Calloway Co. School Board to get KSBA ASAP award

By ANGIE HATTON
Staff Writer

The Calloway County Board of Education learned Thursday night during its regular monthly meeting that it is among school boards in the state receiving an award for advancing student achievement from the Kentucky School Board Association (KSBA).

Calloway County Superintendent Ken Bargo made the announcement that the board has achieved the 10 standards to be recognized with the Advancing Student Achievement to Proficiency (ASAP) award.

Because the board achieved all 10 standards, including establishing a community dialogue and passing policies that advance achievement, it will be specially honored at the KSBA annual conference Feb. 3-5 in Louisville.

The board also approved a draft budget for the 2012-13 school year. Jan Pigg, district finance officer, said the budget submitted is still very rough at this point, and follows the current budget with adjustments for tax revenue changes. The district will be able to prepare a more thorough budget for presentation after the state legislature determines education funding for the coming year.

School and district-wide report cards were also approved by the board. Randy McCallon, assistant superintendent, said the report cards will be made public in the next few weeks following Kentucky Department of Education approval.

In other action:

- The board re-elected board member Terry Bourland to serve on the 2012-13 Code of Acceptable Behavior and Discipline committee.

- A recess was held to elect officers to serve on the Calloway County School District Finance Corporation. Jeff Gordon will serve as chair, Terry Bourland will serve as vice-chair and all others will serve as executives.

- The board held two executive sessions, one for a nonresident student hearing and another for a student disciplinary hearing.

Personnel respond to multiple crashes after Thursday snow

By HAWKINS TEAGUE

Emergency personnel were busy Thursday afternoon and evening responding to multiple vehicle accidents on icy roads after the winter's first snowfall.

Murray Fire Chief Eric Pologruto said that after an uneventful day of falling snow, 911 dispatchers received one call after another starting right after 4 p.m. Murray Police Chief Jeff Liles said his department responded to approximately 17 collisions and numerous other vehicles that had slid off roads. Fifteen of those were within a three-hour period, he said. The Murray Street Department also responded by sending crews out to put salt brine on the roads, Liles said.

The Calloway County Sheriff's Office reported that as of 10:30 p.m., deputies had responded to nine collisions. Between CCSO and Kentucky State Police, there were about 10 or 15 motorist assists for drivers who had slid off the road, it was reported.

Keith Todd, public information officer for District 1 and 2 of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet, said in an email that KTC crews rolled out to spread salt on state highways in all western Kentucky counties.

While the salt improved driving conditions for a time, plummeting temperatures in the nighttime hours quickly canceled out the benefits of salt and other ice-fighting chemicals, he said.

"Below about 20 degrees Fahrenheit salt stops working," Todd said. "That means little or no improvement in driving conditions until (temperatures) rise during the day on Friday. Motorists should avoid unnecessary travel overnight. Commuters can expect hazardous driving conditions on the morning drive to work. Buckle up, allow extra travel time, slow down, and use extreme caution."

"High winds are expected to add to what promises to be a pretty miserable commute on Friday morning. Again, cold temperatures overnight will limit the ability of highway crews to improve driving conditions until temperatures move above 20 degrees and reactivate salt that has already been spread."

The National Weather Service in Paducah is calling for mostly sunny skies and temperatures in the low 30s on Friday. Saturday temperatures are expected to reach the lower 40s.

City Council passes new business license ordinance, talks MSU stickers

By HAWKINS TEAGUE
Staff Writer

The Murray City Council voted Thursday to create an ordinance to simplify the city's business licensing rates, reducing the number of business classifications and categories from 224 to 22.

Last summer, the council expressed a desire for the Mayor's Office to review the license structure and make a proposal to make it much less complicated.

Administrator Matt Mattingly said the current structure was adopted in 1970 and had 39 different fee rates in addition to 224 business classifications. He said 1,675 business licenses were purchased in the 2011 fiscal year and that 21 percent of businesses purchased more than one license.

Murray-Calloway County Economic Development Corporation President Mark Manning and Murray-Calloway County Chamber of Commerce President Lance Allison had a great deal of input into the recommended proposal, Mayor Bill Wells said. Both were present to thank the Finance/Personnel Committee prior to the regular council meeting.

"Any time you can go from 200-plus categories to 15 or 17, that's got to be a good thing for local business people, to help remove confusion and things like that," Manning said. "We appreciate the opportunity to have input, but all the work was done by these guys over here."

"Mr. Mayor, just to echo those thoughts, we appreciate being allowed at the table for discussion," Allison said. "Matt and (Finance Officer Alan Lanier) worked very hard at it. A year-and-a-half ago, the business community said we want a business-friendly environment in the city, and it's

Fitness group kicks off year of wellness activities

By ANGIE HATTON
Staff Writer

Fitness group Swim Bike Run Murray held its 2012 kickoff meeting this week. The multi-sport workout club has 65 members, and is hoping to expand that number this year.

SBR member Andy Graham has been an active runner since he was 13 years old. He said he has, in the past four years, expanded his routine to include biking and swimming, and he has completed close to 20 small triathlons over the past three years.

Getting involved in SBR Murray has helped keep Graham honest in his workout routine, he noted.

"If I don't show up for a swim, I usually get a text or an email from someone wanting to know where I'm at ... so the camaraderie of the group helps a lot. Being a runner, you spend a lot of time pounding the pavement by yourself, and to be able to go on a bike ride with a group or meet at the pool for a 5:30 swim, that keeps us focused."

Jim Carter, vice president of institutional advancement at Murray State University, said he "caught the fever" two and a half years ago when he completed his first triathlon. He

Local Board of Elections to propose precinct plan

By TOM BERRY
Staff Writer

The Calloway County Board of Elections will soon propose a plan to the Kentucky Board of Elections that will create at least four redrawn city voting precincts while possibly eliminating three others.

During a meeting of the board at the Calloway County Courthouse Thursday morning, Elections board members Dottie Lyons, Bill Cowan and Sheriff Bill Marcum voted to create new boundary lines for Murray precincts one, five, nine and 12 while eliminating current precincts three, five and six.

The proposal must be approved by state officials before implementation. A new plan for redrawing districts must be in place before the upcoming May Primary. Any changes approved will be tested during the May Primary and the November General Election before modifications will be made.

Calloway Clerk Ray Coursey Jr. said the plan is most likely the most viable way to deal with changes required by law.

Paul: No thought to VP bid for now

By BRETT BARROUQUERE

Associated Press
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — U.S. Sen. Rand Paul says he hasn't "really thought about" a possible vice presidential bid this year, but also wouldn't rule out the possibility.

Paul, speaking Thursday morning in Louisville, says he's read the "Internet chatter" about the possibility of being tapped as the GOP nominee's running mate, but for now is focused nationally on helping his father's campaign.

The Republican from Bowling Green made his comments Thursday morning at the St. Matthews Community Center in Louisville after saying his office would give $500,000 in office funds back to the U.S. Treasury.

U.S. Rep. Ron Paul of Texas finished second in the New Hampshire Republican presidential primary. Rand Paul said the presidential race is now between his father and former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney.

Senate GOP leader to visit Myanmar

MATTHEW PENNINGTON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell, a leading congressional voice on Myanmar, will make his first visit to the country next week, his office said Thursday.

McConnell, R-Ky., will meet with democracy leader Aung San Suu Kyi and Myanmar government officials to discuss political reform in the military-dominated country, bilateral relations and regional security issues.

He will arrive in Myanmar Sunday and return to the United States Wednesday.

Every year since 2003, McConnell has introduced legislation sanctioning Myanmar and would be a prominent voice should the U.S. contemplate easing those restrictions.

Myanmar has made tentative reforms after decades of harsh military rule. It held elections in November 2010 and freed Suu Kyi from years of house arrest but still holds hundreds of political prisoners.

The U.S. is also urging an end to fighting in Myanmar's border regions against the country's ethnic minorities and wants the government to sever its military ties with North Korea.

McConnell is one of several U.S. lawmakers visiting the country also known as Burma this month, following the landmark trip by Hillary Rodham Clinton in December, the first by a U.S. secretary of state in more than 50 years.

Rep. Joseph Crowley, D-N.Y., is currently in Myanmar, the first member of the House to visit since 1999.

The Obama administration has sought to engage Myanmar after years of the U.S. isolating the military regime but is looking for signs of further reform before it moves toward normalizing ties.

While lifting sanctions appears unlikely in the near term, Washington is considering appointing a full ambassador, which would require a Senate confirmation. The highest U.S. diplomat based in Myanmar is currently a charge d'affaires.

The U.S. is watching closely to see if Myanmar stages free and fair by-elections that Suu Kyi and her party will contest April 1 and most importantly, release political prisoners.

Myanmar says it will release 651 prisoners starting Friday under a new presidential pardon but it is not yet clear whether that will include political detainees.

Improved relations with the U.S. could enable Myanmar to reduce its reliance on key ally and northern neighbor China. Lifting sanctions would open the gates to more foreign aid and investment.

City Council...

just very pleasing to see that the city has responded in this way, with one step being making the business license categories more simplified."

Before the council meeting, the Finance/Personnel Committee discussed the possibility of requiring all Murray State University students with vehicles to buy city stickers. Currently, students who do not work on campus are exempt from buying the stickers. Mayor Bill Wells said an ad-hoc committee had been meeting with MSU representatives and talking about the possibility for several months. Mark Welch, community relations for the Office of the President, said he was concerned because city officials had previously discussed giving students a reduced rate and was now talking about charging the full $50. Wells said the city had planned to charge students less, but that City Attorney Warren Hopkins advised that this would be legally questionable because it would be treating students as a separate class of residents.

Welch said MSU was also unsure right now if it would even be possible to administer the fee through the online registration system called Banner. The committee voted to table the matter so it could get more information.

The council also voted to rename a 1,088-foot stretch of Arcadia Drive from 12th Street to Chestnut Street near the Sid Easley Alumni Center after the late Mayor Tom Rushing. The street will now be called Rushing Way. The council also voted to draft a street-naming procedure in the future should it be requested.

The council also voted to accept the lowest bid for a generator for Fire Station 1. The bid came in at $31,578.54 from Kohler Power Systems. Although this was under the $36,100 budget for the project, Fire Chief Eric Pologruto said he would still have to hire electricians to install the generator.

Before the council meeting, the Public Safety Committee also discussed the possibility of an ordinance that would ban parking on any street narrower than 22 or 24 feet wide. They will have further discussion at their March 8 meeting.

Takeover proposed for troubled water district

HARLAN, Ky. (AP) — A troubled water district in eastern Kentucky is asking for a takeover.

Green Hills Water District Chairman Ralph Turner said the district won't survive on its own and asked the Black Mountain Utility District Water Board to take it over, the Harlan Daily Enterprise reported.

"Green Hills Water District can't last long, we are sinking. Previous boards have not run this as a money-making operation. We have a lot of stuff that needs to be changed out, and we don't have the finances to do that. We would like for you to take it over, if you would like to," Turner said.

Customers in the Harlan County water district have experienced temporary water outages over the last few weeks and the newspaper says financial reports show the district doesn't have enough funds to pay all its bills.

Black Mountain Utility board member Bob Lee says the proposal on Tuesday presented several questions, but it will be considered.

"We need to get the county judge-executive and everybody that's involved in here, and get an understanding on what kind of contract we can draw up," he said. "We can't take Green Hills and incorporate it into Black Mountain Utility District and then put the burden of maintaining Green Hill on BMUD customers."

The board tabled the issue until some of the questions can be answered.

Fitness group...

From Front

has completed four since.

Carter is the university liaison for SBR Murray, and he was an early advocate for bringing the athletes in Murray and Calloway County together into one multi-sport group. The group calls him its "godfather."

"This is a very active community ... We've got several recognitions as far as youth sports, sports teams, and the community embraces not just what happens on campus, but just all the active things," said Carter.

SBR Murray is not only a group for seasoned athletes. Kris Foster recently joined SBR Murray, and said that it has been a great experience so far.

"There are some (sports) I enjoy more than others, which is what makes it so great to do (activities) with a group because it just makes it more fun. ... Some people are really knowledgeable and they share the knowledge that they have, helping you along and giving you the information to get you better," said Foster.

The newest part of SBR Murray is Rich Tobergte, who will serve as the group's new swim coach. Tobergte recently moved with his family from Portland, Ore., to coach the Murray Youth Swim Team. SBR Murray is an extra gig he was happy to pick up.

"SBR has got space for all different levels of athletes. We've got some people who are learning how to swim, we've got some people who are in training," he said. "Most (of the members) are trying out for triathlons, or doing Ironmans and half-marathons. So even if you're not a swimmer, it's good cross-training for running and biking."

In the future, Carter sees Murray as a potential site for a triathlon, due to its proximity to Kentucky and Barkley lakes.

"Having gone to these (triathlon) events, I have seen how big they can be, not only as a wellness opportunity for us, but also as a visitor's event ultimately as we get bigger and can be a conduit or clearing house to put on events," said Carter.

Some events SBR Murray members hope to participate in this year include the Murray Half-Marathon, the Memphis in May Triathlon and the Tour De Corn Century Bike Ride in East Prairie, Mo.

For membership fees, and more information on SBR events and group activities, visit www.sbrmurray.com, email Brady_Parks@bradyp536@gmail.com or find the group's page on Facebook at "SwimBikeRunMurray."

Elections board...

From Front

"It's neat, and it's close to being the most usable and understandable plan I could come up with," Coursey said.

Board members are charged with the task of redrawing city and county voting precinct lines so they will conform to new magisterial district lines recently approved by Calloway Fiscal Court. During action in late 2011, county magistrates approved a plan that would redraw county magisterial boundaries as required by the 2010 Census.

Details of the new voting precinct plan are tentative and more information will be made public following approval by the state board of elections to avoid confusion should the state turn down the proposal or require modification.

Possible elimination of voting precincts will save the county money on the number of officers and voting machines needed during elections, Coursey said.

If the plan is approved, many voters will cast ballots at different locations for both the May 22 Primary and the Nov. 6 General Election than they did previously.

Calloway among counties receiving fire suppression recovery money

Special to the Ledger

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Calloway County is among 55 Kentucky counties recently paid recovery money from the collection of wildfire suppression fees.

The Kentucky Division of Forestry (KDF) paid $27,120.86 from the collection fees as required in KRS 149.180. Calloway County's portion was $384.99.

KDF, the state agency responsible for suppressing wildfires and enforcing forest fire laws on state and private lands, collects costs associated with firefighting from individuals who are responsible for starting fires by accident or by their negligence. The recovered costs are deposited into a special fund in the Energy and Environment

Cabinet where they may be returned to the county in which the suppression costs were incurred.

In order to be eligible for the suppression cost refunds, a county must be in compliance with its annual timberland assessment—a law that requires the counties to pay 2 cents per acre of privately-owned timberlands.

KDF has been collecting timberland assessments from counties since 1959 for the purpose of establishing county forest fire protection funds. If a county is not eligible to receive the recovered costs, the money is used by KDF to improve fire protection services.

Judge sending area Amish men to jail

MAYFIELD, Ky. (AP) - A judge in western Kentucky has begun sending Amish men to jail for refusing to mark their horse-drawn buggies with reflective triangles for traffic safety.

The men belong to a conservative Amish group that believes the bright signs are flashy and conflict with their pledge to live simple lives.

Graves County District Judge Deborah Crooks jailed Ananias Byler for 10 days for refusing to pay the fines on Thursday morning.

Two of his relatives were also sentenced to jail time. Seven other Amish men who owe fines were in court Thursday and face jail time if they refuse to pay.

Being a Peacemaker

Part of the "Sermon on the Mount" which our Lord taught His disciples was, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." In the Bible, there is a great deal written about peace. Jesus said, "Peace I leave with you; My peace I give you" (John 14:27). He told us to "Be at peace with each other" (Mark 9:50). It seems that peace and love go together; you can't have one without the other.

Being a peacemaker is not always easy. We realize this world is not paradise; therefore, we will always have to contend with conflicts and strife. Still, a peacemaker treats others with respect and consideration and honors God's word of treating others as they would want to be treated. Peace and love, along with joy and happiness, are virtually impossible without God. But, with our Lord Jesus all things are possible, and through Him we should strive to live at peace with everyone.

Let us therefore make every effort to do what leads to peace and to mutual edification.

Jimmy Carter's latest book offers lessons in faith

ATLANTA (AP) - Jimmy Carter may never have been president if he didn't go square dancing.

The Georgia Democrat credits a rural square dance club he joined in 1953 with helping him win a state Senate seat by a scant 66 votes.

"If I hadn't received support from our square-dancing friends, I would have lost and never become a state senator," he wrote in his latest book, "Through the Years with Jimmy Carter." "And if that had occurred, I never would have run for office again."

Carter has penned 26 different books, including childhood memoirs, treatises on the Middle East and accounts of his presidency. But none are like his latest, which offers 366 devotionals, each with a biblical passage, a personal story and an original prayer.

The one-page items are sprinkled with lessons Carter gleaned from more than 30 years of teaching Sunday school classes and anecdotes from his country upbringing to his ascent to the White House and beyond.

"The totality of my teaching presents a view of a lay person. I'm not a theologian," he said in an interview. "I'm extracting real messages from the Bible or from Christian faith that apply to daily existence and that's applicable whether you're a farmer, a journalist, a lawyer, a teacher or a political office holder."

In the book, Carter is open about struggles over his own faith. He writes that he felt "despondent and alienated from God" after losing his first bid for Georgia's governor in 1966, and said his wife Rosalynn went through a rough patch when he lost to Ronald Reagan in 1980. But he said he retrenched during those dark times and worked to remind himself of the role religion has played in his life.

"If there is no basis for our faith ... then how do we account for the presence of Jesus Christ in hundreds of millions of lives across the globe?" he wrote in the book. "How could Jesus still be alive to me? How could so many hearts be touched and minds stimulated by Jesus to seek ultimate truths about life and the world around us?"

His book casts some political debates with religious overtones. He condemns the Patriot Act and waterboarding, writing that Christians "cannot keep silent just because the injustice doesn't affect our own families or friends." And he said it would be "foolish" for the devout to deny global warming.

"While we may disagree on the causes or rate of global warming, shouldn't we all agree that we have a responsibility to take care of the Earth?"

Carter is also candid about some of his shortcomings, such as his lack of patience, his penchant for jealousy and his fights with his wife over trivial issues. One year, when he forgot her birthday, he hastily scrawled out a note to give to her, and it turned out to be one of her favorite gifts. It read: "I promise that I will never make another unfavorable comment about tardiness."

Spread throughout the book are history lessons, with insights over the ancient tensions between Jews and Christians, the roles of politicians and prophets in Biblical times, and the impact of martyrs and apostles on Christianity's spread across the globe. He tells those stories with a healthy dose of jokes he's heard from the pulpit and the White House.

In one passage, he said his brother Billy was on his death bed when he told a friend he had carried out a long affair with the friend's wife.

"His friend's face dropped. The man gulped a couple of times — and then Billy laughed and said, 'No, I'm just joking.' That was Billy."

Carter said he hopes the book will help send the message that "God calls us to live out our faith." He urges readers to keep their religion in mind, reach out to new people and enjoy an expansive life. After all, he never would have guessed that square dancing would have helped him win an election.

"Rosalynn and I enjoyed the square dancing — but we've probably enjoyed a lot more what's happened since," he wrote. "You just never know."

Instant message guidelines discussed

Question: What are some Christian principles that can help us avoid hurting someone by unintentional misuse of instant messaging like email and texting?

What Would Jesus Do?
By Richard Youngblood, Minister at University Church of Christ

an emotional reaction in the moment that may be regretted later. Also, it is possible that the brevity of a message may also leave too much room for misinterpretation. Once we hit "Send," we can never fully undo the effect of what has been said. In the New Testament, James instructed us to "be quick to listen and slow to speak" (James 1:19). The Old Testament Proverbs warn: "Do you see someone who speaks in haste? There is more hope for a fool than for them" (Prov. 29:20; cf. Prov. 1:6; 6:16-19), and "The words of the reckless pierce like swords, but the tongue of the wise brings healing" (Prov. 12:18).

In addition, email and texting lacks some important dimensions present only in face to face communication. Some messages should be delivered only in person. The eyes, facial expressions, body language and tone of voice help us interpret what is being said and to know how to respond appropriately. When we do not have the advantage of these to help us understand one another, we need to be more thoughtful and careful with our communication. Once again the biblical proverbs give instructions on how to interpret the eyes and body language of some people (Prov. 6:12-13, 17 & Prov. 16:30).

Although emailing and text-messaging are morally neutral methods of communication, the kind of messages sent determines whether they are a blessing or a curse (Proverbs 18:21). If one recognizes the potential dangers and exercises the appropriate discretion, instant messaging can bless him. But if one carelessly sends emotionally charged, inappropriate messages or brief messages that may be seriously misunderstood, he will be cursed by instant messaging. I pray that next time any of my readers send an email or text message, they will remember these principles and thoughtfully re-read before sending any message.

stances. At the same time, I believe we are seeing some inherent dangers in instant messages that have not been present in other forms of communication. Any blessing can be turned into a curse if we do not take responsibility for the proper use of that blessing.

We must begin by recognizing that God has always provided essential guidelines for all forms of human communication whether oral or written. For example, intentionally deceptive communication like lying and slander is always prohibited. Paul told the Ephesians that "each of you must put off falsehood and speak truthfully to your neighbor" (Ephesians 4:25) and that you should "not let any unwholesome talk come out of your mouths, but only what is helpful for building others up according to their needs, that it may benefit those who listen" (Eph. 4:29). To the Colossians, he said: "Let your conversation be always full of grace, seasoned with salt, so that you may know how to answer everyone" (Colossians 4:6).

The added dimension of "instancy" brings another level of responsibility to our communications. Instant messages are often brief and not so well thought out. They tend to reflect

Land Between the Lakes Bison Auction set

Special to the Ledger
GOLDEN POND, Ky. - Land Between The Lakes (LBL) National Recreation Area has scheduled its annual Bison Auction for Saturday, Jan. 28.

The USDA Forest Service manages two herds of American Bison at LBL. Due to annual reproduction, there is a need to remove surplus bison from each herd. Thinning of the herd is necessary to sustain optimal habitat conditions and animal health.

The bison auction will occur at one location this year. Bison at the South Bison Range (SBR) will be auctioned at the SBR Corral beginning at 9am CST. If heavy rain or snowfall prohibits an on-site auction, the auction will be held across the road at The Homeplace picnic shelter. Bid packages and morning will be available the morning of the auction beginning at 8am.

Approximately 31 bison will be sold at this year's auction. An tentative list of animals includes: 6 yearling heifers (born 2010), 2 bulls (born 2009), 5 yearling bulls (born 2010), and a mix of 18 bull and heifer calves (born 2011).

Bison must be paid for in full on the day of the auction. All animals will be tested for TB and Brucellosis, and certified by a licensed veterinarian. Buyers have the option of vaccinating bison prior to loading by an on-site veterinarian for the following: Leptospirosis, Blackleg, Pinkeye, respiratory viruses, and worms. The buyer will be required to pay the cost of these vaccinations. Specific details on the age, sex, and weight of all animals to be sold may be obtained after January 23, by calling 270-924-2065. A final list of sale animals will also be provided at time of sale that will include age, sex, and weight for each respective bison.

All buyers are required to load bison on the day of the auction. Bison may not be loaded into open-top trailers. The Forest Service will assist the buyer in loading their bison, but once bison step off the loading chute and into the buyer's trailer, they become the property of the buyer and the Forest Service assumes no further responsibility for the animals. For additional information regarding the bison auction, please contact Curtis Fowler at 270-924-2061.

Land Between The Lakes National Recreation Area is managed by the Forest Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, in partnership with "Friends of LBL," to provide public lands outdoor recreation and environmental education. Winter Nature Watch opportunities at LBL

Special to the Ledger
GOLDEN POND, Ky. - Embrace the winter blues this season by joining Land Between the Lakes for one of the many wildlife-viewing van tours currently being offered.

from pelicans to pintails.

An all-day Nature Watch tour on Saturday, Jan. 14, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. will take participants in search of eagles and some of the 25+ species of ducks that call LBL home in the winter. Also discussed will be the local bald eagle recovery. The cost is $40 per person and includes lunch at a local restaurant.

LBL will also continue to offer Eagle Viewing Van Tours from 1-4:30 p.m. on Sundays, Jan. 22, 29, and Feb. 5. According an LBL spokesperson, winter is the peak season for seeing bald eagles in LBL, with both resident eagles and visiting "snowbirds" out looking for fish around the lakes. During the tour, participants will visit different spots for spotting these creatures. The cost is $7 per adult and $5 per child.

Saturday, Feb. 11, LBL will offer a Nature Watch tour that brings participants to Cross Creeks National Wildlife Refuge, just south of LBL, to explore this bottomland habitat in search of harriers, sandhill cranes and migrant ducks. The cost is $10 per adult and $7 per child and runs from 9 a.m. to noon.

The month of March offers a chance to see hundreds of pelicans as they migrate through the area, as well as the resident eagles on their giant nests incubating eggs or sheltering their chicks. Join LBL on Sunday, March 18, or Saturday, March 24, for a Nature Watch tour that highlights these two species. The two-hour tour costs $7 per adult and $5 per child.

Sorority sisters who support paddling are behind the times

DEAR ABBY: I have been accepted to a school that's the alma mater of several of my relatives. My mother, several aunts and other family members all belonged to one sorority at this college. They are urging me to pledge there and uphold the family tradition.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

They say they had some of the best times of their lives as members of that sorority chapter. The members do well academically, as the sorority insists on it. They made lifelong friends, and their sorority contacts have been extremely helpful personally and professionally.

Although this chapter is very exclusive and accepts only the best-of-the-best, I will have no problems getting in, not only because of my academic record but also because I'm a "legacy."

So what's the problem? This sorority chapter still uses the paddle. Technically they don't haze - that is, have any initiation stunts - but they do use the paddle for disciplinary purposes. When I mention my concerns about the paddling to my mother and aunts, they say I should suck it up, as the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages. One of my aunts said she thinks the rules and discipline would be beneficial for me because she considers me kind of a "wild child."

Abby, I don't know if you know anything about sororities, but I'm asking for an objective opinion from someone not directly involved. -- POSSIBLY PADDLED PLEDGE of a sorority hitting pledges or active members. Some fraternities may have allowed it, but certainly not sororities.

Whether your aunt thinks you could use the discipline is beside the point. Striking someone with a paddle is assault with a weapon. A young man died a short time ago in Florida because of the kind of hazing this national organization is winking at. Are young women who behave that way really the kind of people you would like to be lifelong friends? If not, then pass on that sorority!

DEAR ABBY: My son is chronologically 12 and the size of an adult, but emotionally he is age 5. He's a moderately functioning child with autism, ADHD and behavioral issues.

PLEASE let people know that just because they can't see a disability does not mean there isn't one. I often get dirty looks and rude comments, and I am extremely frustrated with it. Being nice or ignoring it does no good.

I know my son's behavior can be childish, rude or inappropriate at times. I have been fighting this battle every day since he was 2. I have seen every doctor and therapist available and exhausted every resource I could find, and now we have either aged out or my son isn't "bad enough" to be eligible.

However, he is still difficult to handle, and I still need to buy groceries and run errands. Sometimes that parent you are giving the dirty looks to is near the end of her rope and could use a little compassion or at least silence from the peanut gallery. What you see isn't always what you get. -- STRUGGLING MOM

DEAR STRUGGLING MOM: Please accept my sympathy. As you and other parents of children with disabilities deal with the realities of daily living, the last thing you (or they) need is criticism from strangers.

Kids need calcium for strong bones to last a lifetime

DEAR DOCTOR K: I have two daughters, ages 8 and 12. They both claim they're "too old" to drink milk. How can I make sure they get enough calcium?

DEAR READER: You're right to be concerned. Unfortunately, many children don't get enough calcium, and they need it to build strong bones and teeth.

Dr. Komaroff By Dr. Anthony Komaroff

As your kids grow, they are also growing the bones they will have for the rest of their lives. How strong those bones are by the time they become adults will strongly affect their risk for developing thin bones (osteoporosis) later in life, which can lead to fractures. Most of the bone growth occurs in the teenage years, but getting enough calcium is important for younger kids, too.

Getting enough calcium is not the only important thing in developing strong bones. So is regular exercise. Exercise that puts weight on the bones, like walking, running and hiking, is especially important.

How much calcium should your daughters be getting? For your 8-year-old, aim for 1,000 milligrams (mg) of calcium per day. Your 12-year-old should be getting more, about 1,300 mg of calcium per day.

The best sources of calcium are calcium-rich foods, such as dairy products. Even if your daughters refuse to budge on drinking milk, there are plenty of other options. Cheese and yogurt are good sources of calcium. If they like yogurt, go for the low-fat or non-fat kind. Although they have less fat, they have as much calcium. There's also plenty of calcium in many nondairy foods such as sardines and almonds.

Tofu, beans and oranges are good sources of calcium. So are leafy green vegetables such as kale, collard greens, spinach and broccoli. But it takes several cups a day of these vegetables to supply as much calcium as dairy foods. For some kids, that's a stretch.

You'll also find plenty of "calcium fortified" foods in the grocery store. These may include some brands of juice, cereal and bread.

To get enough calcium, your kids also should avoid certain foods and beverages that interfere with calcium absorption. Caffeine (found in coffee, tea and sodas), phosphorous (in meat and sodas/soft drinks) and sodium (salt) are unhealthy for bones. Teach your daughters to limit these foods.

Teach also by example. If your daughters see you drinking low-fat milk, how can they say that they're "too old" to drink it?

We have a lot more information on calcium in our Special Health Report, "Vitamins and Minerals: Choosing the Nutrients You Need to Stay Healthy." You can find out more about it at my website.

With careful planning, most children can easily get enough calcium in their daily diets. Think of new ways to incorporate calcium-rich foods into family meals. Make a stir-fry using tofu that's been processed with calcium, or sprinkle some low-fat shredded cheese on salads.

Hints From Heloise

by Heloise

FAN IN SOME SAVINGS Dear Readers: Want to save money on your ENERGY BILL? Have you thought about your ceiling fans lately? To use your fan in the wintertime is smart -- it can help make you more comfortable.

The correct setting for a ceiling fan in winter is clockwise (when looking up), so the fan can push the warm air (hot air rises) down into the room. A properly set ceiling fan can keep you and your family more comfortable and help you save on your energy bill.

There is a switch on most ceiling fans that will change the direction of the blades. Check it out! You also can check the owners manual for guidelines the manufacturer suggests. -- Heloise

Dear Heloise: I always lined my kitchen cabinets and drawers with shelf lining. This was not a good idea, because the lining got dirty, wrinkled and had to be replaced often. Something had to be done.

I got an idea while in a dollar store. I saw stick-on tiles that came in all colors and designs. I told my husband, and he thought it was a great idea to use them to replace the shelf lining. He cut the tiles and placed them in all the cabinets and drawers. Now all I have to do is wipe them clean with a wet cloth. -- Ann A., Staten Island, N.Y.

BREAD CRUMBS

Dear Heloise: I began saving "day old" pieces of bread until I had several, then chopped them with a chunk of butter (1 or 2 tablespoons) in my food processor. I store them in a gallon freezer bag in the freezer.

When I need bread crumbs for a casserole, I have them ready to go!! I just grab a handful or more and sprinkle on top. I keep adding to the bag as I accumulate bread. It is a wonderful and handy method! -- Brenda M., Quicksburg, Va.

FURNITURE SPOTS

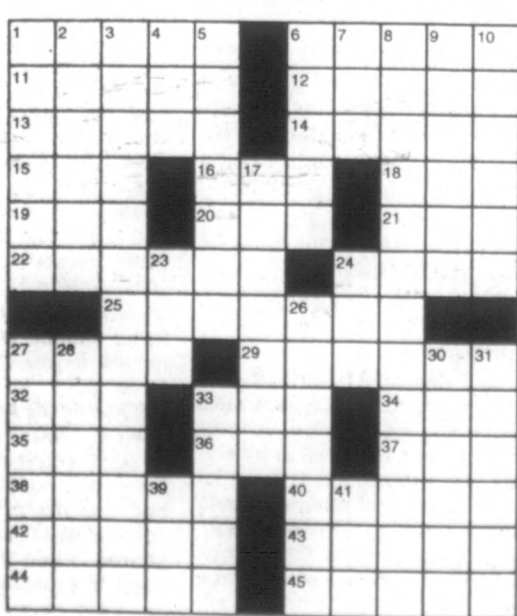

Dear Heloise: My "favorite hint" was in your column recently. You suggested putting mayonnaise on white spots on furniture. I used it on a spot on my piano that had been there for about two years. I left it on overnight and wiped it off the next morning, and voila -- the spot was gone! What a great hint! Thank you so much. -- Lucy in Texas

RACERS ROAR TO BEST START IN SCHOOL HISTORY WITH 66-55 WIN OVER JSU

By GREG WADDELL
Assistant Sports Editor

Sitting in the press conference after Thursday night's 66-55 win over the Jacksonville State Gamecocks, Murray State head coach Steve Prohm couldn't help but smile when talking about his team.

It'd be hard to blame him.

Though it didn't come easy, his No. 14 Racers had just made their impression on the Murray State record books, outlasting a scrappy Gamecock team to etch their names into the program's storied history. Entering the CSFB Center tied with the 1935-36 team for the best start in program history, Prohm and his boys left the sole owner.

Still, the Racer head man noted he didn't make much adieu about the mark to his team. He would prefer their minds stay on their upcoming stretch.

"I didn't talk to the team about (the record) after the game," Prohm said. "I just complimented them on winning the basketball game and getting ready for Tennessee Tech. We don't have time right now with the way our schedule is with a one day prep and then we go to Morehead on Tuesday and we play Wednesday. We don't have time to really celebrate achievements right now; we need to appreciate everything that we've done to this point, but these guys have the chance to really do something special so we need to stay in the moment, appreciate it and continue to work forward."

That said, they'll do so after a win that was everything but pretty.

Still, for all the things the game wasn't, consistent was definitely not one of them.

In addition to solid contribution from a host of Racers, including four who scored in double figures, the game was consistently bogged down by the officials, who called a combined 42 fouls and sent the teams to the line 57 times.

Of those, Racer guard Donte Poole took the most advantage, netting 12 of 14 from the stripe and scoring a game high 21 points to help ease the loss of Isaiah Canaan to defensive gameplanning.

Despite the other breakdowns, that was an area

Jacksonville State was very efficient.

Face guarding Canaan all night, the Gamecocks were able to limit his effectiveness from the field, forcing the Racers' leading scorer into a 3-11 performance and 10 points.

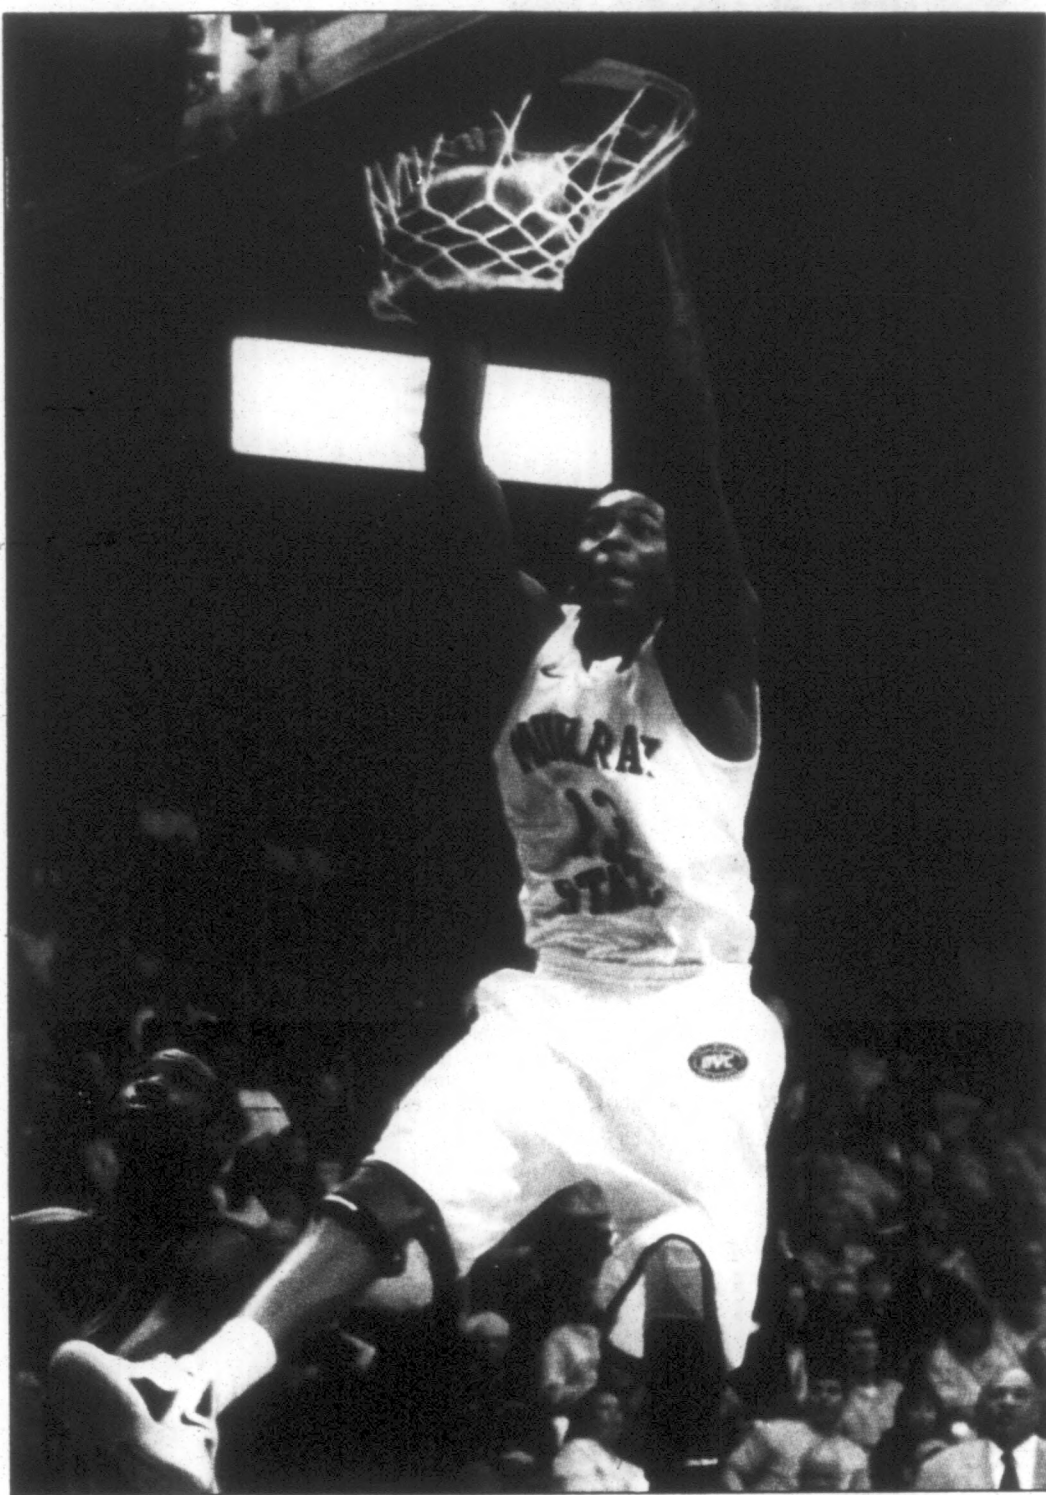

"I thought we hurt his rhythm a little bit even though he got a couple of good looks out of it," Jacksonville State head coach James Green said, "but (against) a team that shoots the ball as well they shoot it from three we knew that that was something we needed to do. We needed to have some other guys try to step up and beat us and, to be honest, we wanted to do Poole the same was for most of the game, but we put him on the line entirely too much."

Early on, that plan seemed to be working perfectly as the Gamecocks surprised the Racers out of the gate and trailed by just two at 25-23 entering the break.

After the intermission, things would get even more interesting as a Jacksonville State run pulled the teams even at 28 with 17 minutes to play. From then on though, the threat would pass as Murray State controlled the game the rest of the way.

Still, despite the loss, Green had plenty of praise for Prohm, whom he's known for a number of years.

"It's not surprising No. 1," Green said. "The biggest thing it says about Steve, and I've told Steve this, is that the players have a lot of respect for him, but they like him a lot too and they trust him and play hard for him. (Because of that,) they have the chance to have that kind of success. It wasn't guaranteed, but the atmosphere that he had created as an assistant coach with those guys gave him that Fans packed out the CFSB Center to watch the Racers make history with their 17th win.

Murray State men's and women's teams visit local grade schools

From MSU Athletics
While enjoying their last week off of school before classes resume at Murray State, six student athletes took time to visit with local 4th and 5th grade students from area schools to share with them the importance of achievement, both on the court and in the classroom. On Tuesday, Jan. 10, Donte Poole and Ivan Aska represented the men's basketball team at Murray Middle, while Isaiah Canaan and Jewuan Long visited Southwest Calloway Elementary on Jan. 11. Mariah Robinson and Candace Nevels visited both schools on behalf of the women's basketball team.

The Racer student athletes were candid about both their triumphs and struggles in the classroom. "It was important to tell kids to try your best and if it doesn't work, keep trying for something else" said junior Candace Nevels about the advice she gave on choosing the right major. Senior Donte Poole, who shared with the audience the academic challenges he faced as a freshman, felt the necessity to tell students about real situations that young people face in school. Poole was glad that he had an opportunity to reach the children, saying "It's good to be able to share with the people who look up to you."

Dave Winder, Assistant AD for Media Relation, also spoke to the students about how he uses writing to do his job and about the importance of language and communications skills in being a good sportswriter. During the question-and-answer session that followed Winder's talk, Nevels was impressed by the questions the young students asked her and her fellow athletes, saying "The kids had amazing questions, even about education, just not

PREP BOYS BASKETBALL: FIRST REGION ALL 'A' CLASSIC

Tigers expect to make noise

MURRAY WILL TRY TO REBOUND AFTER CROSTOWN CLASSIC TONIGHT

By GREG WADDELL
Assistant Sports Editor

Squaring off with Fourth District foe Community Christian in the opening round of the 1st Region All "A" Classic Saturday, the Murray High Tigers know exactly what they're in for.

It'd be hard not to.

After playing the Warriors to a 1-1 split already this season, Joey Adair and his boys in black will try their luck a third time, traveling to Graves County for a 12:45 p.m. tilt.

The only problem?

After playing in tonight's Crosstown Classic, fatigue, not Community Christian, may be the biggest opponent awaiting them in the Eagles' Nest.

Worse still?

With a game as emotionally charged as the Classic promises to be, their minds as well as bodies may be drained.

"If we beat Calloway or lose to Calloway it's going to be an emotional spin," Adair said, "and so I'm concerned with that. The All 'A' is very important and they want to win the All 'A' and want to go to state, but the other one is important as well and when you put both of them within a 12 hour span back to back, that's emotionally taxing. One of the things these guys have to learn, being young, is the ability to stay focused on the task at hand and when you're young that's hard to do. These guys are finding that out. We're going to try to not let our highs be too high and our lows be too low but understand (it's) one game at a time."

That could come in handy Saturday. If their history this season is any indication, the game promises to be a good one. After falling to Community 65-61 on their home floor in overtime on Dec. 6, Murray traveled to Paducah to deliver a 10 point beating a month later.

"I expect a tough game and expect Community to make some adjustments after how we played them in the second game," Adair said, "I (also) expect them to be somewhat more rested than we are but focused and hungry just like we will be."

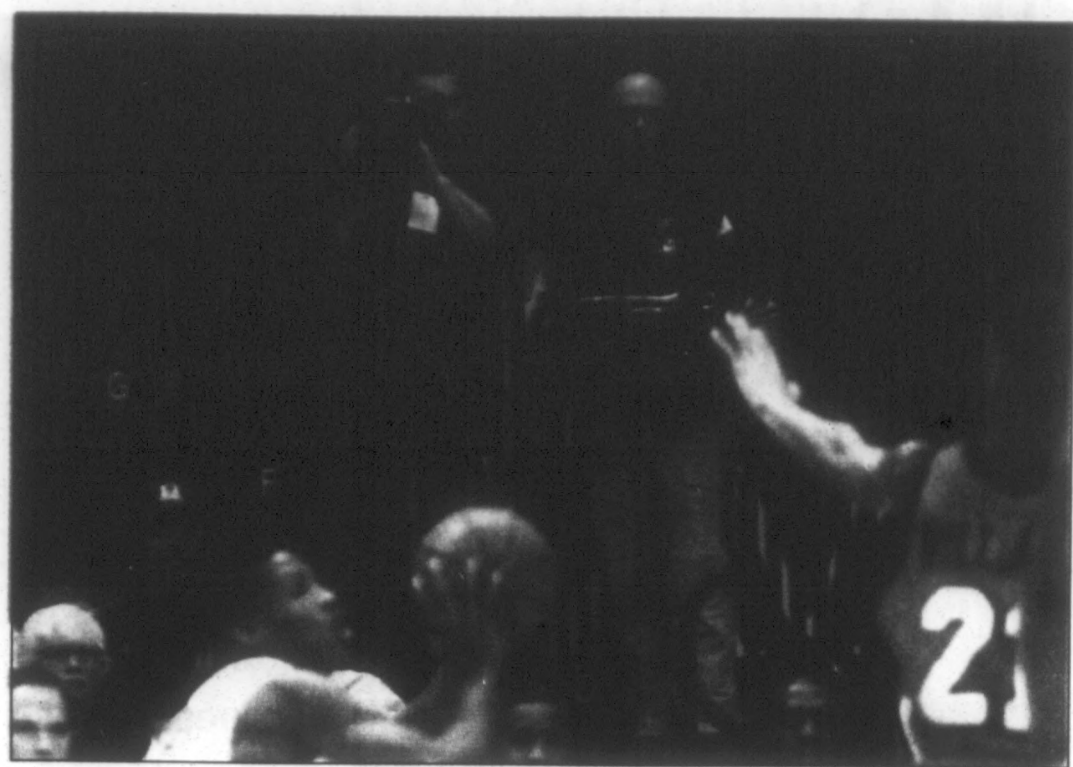

Still, the biggest thing on the line for the Tigers Saturday might be their pride. After a rough start to the season, Murray is looking to dispel the notion that they're a typical low seed.

"Our guys are hungry to prove they're not necessarily the eight seed," Adair said. "I thought we saw that Monday night (with a win against Fulton City, the No. 4 seed) and even Tuesday night (against Hickman County) even though we didn't come out with a win. We think that we're a better team, but there is such good parity in the A this year. Almost any team can beat any team; this is the most wide open the All A's been since I've been here. As far as our guys, I think they're always going to play with a chip on their shoulders. As long as they're hungry and I'm their coach, I'm going to try to give them a little chip on their shoulder."
For a team still feeling out their identity, that could be just the edge they need.

That said, Prohm and the boys in blue and gold won't get any time to relish the win as they continue conference action this weekend, hosting Tennessee Tech Saturday in a 5 p.m. ESPNU showdown.

NCAA president Mark Emmert supports four-team college football playoff

CALLS NOTION OF FINAL FOUR APPROACH A "SOUND ONE"

By MICHAEL MAROT
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — NCAA President Mark Emmert would support a four-team playoff in college football — as long as the field doesn't grow.
After giving his annual state of the association speech Thursday in Indianapolis, Emmert acknowledged he would back a small playoff if that's what Bowl Championship Series officials decide to adopt.
"The notion of having a Final Four approach is probably a sound one," Emmert said when asked what he heard coming out of New Orleans this week. "Moving toward a 16-team playoff is highly problematic because I think that's too much to ask a young man's body to do. It's too many games, it intrudes into the school year and, of course, it would probably necessitate a complete end to the bowl system that so many people like now."

Emmert spoke two days after the 11 Bowl Championship Series conferences met to discuss possible changes to the system starting in 2014, but there is no consensus yet.
BCS Executive Director Bill Hancock said Tuesday that 50-60 possibilities for various changes were presented during a deliberate meeting in New Orleans, where Alabama beat LSU in the BCS title game

Monday night. Hancock anticipates it will take another five to seven meetings to reach a conclusion in July.
One possibility is the four-team playoff, or the so-called plus-one approach, that would create two national semifinals and a championship game played one week later. The original proposal, made in 2008 by the commissioners of the Southeastern Conference and Atlantic Coast Conference, was emphatically shot down by the leaders of the Big Ten, Pac-10, Big East, Big 12 and Notre Dame.
The BCS title game pits the nation's top two teams based on poll and computer rankings.
But momentum is clearly growing for a larger playoff system.
Big Ten Commissioner Jim Delany acknowledged this week that he would now consider the prospect of a four-team field.

"Four years ago, five of us didn't want to have the conversation," Delany told reporters earlier this week. "Now we all want to have the conversation."
Then on Thursday, the BCS picked up another major endorsement for a potential playoff.
Emmert has long said he expected changes to the BCS system and has repeatedly offered to help the BCS debate if they want it. The NCAA licenses bowl games, but does not run them. It also has no direct authority over the BCS system.
But a small, four-team tournament could be the perfect remedy for what many still consider a flawed system.
"I see a lot of ways that a Final Four model could be successful," Emmert said.

No. 7 Indiana falls 77-74 to Minnesota

AUSTIN HOLLINS SCORES CAREER HIGH 18 TO LEAD GOLDEN GOPHERS PAST HOOSIERS

By CLIFF BRUNT
AP Sports Writer

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Minnesota had lost four straight, was on the road against the nation's No. 7 team and had lost star forward Trevor Mbakwe to an ACL injury more than a month earlier.
Coming into Assembly Hall, where the Hoosiers had won their first 11 games, including over then-No. 1 Kentucky and then-No. 2 Ohio State, the Golden Gophers seemed to have almost no chance.

Almost.
Austin Hollins scored a career-high 18 points to help the Golden Gophers beat the Hoosiers 77-74 on Thursday night.
"It's a big win," Minnesota guard Joe Coleman said. "We really had nothing to lose here. We just had to come in here and be aggressive, be confident in our play and hopefully come out with a win, and we were able to do that."

Indiana's Christian Watford missed a 3-pointer in the closing seconds that would have tied it.
Minnesota had been close in three of its four Big Ten losses. The Gophers lost in overtime at Illinois, by five at Michigan and by two at home against Iowa.
They finally got one.
"We've been through some tough games, so I think that helped us," Coleman said. "Basically, all our Big Ten games so far have been pretty close, down to the wire at some point, so I think we were able to capitalize on the things we messed up on in the previous games, and it helped it out for tonight."

Rodney Williams scored 14 points and Julian Welch added 10 for the Golden Gophers (13-5, 1-4 Big Ten).
Indiana freshman Cody Zeller matched a season high with 23 points for the Hoosiers (15-2, 3-2), but his teammates struggled. Jordan Hulls scored 13, Will Sheehy 12 and Victor Oladipo 10 for Indiana.
"I was really impressed with Cody Zeller," Minnesota coach Tubby Smith said. "He's a very tough matchup for us. We had all kinds of trouble guarding him. Otherwise, we did a good job on most of the other guys."

sports." Following the question-and-answer session, the Racer athletes got an opportunity to show off some of their basketball skills. Students from Murray Middle demanded a slam dunk, while cheers for Isaiah Canaan to recreate his half-court shot from the knee filled the gym at Southwest Calloway. Mariah Robinson tried to get the audience in on the action by bringing out one of the writing teachers from Southwest Calloway to take a jump-shot.
In addition to hearing talks from the players and Dave Winder, the 4th and 5th graders were challenged to enter an essay contest to share stories of their own personal achievements. Winners of the essay contest will have the chance to become guest writers at one of the Racer games in February and write a game story from press row.

When asked about his players' involvement with this week's school visits, women's basketball head coach Rob Cross had this to say. "It is extremely important for our student athletes to learn the importance of serving others as part of their overall educational experience here at Murray State University...To see firsthand the influence they can have on a young person as that kid's eyes light up at meeting a Murray State Racer always has a lasting impact on our student athletes as well as the young people with whom they interact."
