ONE SISTER KILLED
ANOTHER INJURED

A Terrible Accident Occurred in the City Yesterday Afternoon On Illinois Central Trestle.

Mrs. Joe Henley Killed By a Freight Train and Mrs. Fannie Prince, Her Sister, Not Expected To Survive.

As a result of getting caught yesterday under a freight train near the first trestle in the Illinois Central railroad yards, Mrs. Joseph Henley and Mrs. Fannie Prince, both of Littleville, were injured. Mrs. Henley fell on her left leg, and Mrs. Prince fell on her left shoulder. Both women were thrown unconscious, and the train stopped as soon as the accident was discovered. The women were taken to the hospital, where they are being treated for their injuries.

A RUSSIAN NEWSPAPER.

Nevoe Vremya, one of the leading Russian newspapers in this city today printed an article which the American newspapers have been ignoring. The article, written by Mr. Roosevelt, declared that President Roosevelt in his New Year's message expressed a desire to see the war in the Balkans end, and that he had taken steps to bring about a truce. The article was written in response to the recent German ultimatum to Serbia, which had demanded the surrender of the country's minister to the chief of the Austro-Hungarian army. The President said that the United States would not allow the war to continue, and that it would take all necessary steps to bring about a just and lasting peace.

HER POPULARITY.

A girl with a pleasant attitude, trained to receive the compliments of the opposite sex, has an easy time in the world, when soft young men sound "Wow!" to her. New, there's that's thud, there's that's that, ask after the "Wow!". It's a one-way traffic. It's a one-way traffic.

When the compliments, flow, she will be "Wow!"ed. When she is "Wow!"ed, she is "Wow!"ed. It's a one-way traffic. It's a one-way traffic.

"Wow!" isn't the word for it. It's a one-way traffic. It's a one-way traffic.

The girl with the "Wow!" is the girl of the hour. The girl with the "Wow!" is the girl of the hour. It's a one-way traffic. It's a one-way traffic.

By now, the husband was in the kitchen. He had heard the commotion and come to see what was happening.

"What's happening?" he asked.

"It's the doctor," she said, "he's here to see you."

He sat down at the table, looking at the doctor. The doctor had a serious expression on his face.

"What's wrong, Helen?" he asked.

"Your eye," she said, "it's infected."

"Oh, my goodness," he said, "what happened?"

"You were out in the barn, and you got hit by a bean."

He stood up, looking at his eye. He could see the blood running down his face.

"I'm going to get a doctor," he said, "I won't let that happen again."

He left the kitchen, and Helen went to get a doctor. The doctor came to see her husband, and he gave him some medicine to put on his eye.

"You need to be careful," the doctor said, "you don't want to get your eye infected again."

Helen took the medicine, and she gave it to her husband. He put it on his eye, and he felt better.

"Thank you," he said, "I won't do that again."

"Don't worry," she said, "we'll take care of you."

And they did. They took care of him, and he got better. They never made him do that again. They made sure that he didn't get his eye infected again. They were happy together, and they lived happily ever after.
