HEART OF WEST GOES OUT TO SMITH

Farmers Throng Cities to Take Part in Enthusiastic Overtures.

HE PROMISES IMMEDIATE AND REAL FARM RELIEF

Attacks Bigotry and Intolerance—Challenges the Ku Klux Klan—Exposes Hoover Stand on Water Power—Assails Republican Corruption.

Starting at Omaha, where in a brilliant speech he made a masterly analysis of the farm question, Governor Smith's swing through the West on his first speaking trip of the campaign was one continued triumphal procession.

At Omaha he lined himself square by side with the farmer, pledging himself to get the farmer a square deal. At Oklahoma City, two days later, with the applause and thanks of the farmers still ringing on all sides, he turned with characteristic vigor and courage to the issue of religious tolerance.

At Denver he attacked the connections with the water power trust of the Republican party and the Republican candidate, and explained convincingly his own constructive program with regard to water power. Republican corruption, so sensationally revealed in the oil scandal investigations, he assailed in his address at the Montana State Fair at Helena.

Although comment on Governor Smith's farm speech at Omaha has particularly emphasized the warmth and friendship shown by the Democratic candidate for the farmers and his determination to give them the kind of help they want, it has not been lost of the masterly grasp which he displayed of the farm problem.

Going directly to the heart of the farm question, he said "the trouble is that the farmer is buying in a highly protective market and he is selling in an unprotected one. Everything that is used in the operation of his farm except what he himself produces, is hid behind the tariff wall. It is supposed to function for him but does not."

The Surplus

"A great many of the crops of this country the farmer grows in excess of the needs of the domestic market. That is the 'surplus' in the word. That is what you have not to pay your attention to, because as it stands to day, the farmer is compelled to offer it in the domestic market first, and the surplus tends to pull down the price that he receives for the whole crop."

Referring to broken Republican campaign promises of 1924, Governor Smith continued, "What did they mean by 'equality between agriculture and industries'? They meant to give the farmer the benefit of the tariff; they knew they have not done it. The President knows it. Candidate Hoover knows it."

Governor Smith then proceeded to show that Herbert Hoover, the Republican candidate, has absolutely ignored this vital and fundamental part of the farm problem. Mr. Hoover is against the McNary-Haugen bill, was largely responsible for President Coolidge's two vetoes of that measure, and the only suggestion he has ever made for solving the surplus problem is to starve enough farmers into bankruptcy so that there will no longer be any surplus.

Pointing out the harsh cruelty of such a policy, which would mean that millions of farmers would lose their homes and be driven into the cities to find work, Governor Smith pledged himself to a constructive and humane method of saving the farmer from the unfair and ruinous operation of the tariff.

He said: "As I read the McNary-Haugen bill, its fundamental purpose is to establish an effective control of the sale of exportable surplus, with the cost imposed upon the commodity benefited. For that principle the Democratic platform squarely stands and for that principle I squarely stand. Mr. Hoover stands squarely opposed to this principle by which the farmer could get the benefit of the tariff."

"Here is a clean cut issue, which the farmers and voters of this country must decide. I pledge to the farmers and people of the country that no stone will be left unturned to give immediate and adequate farm relief by legislation, carrying into practice this principle for which my party and I stand."

Gov. Smith Says---

The way he wants to relieve the farmer is to destroy him.

Mr. Hoover, as the chief adviser of the last two administrations, upon the subject of agriculture, assumed a direct responsibility for the hostility and action of the Administration, and continues to assume the responsibility by his fulsome endorsement of the record of Coolidge policies.

"Do you believe that liquor is the great issue of this campaign?" I certainly do not.

The absolute separation of state and church is part of the fundamental basis of our Constitution. I believe in that separation and in all that it implies.

I can think of no greater disaster to this country than to have the voters of it divided upon religious lines.

If there is any citizen of this country who believes that I can promote its welfare, that I am capable of steering the ship of state safely through the next four years, and then votes against me because of my religion, he is not a real, pure, genuine American.

Whispering Campaign

At Oklahoma City, pointing to his long record in New York public affairs and his four terms as Governor of the state, he denounced the secret and underhand campaign being waged by the Republicans to arouse opposition to him on the grounds of his religion.

"There is no greater mockery in the world today," said Governor Smith, "than the burning of the cross, the emblem of Christ, and at the same time breaking hatred."

"I have the right to say that if there is any citizen in this country who believes that I can promote its welfare, that I am that I can promote the ship of state safely through the next four years, and then votes against me because of my religion, he is not a real, pure, genuine American. I have no difference to him in his attempts to offend while Governor. Protestants having been named in the vast majority of cases and all creeds being represented."

Mrs. Wild was well known in this community by a large circle of friends who deeply sympathize with the bereaved husband and loved ones.

Vote For Smith Is Worth $50 An Acre to Farmer, Says Republican Banker

KANKAKEE, Ill.—"Fifty dollars per acre for your vote!" That slogan in big black type is appearing in local newspapers at the head of full page advertisements which are being paid for by P. G. Snow, local farmer and banker.

Mr. Snow, one of the leading Republicans in the community, points out that farm lands on the average are worth $50 less an acre than they were seven years ago and calls upon all Republicans to repudiate Hoover and the Coolidge policies. He said:

"Though I have always been a strong Republican, I would be a second Benedict Arnold to the people who patronize my bank if I supported my party's Presidential nominee this year. The prayer of the farmer today is not for rain but for the election of 'Al' Smith.

"As the head of a large bank in the farming district I daily come into contact with numerous farmers who face ruinous conditions. The advertisement is my contribution to defeat Herbert Hoover, the farmer's arch enemy and the very man who was responsible for maintaining the fixed prices on wheat and hogs, to the disadvantage of the farmer, during the war.

"I have had many requests from Indiana, Iowa, Tennessee, Kansas, South Dakota, Nebraska and Montana for permission to reprint it." In the advertisement, Mr. Snow said:

"Mr. Farmer, in pre-war days every acre of good land was worth from $25 to $75 more per acre than it is worth today, and for what reason? Farmers are now paying a tariff-protected price for nearly everything they buy, and because of a small surplus, are compelled to sell what they produce at prices unprotected by the tariff, for their tariff is absolutely ineffective because of a small surplus.

"Nearly four years ago Mr. Coolidge was elected President on a platform containing a strong farmer-aid plank. Since his election he has done nothing to relieve the depressed agricultural conditions, but has twice vetoed a farm-aid McNary-Langer bill which was backed by a united agriculture and twice approved by Congress.

"I do not care whether you are Catholic or Protestant, wet or dry, the fact remains that the steady confiscation of farm lands is still going on to an alarming extent. I claim that a vote against Hoover is a vote for a $50 average increase in the price of the farmer's land, and a chance to return to prosperity for the tenant farmer as well."

Happy Stages of Life

The passage from youth to middle age, hence to old age is commonly viewed as one of life's tragedies. Why? In most cases it is assumed that youth is the happiest time of life and that the exuberance of the adolescent period can not be obtained in after life. Strictly speaking, this is true. But the fact that youthful exuberance is mainly physical, while that which may come in later years is of a mental nature is often lost sight of.

However, most men and women will find, if they give the matter sober thought, that they are much happier at 35, 45 or 60 than they were at 12, 20 or 35.

Reviews of their lives based on realism rather than sentimentality will convince them that all genuine happiness did not cease for them after they made their first dollars or acquired their first beaus. In truth, the happiness of youth is often more than balanced by its unhappiness.

Few persons would, if the opportunity were miraculously offered them, care to go through the trails and blunders of adolescence of young manhood or womanhood a second time. The man or woman of middle age or old age will recall that the lessons of life were not learned without major tribulations.

Why envy the young people who have yet to encounter this unpleasantness?

Scholars Need Good Eyes.

As all of the schools are open and children hard at work, parents should not lose sight of the fact that eyesight is the biggest factor in the education of a child.

Child welfare associations realize the necessity of making sure that the under-privileged child sees well before setting about the curing of other defects.

Parents should be as much concerned about their own children and not make the mistake of permitting them to enter school with defective vision a drag upon them.

Countless investigations have disclosed that poor eyesight is responsible for much of the retardation in school and causes a stigma to be placed on many children, whose visual defects weigh them down.

This is a duty that should be clear to every parent. First, be certain that defective eyesight is at the bottom of the trouble, if any, with the child, and then have it corrected at once.

Neglect in this respect is little short of criminal.

Fewer and Good

Laws Needed.

Laws are made for the protection of people who live under them.

If a law is a good one it should be enforced. No favor should be shown either rich or poor, powerful or insignificant. If it is not a good law, it should be repealed.

We have too many laws that are dead letters, for our own good.

This condition is well known to the public, and even to the younger generation, just coming into maturity. It is not calculated to increase respect for law. It is a breeder of evasion and the father of contempt.

We need fewer laws, but we need good ones that are enforced.

Some people envy the rich, but after looking around you can find lots of people without a dollar who are just as idle.

During the last two weeks I have visited two community fairs in this vicinity and both were above the average.

At Union City the fair was given by the 4-H clubs and for girls and boys. It was dandy. There were fine displays of pigs, beef cattle and dairy cows that were in fine condition and brought good prices. One boy sold a yearling calf for $157.90 getting 16¢ per pound on foot, another little fellow about 10 years of age was depositing $28.05 in the bank the proceeds of one pig he raised this past year.

Now you old fogey farmers who can't see anything but tobacco and cotton it would be a good idea to pattern after these two boys and wake up.

There were several booths decorated just as good as anybody's booths, and had I been the judge I guess I would have been figuring yet, all were good. However if the ladies would have let me sample the cakes I saw there, maybe I could have reached a decision.

The poultry was not as good as it should have been. I will have to disagree with these county agents on the way they cull poultry. A hen can be a standard bred hen good enough to go in any show and still be a good producer. There is an old saying "fine feathers make fine birds." Yes and you can have fine feathers on your good laying stock just as easy as you can fill up your yards with scrubby looking poultry. While there were some real good birds in the show, still there were some that were hard to tell the breed by looking at them.

But taking the fair as a whole I think Mr. Cleland deserves a great deal of credit for his efforts. He is a hard worker and should have better support from his county.

Now we will talk about the Hickman fair. Here Mr. McPherson has worked wonders in the short time he has been here.

When we arrived at the fair, of course the first place I headed for was the chicken end of the fair. Here I found a real good show of 200 birds, some real good and like Union City's show there were some I had to look at the second and third time to tell what they were. We assisted the judge in placing the awards and with one or two exceptions we were of the same opinion. The outstanding pen of the show was a pen of Jersey Giants; they were closely followed by a pen of white Plymouth Rocks, entered by Irene Bowers of the McFadden school. Had the cockerel in this pen been a little more finished they would have been hard to beat.

The winners from the Fulton end of the county are as follows: Irene Bowers, white plymouth rocks, first young pen, 1st cockerel in the open class and best young pen and best cockerel in the 4-H club work.

Roy Carver, Rhode Island reds, 1st cockerel and 1st pullet in the open class and best pullet in the 4-H club work.

Mrs. D. J. Perry, Buff Orpington, 1st cockerel, 1st hen, 1st old pen also sweepstakes hen of the show.

The Hickman fair beat the Union City fair on beef and dairy cattle, poultry, sheep, farm and garden products, but will have to bow to them on hogs and community booths.

There were fine displays of beef and dairy cattle, quite a few sheep and 2 or 3 breeds of hogs, but a small number.

I would not be fair to the boys and girls if I failed to mention the parade they gave. It was real unique and consisted of several tastefully decorated floats and several pioneers and Indians on horseback all of which lent spice and pep to the fair. The people of Hickman and vicinity should be proud of their exertions.

In conclusion I wish to offer you an invitation on behalf of the Fulton Fair Association to come over next fall and join us in making our (and your) county fair one of the biggest and best county fairs in the middle west. We will treat you as one of us, we offer good prizes and you are at liberty to win as many as you have the stock to do it with.

CROSS-FLOW RADIATOR

The cross-flow radiators in the cooling systems of the Pontiac Six and the Oakland All-American Six reduce to a minimum the evaporation of water and alcohol. An automatic thermostat prevents water circulation until the engine reaches correct operating temperature. As a consequence the engine warms up quickly and less choking is needed, reducing dilution of crankcase oil. Because of the protection the cross-flow radiator provides against losses of water and alcohol, the Pontiac Six and the All-American Six require less attention in winter than other cars. Also, through their thermostatic control, they reveal far better performance than other cars in their fields when the temperature is low. . . . The cross-flow radiator is available only on the Pontiac Six and the All-American Six. Come in and see it. ### EXCITING FOOTBALL GAME

The Paducah Tornadoes swept across fair grounds field here Saturday afternoon leaving in their wake the Fulton Bulldogs, who were on the losing end of a football battle, 25 to 0. The Paducah team presented a well trained, smooth running, hard fighting machine and using mostly straight plays, scored early. On the second down in the first quarter, Fulton fumbled and with Paducah recovering they marched down the field for their first touchdown, with the kick for goal failing.

In the second quarter, Paducah scored again when Neal carried the ball over with line plunges and goal was kicked.

In the final quarter Parsons intercepted a pass and scored and a final touchdown was made by the Tornadoes in this quarter.

Fulton played a hard game throughout, deserving much credit for their fighting ability, and showed up exceptionally well for their first game of the season. They resorted to a passing attack during the game which was partially successful.

Neal, Parsons and Bailey displayed championship form for the visitors, while Chapman, Binford and Shuck played brilliantly for the bulldogs.

Fumbles marred the game to ascertain extent, Fulton being the chief loser.

Many substitutes were used, due to the extremely hot weather.

Paducah had another touchdown with the ball on the three yard line when the final whistle blew.

SEARS-ROEBUCK TO OPEN IN PADUCAH

(Paducah News-Democrat)
Sears-Roebuck & company of Chicago, world's largest mail order house, will open a large retail store in Paducah between the first and fifteenth of November, according to announcement made yesterday by Ezzell & Cave, real estate firm, which has closed negotiations for the company with E. B. Ferguson for a long term lease of the Ferguson building at 129 to 131 North Third street. Record of the lease was filed yesterday at the courthouse.

The two buildings, two stories in height, which have 17,000 feet of floor space, will be remodeled from top to bottom to house the huge new retail establishment. The remodeling will call for putting in a new front of large show windows. The Sears-Roebuck company which is establishing branch retail stores throughout the country will handle a great variety of merchandise in the Paducah store.

This company is the latest of a number of large chain store companies to come to Paducah since the boom started with the building of the new Illinois Central railroad shops.

J. C. W. BECKHAM IN LETTER PLEDGES "CHEERFUL SUPPORT" TO GOV. SMITH

Kentucky Dry Leader Who Has Battled Liquor Forces For Years Sees Enforcement of 18th Amendment And Great Business Administration If Democratic Standard-Bearer Is Elected

Louisville, Ky.—J. C. W. Beckham, former U. S. Senator and former Governor of Kentucky, who has led the "dry" forces of Kentucky in many battles, in a letter addressed to U. S. Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic campaign chairman, announces he will give Governor Alfred E. Smith his "cheerful support" in the present campaign. He considers Governor Smith one of the "greatest executives this country has produced in the present generation," has confidence in his ability to give the Nation a great business administration and is satisfied in the event that Governor Smith is elected to the Presidency that the Nation's dry laws will be rigidly enforced.

In his letter, Senator Beckham writes:

"I wish to assure you that I appreciate the numerous requests that have come to you and to me from many places in the State that I should speak in behalf of Governor Smith and the Democratic ticket; and if it were possible, I would gladly comply with all of them. My inability to do so, however, must not be construed as any lack of deep interest in the success of our ticket.

Although differing from Governor Smith on the question of prohibition, which I do not consider as a real issue in this campaign, I cheerfully support him, not merely for party reasons, but because I believe that he has proved himself to be one of the greatest executives this country has produced in the present generation, and that as President of the United States he would give us such an honest, businesslike and successful administration of our national affairs as he has given to New York in its State affairs while Governor of that State.

No Attack On Record.

"It is a significant feature of this campaign and a very high compliment to his integrity and ability that the Republican leaders have been unable in their exhaustive researches to find a single thing in all of his eight years as Governor to criticize or attack; and in the absence of such material, they have encouraged, if they have not instigated, a miserable and an un-American attack upon his religion.

"The fact that no Catholic has ever been President of the United States is no reason whatever why one should not be. Members of that faith have filled with honor and credit to themselves and to their country some of the highest positions in our National and State Governments. There is no more exalted office on earth than that of Chief Justice of our Supreme Court and two of the greatest Chief Justices were Catholics, one of them the trusted and wise counsellor of President Jackson, and the other honored and elevated to that high position by two Presidents, Cleveland and Taft. Other members of that Court have been Catholics. No word of criticism has ever been uttered against them, and none of them has ever proved faithless to American traditions and principles in the discharge of his duties.

"Nor can anyone truthfully say that Governor Smith, in his successful administration as Governor of New York, has ever allowed his membership in that church to influence or color his official acts. If he should have a chance to conduct the Federal Government along the same lines and principles that he has conducted his State Government, he would rank among the greatest of our Presidents, and even the 'whisperers' would have to admit that a Catholic could be trusted in that high office.

Walsh's Service Cited.

"It is unfortunate and discreditable that this false issue should have been raised by Republican connivance, and the American people in the coming election should rebuke them by electing Smith and Robinson. Our Catholic citizens have at all times, in peace and in war, proved themselves to be just as loyal and patriotic Americans as the members of any other church, and it is unfair and unjust to them that such an issue should be raised against an honorable and distinguished Democrat because he happens to be a member of that church.

"I am a member of and regular attendant in a Protestant church and I haven't the slightest fear of Governor Smith as President because of his being a Catholic. It was a Catholic and a great Democratic Senator, Senator Walsh of Montana, who brought about the exposure of that carnival of corruption and crime just a few years ago in the Republican administration, the most sordid betrayal of the people's interests that ever happened in this country.

"No one questions the personal honesty and integrity of Mr. Hoover, but many believe that if Governor Smith, with his aggressive honesty and keenness of intellect had sat in the same Cabinet, where certain other Cabinet members were perpetrating their bold and treacherous frauds upon the country, his insight and honesty would not have allowed him to wait until an investigation was started by a Senator of the opposite party, and his conscience would not have permitted him in all these years since then to refrain from the severest condemnation of those provoking crimes. No Democrat nor Independent voter need go any further to find good reasons to support Smith than to compare his excellent record of eight years in the clean, honest and able administration of the public affairs of New York with the indefensible record of the unrepentant Republican party in its nearly eight years of control of the Federal Government.

J. C. W. BECKHAM.

No Issue In Liquor.

"As I have said above, I do not agree with Governor Smith on the question of prohibition. Neither did I agree with President Wilson on it. But I recognize the honesty of both in their views about it. Each has been opposed to national prohibition. In the United States Senate, I voted for the Eighteenth Amendment and helped to pass the Volstead Act over President Wilson's veto. I believe that great good to the country has resulted from these measures, and that greater good would follow in their effective enforcement. I have no doubt that as President, Smith would do everything possible for honest enforcement of the law, regardless of his personal views as to the wisdom of its enactment. He could do nothing as to its repeal or modification unless Congress should pass such a bill, and if President Wilson was not able to prevent the passage of the act, it is not likely that President Smith could secure the repeal of any of its provisions; and there is no likelihood that Congress will change its policy on that question.

"So I do not regard that as an issue between the two parties. The only issue in that matter is one of law enforcement, and as an advocate and friend of the law, I do not hesitate to support Smith. He has given every pledge for its enforcement, and he has an unbroken record of keeping his word and his promises. I believe that many good Democrats have been unjustly blamed on this subject. Governor Smith has been unusually frank and honest in expressing his views in opposition to National prohibition just as President Wilson was in his vigorous opposition to its enactment into law.

Congress Must Act.

"To change or repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, not only would Congress have to pass a measure, but three-fourths of the States would have to ratify it; and no modification or repeal of the Volstead Act could be accomplished except by the action of both Houses of Congress. Presidential recommendations in such matters do not often meet with favorable responses from Congress.

"So, as one who has had some part in making this State and the country dry, and in closing the saloons on Sundays and all other days, and will do all he can to help in keeping them closed, I am glad to give my support to the ticket nominated at Houston.

"In closing, I wish to express the hope that our Democratic men and women of Kentucky will not be lured away by false issues from the support of their ticket, and that on November 6, they will see to it that Kentucky does its part in electing a man to the Presidency, whose record and character I believe give assurance that in that great office he would restore to the Government, in the administration of its affairs, honesty, ability and courage.

Wishing you success in the conduct of the campaign, I am,

Very truly yours,
J. C. W. BECKHAM.

Lesson for October 14

SPIRITUAL GIFTS

LESSON TEXT—1 Cor. 12:3-7, 11-13.

GOLDEN TEXT—Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Love Is the Best of All.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Greatest Thing In the World.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Greatest of All Gifts.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Spiritual Gifts.

Joel predicted a remarkable effusion of the spirit in Messianic times (Joel 2:28, 29; cf. Acts 2:17, 18).

Before the crucifixion, Jesus promised to send the Holy Spirit to be the helper and guide of His people. This was historically fulfilled on the day of Pentecost. The gifts of the Spirit were extended to all classes. Not only were these endowments marked by great profusion, but by great diversity. In the exercise of these gifts confusion would surely arise, Divine life, suddenly poured into human nature, stirred it to unusual power. In view of the abuses and confusion which are likely to arise from such a condition, it is highly important that certain principles be set forth for guidance and regulation.

I. The Infallible Criterion (1 Cor. 12:3).

The infallible test which determines whether gifts are spurious or genuine is one's conception of and attitude toward Jesus Christ. Only those who recognize Him as God manifest in the flesh, His vicarious atonement on the cross, and submit to Him as their Lord, can be recognized as possessing the gift of the Holy Spirit. Christ said before leaving the earth that when the Spirit came His supreme business would be to testify of Him, to take the things of Christ and show them unto the people. The soundness of the faith of a man is the sign of this commission from God.

II. The Diversity of Spiritual Gifts (1 Cor. 12:1-11).

In the church there are to be found those possessing the gift of wisdom, knowledge, faith, healing, miracles, prophecy, discernment of spirits, divers kinds of tongues and the interpretation of tongues.

III. The Unity of the Spirit's Gifts (1 Cor. 12:12-30).

Christian unity is only possible when effected by the one Holy Spirit. This unity amidst diversity is represented under the figure of the human body.

1. The human body has many members, each performing distinct functions for the good of the body (v. 12).

2. The members are mutually related and interdependent (vv. 13-17).

3. The place of each member is determined by the choice of God (v. 18).

4. The members which are least attractive and least conspicuous are most important (vv. 21-23).

IV. Love, the Spirit's Best Gift (1 Cor. 12:31-13).

1. The pre-eminence of love (v. 13).

It transcends:

(1) Speaking with tongues.

(2) The gift of prophecy.

(3) Faith of the most vigorous kind.

(4) Philanthropy of the most generous sort.

(5) Heroic devotion leading to martyrdom.

2. The attributes of love (vv. 4-7).

(1) Long-suffering and kind.

(2) Free from envy.

(3) Freedom from boasting.

(4) Decorous and well behaved.

(5) Unselfish.

(6) Does not give way to passion; is not quick tempered.

(7) Thinks no evil; does not impute evil motives to others; is not suspicious.

(8) Delights not in evil.

(9) Boreth all things.

(10) Is trustful, hopeful and firm.

3. The permanence of love (v. 8-13).

Prophecy as predication will be fulfilled. Prophecy as teaching will be brought to an end in the day when teaching is not needed. Tongues shall cease, for as the languages of earth were caused by God's judgment for sin, so shall Christ's redemption bring the nations back to one tongue. Knowledge shall be done away with the coming of a wider and nobler intelligence. The twilight will be lost in day, childhood, in maturity. Love will always abide, for God is love.

5. The comparative value of prophecy and tongues (14:1-25).

Prophecy is given the highest place because it is to declare God's message to men. Its primary meaning is to forthtell. To speak with tongues means to speak in other languages for the purpose of showing the presence of God.

Others may forget us in their prayers; there is one in heaven who never does forget. Others may fail us when their lamp burns low; He ever liveth. We are enshrined by the prayers of One who loves us and has the ear of God and therefore is able to save to the uttermost.—George H. Morrison.

E.

AN AMERICAN CAREER
(Optional Single Column Head)

CHAPTER VIII

One of the principal divisions of opinion in the Convention was over whether the work of the body should be submitted in one document or in a series of proposals. Smith realized that many of the changes which were recommended by the Convention were essential for governmental progress. As a matter of fact many of them have since been adopted as separate amendments. Smith took the position that the changes should be submitted section by section, which meant a series of amendments to the old constitution. Most of the Republican leaders, with the exception of Barnes of Albany, at the Convention, took the opposite position and insisted that an entirely new document should be submitted with the only alternative being the continuing of the old constitution.

These leaders did not have Smith's knowledge of the reactions of the voters to the proposition under consideration with the realization that those opposed to a single section would vote against the entire constitution in order to accomplish its defeat. The Republicans being largely in control of the convention won, and the constitution was submitted in its entirety.

One of the important differences between the Republican and Democratic parties was in connection with the report submitted by the Committee on Legislature and its Reorganization, which amended the Constitution of 1894, limiting the representation of two adjoining counties of the City of New York, by providing a prohibition against a representation of more than one-half of the Legislature from five adjoining counties. In 1894 the two adjoining counties were the thickly populated counties of Manhattan and Kings, then known as New York and Brooklyn. In 1915 the population was spread through the five counties of Greater New York and it was deemed necessary by the Republican majority to freeze into the constitution a provision putting the City of New York permanently in the minority and giving a normal control of the Legislature to the Republican party which drew its main support from the rural communities.

The unsuccessfulness of the great city as the subject of home rule had existed for many years. It was reflected in the regular Democratic party doctrine. It had been pointed out as an evil by Samuel J. Tilden when he was governor. Smith led those who opposed the theory of the apportionment based upon territory and argued that the unit of representation should be the individual and not his place of residence.

This unfortunate restriction of apportionment, in effect a gerrymander against New York City, has been responsible during the eight years that Smith has been Governor for his having to deal with a Republican Assembly, although in some of the years a Democratic candidate for the Assembly received a greater total of votes than did the Republican candidates. The Republicans would control the Assembly because each up state county, with one exception, regardless of population, has at least one member of that body.

When the constitution was submitted to the people containing the provision for this unfair apportionment for New York, wherein is contained the biggest Democratic vote of the State, Smith and his Democratic colleagues felt it necessary to oppose the adoption of the constitution. They campaigned before the people, urging that it be rejected and as a result it was defeated by a vote of 400,423 for its adoption to 310,462 against it. Smith knew more than the Republican leaders of the convention, the temper of the voters as the defeat of the opposed constitution showed.

Prior to the meeting of the Convention Smith had been one of the able and effective members of the Assembly. At the Convention he won his spurs in association with the other able men who participated in its deliberation and he emerged as one of the really big men of the State.

His services in the Assembly and the Constitutional Convention being at an end, always poor, his party recognized his ability by nominating him for Sheriff in New York County, a lucrative position.

Smith's candidacy was hailed by Republicans and Independents alike with enthusiasm and approval. Even the New York Tribune, the Republican metropolitan daily, paid him an honest and forceful tribute in its editorial of September 2, 1915, headed "Alfred E. Smith."

"The City of New York could well afford to pay Alfred E. Smith all the prospective emoluments of the Sheriff's office as a consideration for his continuing to represent a local Assembly district at Albany. In the past ten years, there has been no Republican, Progressive or Democrat in the State Legislature who has represented as effective, useful downright valuable service to this town as ex-Sheriff Smith."

The peculiar value of Mr. Smith's service at Albany has lain in the fact that he was always loyal to his own city, his own country and his own district. He has found for some scores of things that were good, and he has found with equal vigor against things that were injurious to this town.

A true leader, a genuine compeller of men, a man of wit and force with an instinctive grasp on legislative practice, he has made a real reputation for himself at the capitol, and has deserved well of the large constituency which is his own town.

Smith served with distinction as Sheriff, because such a popular official, and shortly before the expiration of his term, there arose a demand that he be placed on the municipal ticket in the campaign of 1917. Smith and his friends thought that he was entitled to the nomination of Mayor, but others thought it advisable to have the candidate for that post come from Brooklyn, and Smith accepted the nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen. The Democratic ticket was elected and in his new position, which he held for a year, which carried with it also membership on the Board of Estimate, Smith's training in the Assembly and his study of municipal affairs made him a valuable part of a City Government.

His service on the Board of Aldermen was brief. It began in January, 1918, and by June of that year a well defined movement was afoot to nominate him for the governorship. In the twelve years of his legislative career, Smith was the outstanding champion of justice to New York City. His loyalty to the interests of the city of his birth was proclaimed by New Yorkers, whether Republicans or Democrats. These achievements were recognized by opposition party newspapers. They were proclaimed by civic bodies strongly opposed to the local Democratic organization. New York's love was always ungrudgingly given him. What many New Yorkers did not appreciate was the impression he had made upon upstate communities and their substantial leaders above the Harlem river.

The Smith personality and the accumulated results of his service had won him a large acquaintance through out the State. It was thus not unnatural for upstate Democratic leaders to look upon him as sound gubernatorial timber. They shrewdly calculated his vote-getting powers in New York City. Of his fitness for office both by natural endowment and acquired training they had not a shred of doubt. A strong movement in favor of Smith for Governor emanated from the upstate Democratic leaders. The local New York City organization idolized Smith. With the initiative of upstate spontaneous support it was not difficult for him to secure the nomination in the Saratoga Convention of 1918.

The pride and pleasure which that nomination brought to him and his family was revealed through his son Arthur, then a little boy of ten. It happened that Mrs. Smith could not attend the Convention. There was some question as to which of the children would be allowed to accompany their father. Arthur assured his mother that if he was allowed to go, he would "bring home the bacon."

The lad listened to every word and counted every vote in the Convention. It was he who dashed to the telephone to say to his mother, firmly convinced it was so, "See, I told you I'd bring luck, and I did. We've got it."

No sentimental issues characterized that campaign. Smith criticized the Republican administration for its extravagance. He stood for an aggressive support of President Wilson in winning the war. At the very close of the campaign he had the opportunity to meet a group at the Women's University Club of New York. Adapting himself quickly to his audience, which consisted entirely of women, he told them the history of the suffrage movement in the State and discussed with them the underlying theory of representative government. He concluded his speech by saying, "I have spent twelve years in the assembly in the State of New York and I know the State Government. I want to say to you here and now that if I am elected I will do what my conscience tells me is best for the State of New York. If I do wrong, you may be sure that it will not be from ignorance and you can hold me responsible." The straightforward manliness of that speech brought him thousands of wavering votes from Independent Democrats.

The influenza epidemic broke out during that campaign month of October. It proved so violent in upstate communities and in the larger cities that active campaigning had to be abandoned. This calamity affected the very strongholds in which the Democrats most needed recruits. Despite this handicap, Smith was elected by the very small majority of 15,000 votes.

The gratitude which welled up in his heart for this honor conferred upon him by the electorate of New York in his election to the governorship took the form of a solemn vow to give the people the best that was in him.

When, on the first of January, 1919, he placed his arm upon the Bible to take the oath of office, with his mother by his side, his wife and his five children around him, he looked upon the Assembly Chamber packed with his loyal and loving friends. The spectacle inspired his silent prayer to Divine Providence to make him worthy of his responsibilities.

"No one owes more to the State than I do," he said.

No Governor tried to give more of his deepest soul to the duties of that office. His inaugural address was an expression of his gratitude. Simple in its language and deeply human in its emotions, it was only a dedication of himself to public duty.

Delightfully informal as "Al" Smith can be, he was every inch his Excellency. His attitude reflected that solemn dedication born of his gratitude to the people and his own conception of the dignity of the office he now held.

When Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and their five children, with Caesar, their Great Dane, came to occupy the Mansion, they lived as simple neighbors. For the first time within the memory of Albanians the children of the neighborhood could be seen playing on the grounds. The children were as democratic as their father. They lived just as they did in their old neighborhood. They made many friends among the neighborhood children.

About a month after the family settled in the Mansion, while they were having their "supper"—the bell rang and the Governor received the visitor in the hall. The woman was plainly embarrassed. "Are you Governor Smith?" she asked. "I have that honor," replied the Governor.

"I'm afraid you will think me foolish," said the visitor, "but I am Mrs. So-and-so and a neighbor. I want to know if my little daughter is here."

"Yes," answered the Governor. "She's inside at supper with the family. Come in and see her."

She found her daughter in the seat of honor at the dining table to the right of the Governor's chair.

"I couldn't believe it," she stammered, "although she is a charming child. When she told me one of your daughters had invited her over to dinner—I mean supper—I have seen several families come and go—well—I just had to come over to see for myself."

One Saturday evening the Secretary of the Reconstruction Commission had a conference with the Governor in his study on the second floor of the Mansion. Three times during the conference the Governor excused himself for about five minutes. Each time he left the room the resonant voice of the Governor was heard and boyish shouts of laughter, accompanied by the splashing of water. Finally, after his third departure from the conference, he explained these mysterious interruptions.

"Ever since my boys were old enough to frequent a bath tub I have had fun turning the hose on them. My mother came up today with my sister's little boy and he and my two boys have been taking turns in having the hose turned on them."

Smith is not a self-made man or a democratic snob. He has no prejudices because of social station. First families do not interest him just because they are P. E's.

Albany prides itself on the exclusiveness of its aristocracy. When Smith became Governor he was invited to dinner with one of the most exclusive families in Albany. He refused. It created quite a stir and he explained, "In explanation he said: 'I have been in Albany for fifteen years. I have met all the members of that family socially a number of times. This is the first time they have invited me to their home. Governor Smith may be different from Assemblyman Smith to them but not to me.'"

Smith met "high society" at the charity ball. It is the leading social event in Albany and at it the Governor of the State is the guest of honor. Society was curious to see how this man of the plain people would handle himself.

The curious found him in his formal evening attire, looking every inch the Governor, whose dignity and repose were striking. As the Four Hundred of Albany visited the Governor's box, he had something appropriate to say to each. He really charmed them with his poise as much as he surprised them all. Many, meeting him for the first time with preconceived notions of a crude personality, received a first hand impression of a governor to the manner born.

BEELERTON HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The Beelerton School attended the school fair at Shiloh last Friday. At 10:30 a. m. the Beelerton boys played Shiloh Boys and won by a score of 29-12. The game was full of pep and excitement. The three outstanding players of our team were Bushart, scoring 25 points out of 29, and Fite and Moore, who were air-tight guards. The Beelerton girls played Shiloh girls at 11:30 a. m. This proved to be a real interesting and snappy game. Although we lost to Shiloh 7-4, we are not discouraged, but are only going to work all the harder. Clean sportsmanship was shown in both games. All who attended the fair reported an enjoyable day for it was not only recreational but also educational.

A game has been scheduled for the boys on Friday afternoon with Wingo. The girls will probably play Water Valley team also Friday. Both games will be here on our court. Notice in next week's issue for the pupils making average of best grades in all classes.

Be sure and attend the Operetta entitled "Peter Rabbit," which will be given here at this auditorium on Saturday night, October 27.
