for that heavy summer schedule.

Lines for a Princess. Second to none in the summer is this princess dress. As fit for golf as it is for dancing, you can see at a glance that this is the one dress you can't be even half-way happy without. Fresh in spirit, dainty in detail and becoming to all figures this simple-to-sew frock will introduce countless women to new chic this season. Come on, Milady, shake hands with Chic.

Tot's Tidbit. Only when we're very young are we privileged to wear dresses as cute as this one. The most unaccustomed seamstress can make it with half dozen pieces; the merest remnant will suffice for material. There is more than ordinary intrigue packed in the diminutive skirt that shows a couple of darling dimpled knees so lusciously sun tanned. Use it as a cool, cool top with panties as the ideal hot weather attire, or slip it on as an apron—either way it will be a fine little companion for mother's pet this summer.

The Patterns. Pattern 1258 is designed in sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 3½ yards of 39 inch material plus 4½ yards for braid trimming as pictured.

Pattern 1323 is designed in sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 46 bust). Size 16 requires 5½ yards of 39 inch material for the short length. Beach length requires 7¼ yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1344 is designed for sizes 6 months, 1, 2, and 3 years. Size 1 year requires 1½ yards of 36 inch material. The pockets, cuffs and facings for collar in contrasting material require ¼ yard of 27 inch material.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Uncle Phil Says:

An Interest Worth While

You can't buy friendship. You can sometimes buy interest in yourself that turns to friendship. Woman's place is the home, but not all of the time in the kitchen; a good husband wants his wife to adorn the parlor as well. Civilization may not be doomed, but it may be doomed to a good many dark ages in which brains are flouted.

Better Improve the Other Foot

Put your best foot forward, of course, but that doesn't conceal the defects in the other one; it's got to come, too. One of the greatest mistakes is to stop a man on the street to point out an error he has made. People dress handsomely to please themselves more than to impress others.

Hot Weather is Here—Beware of Biliousness!

Have you ever noticed that in very hot weather your organs of digestion and elimination seem to become torpid or lazy? Your food seems to sit in your stomach, your bowels are sluggish, you feel bloated, and a feeling of restlessness and irritability. Perhaps you may have sick headache, nausea and dizziness or blind spells on suddenly rising. Your tongue may be coated, your complexion bilious and your bowel actions sluggish or insufficient.

These are some of the more common symptoms or warnings of biliousness or so-called "torpid liver," so prevalent in hot climates. Don't neglect them. Take Calomel, the improved calomel compound tablets that give you the effects of calomel and salts, combined. You will be delighted with the prompt relief they afford. Trial package ten cents, family pkg. twenty-five cents. At drug stores. (Adv.)

"Oh, Markham—my dear Markham!" Vance shook his head sadly. "However . . . As you say. There is something back of the lady's histrionics. She has ideas. But she's circuitous. And she wants us to be like those Chinese gods who can't proceed except in a straight line. Sad. But let's try makin' a turn. The situation is something like this: An unhappy lady slips out through the butler's pantry and presents herself on the roof-garden, hopin' to attract our attention. Having succeeded, she informs us that she has proved conclusively that a certain Mr. Kroon has done away with Swift because of amorous jealousy. The lady herself, let us assume, is the spurned and not the spurner. She resents it. She has a temper and is vengeful—and she comes to the roof here for the sole purpose of convincing us that Kroon is guilty."

"But her story is plausible enough," said Markham aggressively. "Why try to find hidden meanings in obvious facts? Kroon could have done it. And your psychological theory regarding the woman's motives eliminates him entirely."

"It doesn't eliminate him at all. It merely tends to involve the lady in a rather unpleasant bit of chicanery. The fact is, her little drama here on the roof may prove most illuminating."

Vance stretched his legs out before him and sank deeper into his chair. "Curious situation. You know, Markham, Kroon deserted the party about fifteen or twenty minutes before the big race—legal matters to attend to for a maiden aunt, he explained—and he didn't appear again until after I had phoned you. Assumed immediately that Swift had shot himself. Doubt inspired me to converse with the elevator boy. I learned that Kroon had not gone down or up in the elevator since his arrival here early in the afternoon."

"What's that?" Markham exclaimed. "That's more than suspicious—taken with what we have just heard from this Miss Weatherby."

"I dare say," Vance was unimpressed. "The legal mind at work. But from my grouchin' amateur point of view I'd want more—oh, much more. However—" Vance rose and meditated a moment. "I'll admit that a bit of lovin' communion with Mr. Kroon is definitely indicated."

He turned to Heath. "Send the chapie up, will you, Sergeant?"

Heath nodded and started toward the door. "And Sergeant," Vance halted him; you might question the elevator boy and find out if there is any one else in the building whom Kroon is in the habit of calling on. If so, follow it up with a few discreet inquiries."

Heath vanished down the stairs, and a minute or so later Kroon sauntered into the study with the air of a man who is bored and not a little annoyed.

"I suppose I'm in for some more tricky questions," he commented. "After glancing about him, Kroon sat down leisurely at one end of the davenport. The man's manner, I could see, infuriated Markham, who leaned forward and asked in cold anger:

"Have you any urgent reasons for objecting to give us what assistance you can in our investigation of this murder?"

Kroon raised his eyebrows. "None whatever," he said with calm superiority. "I might even be able to tell you who shot Woody."

"That's most interesting," murmured Vance, studying the man indifferently. "But we'd much rather find out for ourselves, don't you know?"

Kroon shrugged maliciously and said nothing. "When you deserted the party this afternoon, Mr. Kroon," Vance went on, "you were definitely informed that you were headed for a legal conference of some kind with a maiden aunt. Would you object to giving us, merely as a matter of record, the name and address of your aunt, and the nature of the legal documents?"

"I most certainly would object," returned Kroon coolly. "I fail to see why you should be interested in my family affairs."

Markham swung round toward the man. "That's for us to decide," he snapped. "Do you intend to answer Mr. Vance's question?"

I'm perfectly willing to confess to you that I took a taxicab to and from my aunt's."

Vance gazed up at the ceiling as he smoked. "Suppose," he said, "that the elevator boy should deny that he took you either down or up in the car since your first arrival here this afternoon. What would you say?"

"I'd say that he had lost his memory—or was lying."

"Yes, of course. The obvious retort. Quite." Vance's eyes moved slowly to the man on the davenport. "You will probably have the opportunity of saying just that on the witness stand."

Kroon's eyes narrowed and his face reddened. Before he could speak, Vance went on.

"And you may also have the opportunity of officially giving or withholding your aunt's name and address. The fact is, you may find yourself in the most distressing need of an alibi."

Kroon sank back on the davenport with a supercilious smile. "You're very amusing," he commented lightly. "What next? If you'll ask me a reasonable question, I'll be only too happy to answer."

"Well, let's see where we stand." Vance suppressed an amused smile. "You left the apartment at approximately a quarter to four, took the elevator downstairs and then a taxi,

A Settlement Was Reached.

went to your aunt's to fuss a bit with legal documents, drove back in a taxi, and took the elevator upstairs. Bein' gone a little over half an hour. During your absence Swift was shot. Is that correct?"

"Yes," Kroon was curt. "But how do you account for the fact that when I met you in the hall on your return, you seemed miraculously cognizant of the details of Swift's passing?"

"We've been over that, too. I knew nothing about it. You told me Swift was dead, and I merely surmised the rest."

"Yes—quite. No crime in accurate surmises. Deuced queer coincidence, however. Taken with other facts. As likely as a five-horse win parlay. Extraordinary."

"I'm listening with great interest," Kroon had again assumed his air of superiority. "Why don't you stop beating about the bush?"

"Crushed out his cigarette and got up. 'What I was leadin' up to was the fact that someone has definitely accused you of murdering Swift.'"

Kroon started, and his face went pale. After a few moments he forced a harsh guttural noise intended for a laugh.

"And who, may I ask, has accused me?"

"Miss Madge Weatherby."

One corner of Kroon's mouth went up in a sneer of hatred. "She would! And she probably told you that it was a crime of passion—caused by an uncontrollable jealousy."

"Just that," nodded Vance. "It seems you have been forcing your unwelcome attentions upon her, with dire threats; whereas, all the time, she was madly enamored of Mr. Swift. And so, when the strain became too great, you eliminated your rival."

"Well, I'll be damned!" Kroon thrust his hands deep into his pockets. "I see what you're driving at. Why didn't you tell me this in the first place?"

"Waitin' for the final odds," Vance returned. "You hadn't laid your bet. But now that I've told you, do you care to give us the name and address of your maiden aunt and the nature of the legal documents you had to sign?"

"That's all nonsense," Kroon spluttered. "I don't need an alibi. When the time comes—"

CHAPTER VIII

At this moment Heath appeared at the door, and walking directly to Vance, handed him a page torn from his note-book, on which were several lines of handwriting.

Vance read the note rapidly as Kroon looked on with malignant resentment. Then he folded the paper and slipped it into his pocket. "When the time comes . . . he murmured. "Yes—quite." He raised his eyes lazily to Kroon. "As you say. When the time comes. The time has now come, Mr. Kroon."

The man stiffened, but did not speak. "Do you, by any chance," Vance continued, "know a lady named Stella Fruemon? Has a snug little apartment on the seventeenth floor of this building—only two floors below. Says you were visitin' her around four o'clock today. Left her at exactly four-fifteen. Which might account for your not using the elevator. Also for your reluctance to give us your aunt's name and address. Might account for other things as well. Do you care to revise your story?"

Kroon appeared to be thinking fast. He walked nervously up and down the study floor.

"Puzzlin' and interestin' situation," Vance went on. "Gentleman leaves this apartment at—let's say ten minutes to four. Family documents to sign. Doesn't enter the elevator. Appears in apartment two floors below within a few minutes—been a regular visitor there. Remains till 4:15. Then departs. Shows up again in this apartment at half-past four. In the meantime, Swift is shot through the head—exact time unknown. Gentleman is apparently familiar with various details of the shooting. Refuses to give information regarding his whereabouts during his absence. A lady accuses him of the murder, and demonstrates how he could have accomplished it. Also kindly supplies the motive. Fifteen minutes of gentleman's absence—namely, from 4:15 to 4:30—unaccounted for."

Vance drew on his cigarette. "I say, Mr. Kroon, any suggestion?"

Kroon came to a sudden halt and swung about. He sucked in a deep noisy breath and made a despairing gesture. "All right, here's the story. Take it or leave it. I've been mixed up with Stella Fruemon for the past year. She's nothing but a gold-digger and blackmailer. Madge Weatherby got on to it. She's the jealous member of this combination—not me. And she cared about as much for Woody Swift as I did. Anyway, I got involved with Stella Fruemon. It came to a show-down, and I had to pay through the nose. To avoid scandal for my family, of course. At any rate, we each got our lawyers, and a settlement was reached. She finally named a stiff figure and agreed to sign a general release from all claims. In the circumstances, I had no alternative. Four o'clock today was the time set for the completion of the transaction. My lawyer and hers were to be at her apartment. The certified check and the papers were ready. So I went down there a little before four to clean up the whole dirty business. And I cleaned it up and got out. I had walked down the stairs, and at 4:15, when the hold-up was over, I walked back up the stairs."

Kroon took a deep breath and frowned. "I was so furious—and relieved—that I kept on walking without realizing where I was going. When I opened the door which I thought led into the public hallway outside the Garden apartment, I found I was on the terrace of the roof. When I saw where I was I thought I'd come through the garden and go down the stairway there. It was really the natural thing to do."

"You knew about the gate leading into the garden, then?"

"I've known about it for years. Everybody who's been up here knows about it. Anything wrong with my knowing about the gate?"

"No. Quite natural. And so, you opened the gate and entered the garden?"

"Yes."

"And that would be between a quarter after four and twenty minutes after four?"

"I wasn't holding a stop-watch on myself, but I guess that's close enough . . . When I entered the garden I saw Swift slumped down in his chair. His position struck me as funny, but I paid no attention to it until I spoke to him and got no answer. Then I approached and saw the revolver lying on the tiles, and the hole in his head. It gave me a hell of a shock. I can tell you, and I started to run downstairs to give the alarm. But I realized it would look bad for me. There I was, alone on the roof with a dead man."

"Ah, yes. Discretion. So you played safe. Can't say that I blame you entirely—if your chronology is accurate. So, I take it, you re-entered the public stairway and came down to the front door of the Garden apartment."

"That's just what I did."

"By and by, during the brief time you were on the roof, or even often you returned to the stairway, did you hear a shot?"

Kroon thought a moment. (TO BE CONTINUED)

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building
Washington, D. C.

Washington.—As it becomes more painfully apparent that there is no basis upon which to expect present returns of federal taxation to produce sufficient funds to maintain the administration's rate of spending, the President and the Treasury are peeping into every corner for new sources of money. They have already recommended to congress that the present nuisance taxes be re-enacted to bring in some five hundred million a year and they are casting their eyes elsewhere for other tax receipts.

In addition, and as a part of the general pinch that the Treasury now feels, Mr. Roosevelt has asked congress to revise certain provisions of income tax law to close up loopholes and prevent escape from taxation. The President's message to congress on this point was quite bitter and many observers thought, rather unfair but, nevertheless, he told congress that it was up to the legislative branch to see that there was no tax avoidance.

The President's message dealt with an alleged moral phase of tax avoidance and that part of his message has provoked much criticism of the Chief Executive's attitude. He sought in his statement to the congress to make it appear that many wealthy persons had avoided taxes and that, by so doing, they had sinned.

Now, the President's view is entitled to consideration and his charge that there is tax avoidance is correct. Indeed, I believe no one can successfully dispute the charge that there is tax avoidance of a wholesale character in the United States. But when the matter is placed in the category of a moral issue, it must be examined in a different light. The President did not talk about tax evasion in his message; he talked about tax avoidance. Tax evasion is illegal and immoral. Tax avoidance is purely and simply the arrangement by an individual so that he pays the lowest tax he can and still complies with the law.

I am inclined to side with those in congress who have criticized the President on the attitude he assumed. As long as congress tells an individual, through the language of a law, that he must pay so much tax and prescribes the conditions, if that individual complies with that direction of congress, he does not commit a crime when he pays only that much tax.

I am constrained to support my view in this instance with the language of the late Mr. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes who, as a member of the Supreme court of the United States, gained probably as much respect as any man who ever sat on the highest bench. Mr. Justice Holmes said in a decision of the court 21 years ago and now strangely apropos the following words: "We do not speak of evasion, because, when the law draws a line, a case is on one side of it or on the other, and if on the safe side it is none the worse legally that a person has availed himself to the full of what the law permits. When an act is condemned as an evasion, what is meant is that it is on the wrong side of the line indicated by the policy, if not by the mere letter, of the law."

Again and again, courts have held that a citizen may employ "any legal means" available to him to diminish the tax which he must pay. It would seem then that Mr. Roosevelt's message used rather ill chosen and ill advised language when, in dealing with questions of tax avoidance, he sought to make it appear that it was wrong for a citizen to try to save his own money.

It has been rather interesting to note the type of outbursts, editorial and verbal, that has come as a result of Mr. Roosevelt's tax message. These outbursts have continued partly because the President asked congress to make an investigation of tax avoidance where some very large taxpayers are involved. Of course, congress is going to do that because it will give congress, or at least certain individual members, an opportunity for publicity. And they do not overlook opportunities for publicity.

Since the discussion of tax questions has continued on the basis of the projected investigation, it has given plenty of writers an opportunity to express their opinion in detail. Many of these critics have become quite personal in their assault upon Mr. Roosevelt and their biting observations are doing him no good politically at all. In fact, I have heard some rumblings beneath the surface to the effect that his tax message has hurt him as much politically as his proposal to add six new justices of his own choosing to the Supreme court of the United States.

Probably the worst of these criticisms appeared in the Washington Evening Star, a newspaper that seldom takes a bitter stand on any question. The Evening Star called attention to regulations of the bureau of internal revenue which prescribed that a person must count as income anything taken in payment of services, whether that thing be money or some other thing of value. It cited the fact that the President occupies the White House without payment of rent and that he has available a large staff of servants who man that institution; that he is provided with automobiles and yachts and various other services and circumstances without cost. Editorially, the newspaper then goes on:

"Has the President of the United States, unwittingly, failed to include in his income tax the value to him of the residence provided by the government which pays him his salary? Under these regulations it would appear that even the automobiles and the yachts provided by the government should be considered in making out an income tax return. There is no publication of income taxes and therefore the public is not informed as to whether the high officials of the government who are provided with residences, as some are, or with automobiles, as many of them are, take these things into consideration in reporting their income taxes. It would scarcely be an argument to say that residence provided for a public official is not part of his pay. Cabinet officers, for example, are not provided with residences by the government. They must provide residences themselves, at considerable cost. It is obvious, therefore, that a residence given a government official is part of his pay."

When the President proposed the tax investigation, he said that he believed there were a good many millions of dollars that could be forced into the federal treasury as a result of such inquiry. His action followed sweeping orders issued to internal revenue agents and auditors to review every income tax return with the utmost care. The agents and auditors, of course, will go over the returns filed by the entire list of income tax payers, little as well as big, but the congressional investigation will be devoted only to some of the men called by Mr. Roosevelt, "economic royalists." It is obvious that congress cannot care into all returns so congress will pick on the big ones because those men will have names out of which good headlines in newspapers can be written.

The Treasury had a different idea about the investigation which congress undertook at the President's request. The Treasury's plan contemplated a number of secret hearings, star chamber sessions, and I believe everyone knows what can be had in a star chamber session with bureaucrats operating with all of the powers they possess in our government.

Word of the Treasury's ideas did not please congressional leaders and they very quickly put their foot down on the scheme. Of course, members of the house and senate figured they would not share in the political benefits unless they did the investigating. I hear much comment to the effect, however, that an investigation in the manner congress had decided to make it is much preferable to the star chamber proceedings which the Treasury proposed.

I mentioned that the congressional committee is dealing only with "big names." The reason for this is plain. It would do no good at all in a publicity way for the congressional groups to call in some small taxpayer who, by availing himself of the privileges of the law, had been able to reduce his total tax to a comparatively few dollars. On the other hand, if a big business man, an economic royalist, claims all of the exemptions and deductions that the law specifies and thereby cuts down his tax, he becomes the subject or the target for much ballyhoo about tax avoidance. I do not see the difference.

Since the President finds himself in a deadlock with congress on his proposal to add six justices of his own choosing to the Supreme court of the United States, he has turned to a new approach in dealing with the legislative situation. He has suddenly loaded congress down with work. This is to be distinguished from the course he has followed in his earlier years of his tenure when he submitted only one legislative suggestion at a time.

Now, in addition to the court reorganization proposal, there is before congress the far-reaching governmental reorganization plan, the billion dollar slum clearance and house building, farm tenancy bill and a highly controversial piece of legislation proposing to establish minimum wages and maximum hours for labor. These are, in addition, of course, to the tax revision proposition I have discussed above and the annual appropriation bills with the billion and a half relief fund measure.

'Way Back When

By JEANNE

DREISER WAS A BILL COLLECTOR

IF YOU lived in Chicago, Ill., years ago, you may have bought carpet tacks or a can of paint from a young hardware clerk who looked like nobody at all to you. A few years later you might have rented an apartment from the real estate office where he clerked; a little later you may have seen a young man persistently ringing the doorbell of that neighbor of yours who was careless about her furniture installments. For Theodore Dreiser, famous in American letters today, was in his youth hardware clerk, clerk in a real estate office, and bill collector for a furniture house.

He was born in Terre Haute, Ind., in 1871. A poor boy, he attended the public schools of Warsaw, Ind., cutting at the age of sixteen to go to work in Chicago at $5 per week. An ordinary young man, with an ordinary background, who could have foretold that some day he would produce a book ("American Tragedy") which would arouse world-wide controversy, banned in some cities, required reading in some school systems.

After the collector's job, persistent calling at the Chicago Daily Globe got him a job as a reporter. His rise was rapid as he developed a clear reportorial style, until 1898 he became editor-in-chief of the Butterick Publications which included Delineator Magazine. His first book, "Sister Carrie," was published in 1900 and immediately banned for its frankness. It was not until 1911 that his next, "Jennie Gerhardt," appeared; and it was followed at regular intervals by other books of the "call a spade a spade" type. "American Tragedy" appeared in 1925, was translated into many languages and was adapted to the stage in America and in Germany as late as 1936.

LOWELL THOMAS WAS A COOK

THE life of Lowell Thomas has been tremendously exciting, but it may be encouraging to those of you in everyday jobs, and pining for adventure, to know that he was not always free from humdrum occupations.

The radio and news-reel reporter was born in Woodington, Ohio, in 1892. The family moved to Cripple Creek, Colo., where Lowell attended public schools set in the midst of a typical rough-and-ready mining town. His parents were not wealthy, and Lowell Thomas had to work for a higher education. While attending Valparaiso university in northern Indiana, he was a janitor, a salesman, and night cook in a short-order restaurant. Thirsting for more knowledge after graduation, the boy went on to the University of Denver where he took several degrees, working at odd times for a newspaper. During the summer months, he punched cows and pitched alfalfa. In Chicago Kent

College of Law, he studied law, and then took post-graduate work in English literature at Princeton. After that he worked as a teacher and on a newspaper.

His beginning did not promise excitement and adventure. But then came the World War, and Lowell Thomas went to the front with a staff of cameramen making official pictures! It changed his whole life. He joined E. H. Lawrence and his bedouin army in Arabia, emerging from that "revolt on the desert" with the exclusive story and pictures. It was the beginning of his fame. Since then, he has met almost everyone of importance, seen everything of note, and reported his observations in newspapers, on the screen, and over the air in a graphic style that has gained him an audience to millions.

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE

PERHAPS the happiest, but certainly the most bewildered family in the country just now consists of Michael Kelly, his wife, and five children who live in that part of New York City known as the Bronx.

Their twelve-year-old Tommy has been selected to play Tom Sawyer in the Selznick-International film of the Mark Twain classic.

Such an opportunity for a youngster would be a dramatic thunderbolt in any family, but for the Kellys it was the first good break in years. Papa Kelly has been on the relief rolls for two years, his jobs as janitor in a school and life-guard at a beach having dwindled to nothing. Mama Kelly has been to the movies only three times in her 23 years of marriage.

Tommy and his father are in Hollywood now, and Michael gets a day's extra work every now and then while his son is being groomed for stardom.

When you see Claudette Colbert in "I Met Him in Paris" you will find it the gayest, most utterly delightful film in many months. Claudette Colbert, Melvyn Douglas, and Robert Young romp through the picture as if they were having the time of their lives. It is the story of a girl who has saved for five years for a trip to Paris, and when she gets there everything happens as it might have in a fantastic dream. A giddy novelist and a cynical playwright fall in love with her.

For the first time since their marriage, Joel McCrea and Frances Dee will play opposite each other in the Paramount picture "Wells Fargo." Adolph Menjou and the Mrs. known to us as Verree Teasdale will be together in Sam Goldwyn's "Marco Polo" and the one extra clause they insisted on in their contract was that the dividing wall between two dressing rooms should be taken down so that they could be together.

Everybody is wondering just what is to become of Simone Simon. After a few days' work in "Danger—Love at Work" she was taken out of the east and Ann Southern substituted. The heroine was supposed to be an American girl educated in France, and Simone's heavy accent was just too much to be convincing. Twentieth-Century-Fox officials still have faith in her, and say that when they find just the right story for her they will put her to work again.

The dinner party that marked the end of the recent Twentieth-Century-Fox convention put on a show that included about a million dollars' worth of talent. Irving Berlin sang "Remember," the Ritz Brothers made the rafters ring with hilarious shouts by their impromptu foolishment, but Eddie Cantor walked off with the honors of the evening when he arrived in blond curls and baby dress and did an imitation of Shirley Temple. Prettiest girls at the party were Loretta Young, who came with Merle Oberon's former fiance, David Niven, and Alice Faye, who came with her constant best man, Tony Martin. Incidentally, Tony will be back on the radio regularly again soon.

Mary Pickford is asking $700,000 for Pickfair, because when she sells the house she will include all the treasures that she and Douglas Fairbanks collected in their travels around the world. When she marries Buddy Rogers, she will live in a simple beach house and an old-fashioned ranch house, and wants no reminders of her Mary Pickford former life around.

Whoever is purchaser will possess an estate at which notables of the world were entertained in the days when Mary and Doug were flounders' most celebrated couple.

ODDS AND ENDS—Martha Raye gets furious when anyone refers to her as a babber faced comedienne, but Joan Crawford always refers to herself as Elephant Annie, because she never forgets anything. All the girls on the RKO lot are grateful to the costume designer, Eddie Stevens, for making them look so elegant. By way of showing their gratitude Ann Southern, Harriet Hilliard, Gertrude Michael and Ann Shirley got together and knitted, sewed, and bought him a knockout summer wardrobe. Mary Carlisle has added a pretty penny to her earnings by having Bing Crosby advise her on horse-race bets.
