THE LISTENING POST

I never cross the Tennessee River, at any time of day, without having a feeling that it is the most beautiful river to be found anywhere. Yes, I know there are other beautiful streams, some of them which I have never seen, and some which I have, but there is a magical thing about the Tennessee which literally takes me by the throat and brings a choking feeling at looking at anything which is so lovely, so eternally beautiful, so breath-taking.

All rivers are beautiful in their own way. Even the Mississippi is a beautiful stream to one who understands and loves it. It might be an ugly river to some, but to one who has watched it for many years and who is familiar with its many phases, it has the beauty of might and majesty, and even its tawny color can sometimes be lovely under a setting or a rising sun. The Ohio is another magnificent stream, with many beautiful scenes along its winding shores, and the little Cumberland can bring a stirring of the pulse to any one who loves rivers. Up in the other end of the state the Kentucky can present many pictures of beauty, but above all of these I love and admire the Tennessee. People have told me that the Hudson is a more beautiful stream. I have never seen it, but I am willing to choose the Tennessee for mine.

I crossed the stream twice the other day, and each time there was a different beauty about it. The first time was shortly after noon, and the October sun was gliding its placid waters with the sort of gold which is even more beautiful than real gold. A tiny wind was making ceaseless ripples all over the bosom of the stream, and these tiny ripples were all gold and silver under the caressing touch of the Autumn sun. It brought a feeling of peace and contentment to me then as I hurried on, and I thought the river could never be more beautiful than that.

But it could be, and it was, for a few hours later I came that way again. The sun had disappeared then, but the half lights still prevailed over the broad reaches of the river, up and downstream. Upstream a small island, tree covered, and sharp pointed from the ceaseless washing of the waves against it, stood out clear and distinct in the waning light. Downstream the river swung around a graceful bend, and the wind no longer ruffled the waves. The entire stream was calm and peaceful and the trees which came down to the water's edge stood as still and straight in the October dusk as they might have stood a full century or more ago when Indians roved up and down the stream in canoes. There was no sign of modern life as I gazed up and down the stream, and hardly a sign of human habitation was to be seen. The one modern thing was the bridge over which we rolled, high above the peaceful river, and at such times one hardly sees the bridge. Merely gazing at the river carries one's thoughts far back into the early history of this Nation. The Tennessee, until the past few years, has had few changes, for it

Nazis Claim U-Boats Sank 43 Vessels

Claim Made That British Lost 327,000 Tons In Two Days

Berlin. — A powerful new submarine offensive unleashed by the German Admiralty against British shipping and convoys was reported by the High Command Sunday to have raised a two-day total of sunken merchantmen to 327,000 tons.

Forty-three ships, said the High Command, were shot out of two convoys in two nights of devastating undersea activity.

(British naval sources said "the Germans make these claims to annoy us. We ignore them.")

Frien Credited With Success The communique stressed success particularly against Britain's warship-protected convoys and credited Lieut.-Comm. Guenther Frien alone with bagging eight merchantmen totaling 50,500 tons.

In all, it said, seventeen merchant ships, totaling 110,000 tons are known so far to have been sent to the bottom in an attack Saturday in which Frien's U-boat took part.

Of thirty-one British ships reported sunk in the communique a day earlier, twenty-six were said to have been sunk by submarines stalking through the zig-zag lines of British merchantmen.

Reports Dwarf 1917 (The reported figures dwarf even April, 1917, the darkest month of the World War for Britain at sea, when 196 ships of almost 600,000 tons total were sunk in thirty days.)

3 Boys Join Army To Stop Hitler From "Killing Women, Children"

Frankfort, Ky. — The following scene from real life was enacted one day this week in the office of Franklin County Judge L. Boone Hamilton:

Three big, rawboned youths entered. They were travel-stained. Any one of them could have thrown a 1,000-pound bull barehanded.

Want to Join Army "I'm the County Judge, boys. What can I do for you?"

Father Divine's Newest "Heaven" Is 25-Room House On Hudson

New York. — There was rejoicing Friday up Harlem way over Father Divine's new "heaven," the finest yet, standing like a feudal castle on a knoll 425 feet above the Hudson River in exclusive Tarrytown, N. Y.

This newest "heaven," which has a twenty-five room turreted stone residence and seventy acres of landscaped grounds and orchards, is directly across from the estate of the Duchess of Talleyrand, the former Anna Gould and daughter of the late Jay Gould, railroad builder. She has been living there since her return from a forty-year residence in France.

Has Prominent Neighbors Other large estates nearby include those of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.; Edwin Drexel Godfrey, retired New York merchant, and Alfred McEwen, prominent New York business man. Half a mile down the road is the historic Washington Irving house.

John Lamb, Father Divine's white secretary, said the Negro spiritual leader would use the new home as his personal residence and that an operating staff of thirty to forty "angels" will move into the house as soon as furnishings are obtained.

Indicted Minister Changes Mind; He Will Register

Boston. — The Rev. Harry H. Kruener, 24, Baptist minister, one of two Boston clergymen who were indicted by a Federal grand jury for failure to register for selective service, has changed his mind about registering, an associate disclosed.

The Rev. Keith Kanaga, 25, assistant pastor of the Mt. Vernon Congregational Church, who was indicted with Mr. Kruener, said that while he had not changed his mind, Mr. Kruener had, and added: "But I think Mr. Kruener has done right in his own case."

"He is not backing down," Mr. Kanaga said. "He has made the greatest amount of protest he can conscientiously make and thereby has fulfilled his duties as a Christian and now has reached a decision to do as a good many others did on October 16."

Biggest Flames Seen On Sun Photographed

Pasadena, Calif. — A cloud of fiery gas which flamed up 150,000 miles from the sun's surface—93,700 miles higher than any previously observed here—is described by Astronomer R. S. Richardson as "probably the largest prominence of the rare tornado type ever recorded."

The Mt. Wilson Observatory astronomer photographed the mass yesterday. He said it was 10,000 miles wide at its base, tapering gradually in a form resembling "a tightly twisted rope," then finally flying into space. Its rising velocity varied from twelve and thirty-seven miles a second, he estimated.

Possible Voters Rise 5,391,000 Over '36 Figures

Washington. — The Census Bureau estimated Saturday that the number of citizens of voting age in the forty-eight States now is 80,528,000, an increase of 5,391,000 since 1936, when 45,646,817 ballots were cast in the Presidential election.

The bureau said that the numerical increase in persons 21 and over in the last ten years was 11,224,376, compared with a total population rise of 8,634,635.

Declining birth rates and the prolongation of life through medical advances, the bureau said are responsible for the greater increase in the number of persons above voting age.

Knox Urges Navy To Keep Fleet Alert

Washington. — Secretary Knox urged officers and bluejackets in a Navy Day message Sunday to keep the fleet "strong, efficient and ready" in "this serious time in our Nation's history."

"The outspoken aim of the military alliance recently formed by Germany, Italy and Japan is the application of pressure on all nations not now in the war, including our own Nation," Knox said.

Terming the annual Navy Day observance next Sunday the most momentous since the occasion was first marked in 1922, he said that "in Europe, Asia, and Africa wars are being fought for world domination," and added: "Those wars are prosecuted to destroy democracy and the free processes of trade and culture. Our forces at sea the first line of defense against attack. They protect our liberties."

All Of Turkey Stays At Home For Quick Census

Istanbul. — The entire population virtually was "imprisoned" at home Sunday as the Government conducted a lighting census.

From 5 a. m. until 2 p. m. when cannon boomed to signal their "release," the population had been ordered to remain indoors until the count could be completed. All foreigners also were required to remain at home.

Istanbul was like a deserted metropolis during the count, with all street cars, ferriesboats and pedestrian traffic stilled.

Officials predicted the census would show a population of about 20,000,000.

Robber Stages $10,000.00 Bluff

Chicago. — Preliminary investigation indicated today that the robber who threatened to blow up the South Chicago Savings Bank with a vial of colorless liquid apparently had worked a $10,000 bluff.

The robber shoved a note and a bottle of the liquid through the teller's grill yesterday. Harold Broberg, the teller, read: "There's enough in this bottle to blow this building up. I've got another in my hand. Give me $10,000 or I'll drop this one. Hurry up."

The teller said $10,000 through the grill. Broberg pressed an alarm button but the forty bank patrons scarcely noticed the fleeing robber.

Dr. Clarence Muehlberger, coroner's chemist, said the vial was not nitroglycerin. Police said they knew of no other explosive it resembled.

No More Thumb Prints In The Soup Bowls

Happy Edwards, down at the Coffee Shop, has a new streamline sort of soup bowl. The new bowl is equipped with a handle, and the reporter decided the handle meant that the customer should drink from the bowl, instead of using a spoon. However, Happy explained that such was not the idea at all, and that spoons would still be furnished to all customers. "This handle is for the persons who bring the soup to the customer," he explained. "Formerly the accepted practice was to grab the ordinary bowl with the thumbs thrust downward into the soup. With the handle we can guarantee that there will be no finger or thumb prints in the bowl!" Which is quite an idea.

Blind Farmer Plows His Fields And Keeps House

Stanton, Neb. — Though blind for forty-one years, Anson Chamberlain, 58-year-old farmer, cooks his own food, plays cards, shaves with a straight edge razor, runs farm machinery, and cultivates 80 of his 200-acre farm.

Besides that he milks and feeds a dozen cows, cares for a big flock of chickens, keeps house, and each year plants and cultivates his own garden.

He goes to town twice monthly to purchase food and then simply scratches the tops of the tin cans so he can identify them when he returns home.

World War Troop Ship Is Brought Out Of Hiding—Was German Ship

Baltimore. — A great red and grey liner, seized years ago from Germany and used as an American troop ship, came out of retirement today to feel the pound of hammer and slap of paint brushes as workmen prepared her—again—for the job of carrying doughboys.

The exact use to be made of her has not been announced, but the America—as she was known when she was one of the proudest liners of the German fleet—has been ordered reconitioned as a United States Army transport.

The call to duty that brought the 700-foot war prize from a quiet, out-of-the-way harbor at Solomon's Island in Lower Chesapeake Bay came eight years after she was delegated to the Maritime Commission's "ghost fleet" of wartime vessels.

But there was no rest on any of her five decks today. Workmen asked to complete the job in six weeks swarmed over her. A day and night shift was assigned the task of getting her ready. A strict guard was posted against all but authorized workmen.

War Check On U. S. Vessels Is Reported

Action Is Called Preparatory To Possible Emergency

New York. — The New York Herald Tribune says the Maritime Commission has requested operators of all American flag ships, except coastwise carriers, to furnish names and locations of their vessels of 2,000 gross tons and over.

The order was made in a telegram signed by G. H. Helmbold, director of operations and traffic, the newspaper said, adding that the order requested telegraphic advances on movements until operators were further advised.

Called An Emergency Plan "No reason was given for the request," the article continued, "but shipping men see it as a move on the Commission's part to be prepared for any emergency which may call for the removal of Americans from Europe or the Far East, as well as for the movement of supplies."

From time to time, since the outbreak of the war in Europe, the Commission has rounded up such information about vessels engaged in foreign trades, but this is the first time intercoastal ships operating from Atlantic and Gulf ports to the Pacific coast have been included.

New York Drivers Now To Be "Fined," Not "Convicted"

New York. — Chief Magistrate Henry H. Curran, who is never at a loss for the right word, announced Sunday that no longer would errant motorists have "convicted" stamped on their driver's license. He is substituting "the gentle word 'fined.'"

"The word 'convicted,' he said, "sounds worse the more I think of it; almost like the unholy delight with which a caddy shouts 'out of bounds' when you have driven deep into the woods in such plain sight of everybody that it is really superfluous to shout to you about it. Why rub it in?"

UNION THEN

Britain must make sure she is going to survive, and convince others of it, before she can declare her war aims, Winston Churchill told the House of Commons Tuesday. So far, he said, only very careful general statements can be put in an official declaration.

This is a practical attitude, of course. The present British government is under no pressure to express any more definite war aims at this time than that the Axis threat against the empire be defeated. England need no more definite grounds than this for which to fight, at present, for any people will fight doggedly to protect its homes.

So greatly has the world changed since last September, in fact, that it is doubtful if the Churchill government can have any definite war aims now in mind, other than survival against totalitarian attack. It is clear, however, that the imaginative Churchill has suspicions as to how the course of British history will run if the attack is successfully repelled.

It is clear to him, as hinted in numerous speeches before the House of Commons since the fall of France, that the future of England lies outside Europe for some time to come, even though Nazism should disintegrate in continental revolution.

The consensus among diplomatic, military and political observers in this country now is that Britain can stand up under the Axis assault and hold her empire, or most of it, together, which means they expect a stalemate to develop, even though the Nazi and Fascist government may not be wrecked by revolutions brought on by the British blockade. Whether stalemate or continental revolution, however, England seems definitely outside the European picture for many years to come.

If there is stalemate, there can be no question of her exclusion by the still-dominant Axis from the European continent. If anarchy takes Europe, England will have been left too near exhaustion by the war to restore order or to render material aid to what forces for order yet remain.

Each of the situations which may result for England, in case she survives, means then that he must turn to America and seek a partnership both political and economic, in order that her crowded millions may not starve. That America will look upon such a merger of influence with approval when the time comes is apparent from the fact that already the course of events has felt Britain our only powerful friend, in a world in which all other powers are deadly and rapacious enemies.

With the merger of Britain and American interests progressing automatically, the union of all English-speaking peoples, once considered so fanciful, gradually attains inevitability. Clarence Streit's vision of a world union of the democracies is likely more than a vision now in the mind of the astute Churchill, who knows that the definite war aims could not be stated when imponderable fate is forging a future which cannot yet be definitely and officially described.—Sun-Democrat.

THE SWARM OF LOCUSTS THAT STRUCK FRANCE

P. J. Philip, former Paris correspondent of the New York Times now in the United States, sums up the food situation in France in one brief sentence:

"In the Paris markets," writes Mr. Philip, "there are always plenty of carrots because the Germans do not like carrots, whereas cabbage is unobtainable and potatoes are scarce."

Like swarms of locusts the Germans swarmed down upon the defeated nation leaving only what did not suit their palate. Worse than locusts they carried back to Germany poultry, livestock, grain and vegetables to replenish the depleted home larder. The officers lived like Princes when they arrived in Paris on the choicest cuts of meat and the finest of wines. And requisitioning of food supplies in the unoccupied area has gone forward with typical German efficiency.

Now that the country has been drained of its supplies to keep the German war machine going, the United States is asked to prevent famine in the conquered nation by sending food through the British blockade. In other words we are asked to feed Hitler's legions, and take over Hitler's responsibilities.—Courier-Journal.

SUNSHINE AND SHADOWS

Huntington, Ind.—The Progress Club, made up of blind persons, will hold a masquerade party on Halloween.

"Each person," explains club president Rondell M. Stonebraker, "will disguise his voice and maintain the reception until a given time, when each will revert to his normal personality."

Yakima, Wash.—They take their duck hunting seriously in Yakima.

A football game between White Swan and Zillah high schools was called off because only six White Swan players showed up.

All the rest were duck hunting.

Elm Creek, Neb.—Indignation overpowered judgment and Mrs. Ted Faser grabbed a skunk by the tail when she found it pilfering her chicken pen.

Unable to let go safely, she uneasily shifted the animal from one hand to the other. But her wit saved the day—and her clothes.

She attached a length of wire to a fence, twisted the wire around the skunk's tail, got a gun and shot the animal.

is not a river which changes like the Mississippi.

• The changes which have come and which are still coming have been by the hands of man. During the past few years man has wrought great changes in this great river, and these changes are yet under way. Even the bridge over which I passed the other day will soon have to be raised to a greater height when a huge dam is completed, and much of the peaceful shore on which I gazed will be under many feet of water. Upstream these changes have already been made and instead of the winding river which I traveled many years ago, there are miles of great, wide lakes.

• Looking upon a beautiful river, late in the twilight, always does things to me. I wished then that I could write verse. I wish I could capture the beauty of the scene in printed words, but I cannot. All that I can do is to feel a deep sense of peace and utter contentment as I gaze on such a scene and try to tell others of how it affects me.

The Youth in Business

By C. E. Johnston
Dean, School of Business
International Correspondence Schools

THE youth who is preparing himself for the world of business will do well to give attention to a new field of management responsibility. This field has to do with the production and distribution of goods and services in such a manner as to win public approval. Every major executive knows that buyers are concerned with more than just products and prices. Consumers are interested in how the conduct of business operations affects employees and the general public, in what may be termed the social aspects of business. Young men, as well as senior executives, should begin to think in terms of the social as well as the economic results of business.

Recently many industrial companies have held "open houses" for their employees and their relatives and friends. This has been done in part to acquaint employees with the work performed in different divisions of the plant and in the factory as a whole. It has also been done to improve public relations. Holding "open houses" is a means by which the community in which a concern is located is informed about the nature of its operations. Today much attention is rightly given to the philosophy that underlies business management. The beginner in business, however, commonly misconceives the position of the senior officials of his company. He is apt to think that the making of profits and the avoiding of losses is all that interests the "big boys." This is far from the case. An understanding of the true motives that move executives entering business.

Some Draftees
Will Wear
1917 Uniforms

Baltimore — Some of the 1900 conscripts soon to be mustered into the Army for a year's training won't look much different from the 1917 variety—uniform fashion changes notwithstanding.

Third Corps Area officials say that the old stock collar uniform coat and overcoat would appear in the ranks with the latest rollcollar type. And some of the draftees will wear obsolete woolen breeches with spiral leggings, instead of the new trousers and canvas leggings.

As old uniforms are replaced with new ones now on order, however, the obsolete equipment will be used on fatigue duty, maneuvers or on the target range.

Socialist Ticket
Will Appear
In 29 States

New York — The Socialist ticket will appear on the ballot in twenty-nine States embracing 75 per cent of the potential electorate, the party's National campaign headquarters announced Sunday.

The twenty-nine States have 379 electoral votes, or 72 per cent of the total.

"Despite an unprecedented campaign of suppression and nullification on the part of the two old parties, aided incidentally in some States by the Communists," said Travers Clement, Socialist National campaign director, "thirty-five million voters will have an opportunity to cast their ballots for the Socialist Presidential ticket."
