Local and Otherwise

Some Short Paragraphs Gathered For Our Readers.

It requires greater ability to drive a wild horse than to hold him. And yet some people think that the greatest of all accomplishments is the ability to hold one's tongue.

A man wants in his wife what he wants in his apple—a fair, smooth skin if possible, but a sound heart at all events, sweet and mellow throughout and with just enough sharpness to keep her from being insipid.

Men are self-conceited, overbearing and bearish because they were not taught when children to respect the rights of their playmates. The child who never learns how to apologize will never become a gentleman.

A mother seldom commits a greater sin than when she exposes her children to the poison of low companionship on the streets in order that she "might have a little rest." The fact that it is a common sin does not make it less sinful.

The editor of the Carlisle Mercury, in commenting on the good morals of that community says that his chicken house has been unlocked for a month and not a chicken has been stolen from it. Keller wants to make us other poor fellows feel envious, but his dollars to doughnuts he never had any chickens in the house to steal.

There is said to be some excitement in the northern part of the county over the supposed discovery of a gold mine near the residence of Mr. E. Elliott. We are informed that three or four parties have been digging for several days but as yet no gold has been found of a paying nature.

Col. J. R. Lemon has sold the Benton Tribune to Judge Wear, of Benton, and has engaged in the wholesale hat business at Paducah. We regret to lose such men from the field of journalism, but trust his pathway in the future will be strewn with roses. To Judge Wear we extend the offer of fellowship, and wish him God-speed as driver of the quill.—Tale of Two Cities.

"It's d'bes' joke on Miss 'Liza Iber did see," said one of the girls who were having a good time in the kitchen. "What is?" "She was standin' in de middle ob de pahlor, an' yuh couldn't shove 'er away. She stood unday de chandelier foh mos' half an hour befor she foun' out dat when she wasn't lookin' dey done move de kissetoe from ober head to de nex' room."

An exchange says that a St. Louis physician is to have his license to practice revoked, because he informed newspaper reporters about some of his surgical operations, and was therefore guilty of violating the "code." The theory that a physician ought not to advertise his business would have been reasonable about 400 years ago; but at the present time the press and public would have a much higher estimate of the profession if it would show a little more common sense in its "code."

An exchange says the different conceptions of the value of a local paper is amusing to say the least. One man admires one feature and another admires some other feature. One says he never reads the locals but reads with interest the first page and editorials. Another man says the persons are about all he cares for—and so it goes. There is a moral in this. It teaches you that other people's likes and dislikes are as important to the publisher as are yours. Perhaps it would be well for grumblers to remember that a newspaper cannot be especially gotten up to suit the taste of any one person.

The Road Question.

Right of Way, Gradients, Foundation, Drainage, Etc.

The first essential in the construction of a road is securing the right of way. The manner in which it may lawfully be done in Kentucky is described in section 2-15 of the 47th chapter, Acts of Legislature for 1894. In those sections you will also find how a road may be altered widened, have gates put across it or taken off and discontinued.

In laying out a new line of road the skill or ingenuity of the engineer are taxed to make the gradients easy, with moderate expense in excavating and embanking, and to do this without deviating much from the direct course between the fixed points through which the road must pass. In order to do this, an accurate survey of the tract, including the level of its various parts, and the nature of the strata is a preliminary. The formation of an extended line of road often involves the construction of extensive bridges, viaducts and the like, which require the greatest engineering skill.

It is impossible, without great expense, to maintain the level in our county in the construction of road, and since it cannot reasonably be secured it is well to know of how much value it is: for example, "the force requisite to draw a wagon weighing six tons along a level macadamized road is 264 pounds, on a road with an ascent of one foot in seventy the force required is 456, that is, one-seventieth part of six tons over and above 264," with an ascent of one foot in fifteen the force required would be 1064, that is, one-fifteenth of six tons over and above 264. The steepness of a road down which horses can go in a fast trot with safety, varies with the kind of road; for paved road one in sixty-three, macadamized, one in thirty-five and for gravel, one in fifteen is the limit. Thus it will be seen that for hillsides having a declivity of more than one foot in thirty-five gravel is the safer material to use.

As to the foundation on which the material for the road-bed is to be placed, there are two theories, one holding that no artificial foundation is necessary and the other that some heavy solid material should be used between the earth and the paving material. To the former belong the Macadam, Hughes, gravel and dirt-road system, the latter plan Telford and his adherents advocate. Which is the better plan I do not pretend to say, but I prefer the first mentioned because it is the cheapest and good enough for all practical purposes. In making embankment dirt from cuts is utilized as far as practical. To make an embankment solid it is sometimes necessary to beat or roll it to pack the dirt. To keep it from washing seed the sides to grass. This adds to the beauty of the highway also. Another very important essential to any road is drainage. This is secured by properly shaping the cross-section of the road and by side ditching. I find that there is much diversity of opinion among engineers as to what is the best transverse form for a highway. They all agree that the center should be higher than the sides, but differ as to how much higher, the best argument seeming to favor a nearly flat road with an inclination in the direction of its length, because the convex road will be traveled in the center, the vehicles cutting ruts that materially damage the road-bed, while the flat form is all available for traffic, avoid this and is also to be preferred for drainage. The plan on which the road is built usually decides the method of drainage. In some clayey or wet subsoil underground, or tile drains, must be used. In narrow cuts where side ditching is not available gratings may be used to connect with underground drains. On our washing hill-sides where drains in the course of a few years become great gullies, they can be preserved by lining sides and bottom with flat rocks, which are to be found here in abundance.

While bridging belongs to road-building and is indispensable, it is not proposed to discuss that feature at length in these articles. It would be cheaper in the end to erect all bridges of over 20 feet in length, of iron, to make culverts of large tubular tiling, where it can be used, for the same reason. The best is the cheapest even though the first cost may be greater. Short-sightedness in the manipulation of public affairs is too often only a saving of pennies to let the big dollars go to Gehenna. What we need more to do is to cultivate a big-hearted public spirit that reaches out, looking beyond the mere present, at the growing generation, that will even consider the yet unborn citizens in the scope of its policy in work done for the common weal.

Cure For Headache.

As a remedy for all forms of headache Electric Bitters has proved to be the very best. It effects a permanent cure and the most dreaded habitual sick headaches yield to its influence. We urge all who are afflicted to procure a bottle, and give this remedy a fair trial. In cases of habitual constipation Electric Bitters cures by giving the needed tone to the bowels, and few cases long resist the use of this medicine. Try it once. Large bottles only 50c at Lemoh's drug store.

THEY ALL DO IT.

Walter Baker advertised—the result we all have seen; So has Robert Chesborough, the man of "Vaseline"; Ayer, the "Pill Man," advertised—I guess he did it right; And so have many other men, such as "Cow Brand" Dwight; Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure is known both near and far; And Ely Bros. advertised a "Cream Balm" for catarrh; St. Jacob's Oil's the next in line—by the Chas. A. Vogel Co.; Then Pittsburgh gives us Hostetter, whose Bitters are a go; Will Cherry Bitters of Harter's now will take the stand; And Church is next to come along, with his "Arm and Hammer Brand"; Tut and Becham both sell pills, by judicious advertising; And the merits of Sherman's Prickly Ash surely are surprising; A. B. Wilbor, of Boston, his "Cod Liver Oil" has sold; And the Imperial Granum Company has gathered lots of gold; The Pennsylvania Salt Company will tell of "Lewis' Lye"; And Scott & Bowne insist that you Scott's Emulsion try; S. S. S., you ought to know, your blood will purify; And if constipated every night, Pierce's Pellets try; Boschee's German Syrup, made by Green is not so funny; As Warner's giving Safes for ads and medicines for money; Hood, the Sarsaparilla man, made money by his "gumption"; And Hazeltine, of "Piso's" fame; will cure you of consumption; Little Bile Beans, so says Smith, your health they will increase; But to lubricate your wagon, use Fraxer's Axle Grease; Proctor & Gamble say "Ivory" is the only soap to use; And don't forget our Brocton Ench, Douglas, the $3 shoes; Sapollo enough for a Chinese wall friend Morgan's Sons have sold; And Royal Baking Powder spends about as much in gold; "Troches" Brown, of Boston, don't advertise for fun; No more than does Elijah Morse, the man of "Rising Sun"; "Cocoa" Eggs has advertised, and says there's something in it; And Syrup of Figs has coined the "stuff" since they did begin it; "Jones, He Pays the Freight," has advertised his scales; And like Jim Pyle, the Pearlina man, has made enormous sales.

Many stubborn and aggravating cases of rheumatism that were believed to be incurable and accepted as life legacies, have yielded to Chamberlain's Pain Balm, much to the surprise and gratification of the sufferers. One application will relieve the pain and suffering and its continued use insures an effectual cure. For sale by R. H. Starks.

Obstinate Colds.

Dr. Humphreys' Specific No. 77 will "break up" an obstinate cold that "hangs on." Put up in small vials of pleasant pellets; just fit your vest pocket; price 25c; all druggists.

For The Women.

A Few Household Hints Worthy Your Attention.

There are always plenty of reasons why other people's children should be what ours are not.

The woman who demands the right to do everything a man does, will never see what an idiot she is until some man demands the right to do everything a woman does. In the matter of dress for instance.

Sunshine in the home depends chiefly upon the mother. If she is cheerful the little ones are happy; if she is depressed or fretful everybody in the house gets out of sorts. A peevish wife is a perpetual northeaster.

Whatever we are toward our children that they will be toward us. If we are petulant they will be petulant. If we are uniformly courteous toward them they will be uniformly courteous toward us. Uniformly, mind you.

Some women will never believe it but the woman who effects manly ways and wears manly clothes is just as ridiculous in the eyes of men as a man in mutton-leg sleeves and corsets would appear in the eyes of a woman.

The young man who is not too good to take liberties, however small with a girl, is seldom to good to talk about her. Nor does he think that she is to good to be talked about. The very day a girl steps across the bounds of propriety she begins to be advertised. If our girls could only realize what this means!

You cannot keep Satan out of your house so long as you allow him to keep a piece of his furniture in it. Many a Christian home is disgraced by the devil's trumpery scattered about the rooms—vile papers, trashy books, packs of cards, wine glasses, pictures of nude figures, indecent statuary.

There is nothing easier to teach a child than reverence. Let the parents be reverent and the work is done. The father who indulges in scriptural jokes and puns, sings funny scriptural songs and quotes texts in a ludicrous connection, will live to find that he has sown a quick crop. Destroy reverence for the Bible and all things cease to be sacred.

It is easy for a mother's goodness to amount to a fault. The mother who does everything for her children's health and has no thought of her own sins against her children, herself and her God. There is no virtue in unnecessarily throwing away our lives for our children's sake. A mother is worth more to her children than anything she can do for them.

THEY ALL DO IT.

There were 179 real estate transfers recorded in the clerk's office during the year ending Sept. 15, 1894. The total amount of the transfers reaches the sum of $66,422. There were many which have not yet been recorded, and county clerk Dycus informs us that they will be posted at the court house door on the first Monday in May, if they are not recorded before that day. The law says that they must be posted at that time if the taxes and fees have not been paid and are not lodged for record before that time. Hereafter we will give all real estate transfers, the names of parties and the consideration, in the columns of the Tribune. In fact we expect to give all the court house news we can get.

Another Old Citizen Gone.

L. B. McGregor was born in Caldwell county, Ky., Nov. 30th, 1832. Died Jan 11, 1895, aged 62. He leaves his second wife and two children and seven children by his first wife, besides a host of friends and relatives to mourn his demise. He was a good neighbor, a kind and loving husband and father. Was loved and respected by all who knew him. He will be sadly missed. But mourn not, dear wife and children, for he has gone to rest; and our loss is his eternal gain. After funeral services by Eld. T. F. Harrison his remains were laid to rest in the New Harmony cemetery to await those he loved best. W. C. R.
