FARM STATES STAMPEDE TO GOV. SMITH

Norris and Blaine, Republican Progressive Leaders, Endorse His Policies.

GOV. MADDOCK BOLTS TO "FARMER'S CANDIDATE"

Senator Wheeler, LaFollette Running
Mate, Routs G. O. P. in Montana—
Hoover Advisers Frantic but Helpless.

His Western swing completed, leaving Republican forces in all the States he visited distracted by forebodings of disaster, Governor Alfred E. Smith is now carrying his campaign to the doubtful region bordering the Mason-Dixon line.

Democratic leaders are confident, and Republican leaders apprehensive that the "Happy Warrior's" present tour will result in a reaction no less decisive than that which followed his appearances in the West.

The Republicans have virtually abandoned all hope of carrying North or South Dakota, Wisconsin or Montana, while Minnesota and Nebraska give every indication of joining the stampede to the Governor. While Republican campaign managers cannot afford to admit publicly the loss of these States, those high up in the councils of the party have lost no time in appraising Hoover of the real situation.

Western farmers have risen in fury over the grain gamblers and special privilege clique headed by Herbert Hoover. They resent bitterly the fact that the Republican nomination was given, despite their vehement protests at Kansas City, to a man whose record stamps him a relentless enemy of agriculture.

One of the most staggering blows to the Republican cause was the unqualified endorsement of Governor Smith on farm relief and water power by Senator Geo. W. Norris, Republican Progressive leader in Nebraska, who denounces Hoover's attitude on both issues.

Senator Norris, a staunch prohibitionist and Methodist, has been for a quarter of a century in Congress, a leading advocate of farm relief measures. He not only enjoys the complete confidence of the farming forces, but is the foremost Republican authority on both farm relief and water power.

Ridiculing Hoover's farm program as "meaningless," and asserting that the Republican candidate's record linked him clearly with the power trust, Senator Norris predicted that Governor Smith's stand on these issues would win him tremendous support in the West.

Smith's Omaha speech, he said, "is wholly satisfactory to anyone who believes in the McNary-Haugen bill."

The blow which leaves the Republicans without hope in Wisconsin is the repudiation of Hoover by Senator John T. Blaine, former Republican Governor of that State, who succeeded to the leadership of the dominant Progressives upon the death of the Senator Robert LaFollette.

Senator Blaine, who several weeks ago advised his followers to "corrupt by voting for Governor Smith," has just issued a new statement in which he says:

"Mr. Hoover is opposed to practically all of the policies of the great mass of Progressive Republicans and independent forward-thinking people of America. No one's Republicanism can be questioned if he fails to vote for Hoover. I will not support him nor vote for him."

Leading the stampede to Governor Smith in North Dakota is Governor

Walter Maddock, who was elected on the Republican ticket and was the leader of the North Dakota delegation to the Republican convention at Kansas City. Not only has he given Smith his unqualified endorsement, but he is running for re-election on the same ticket with the Governor.

"The farmers are for Governor Smith," Governor Maddock explains, "and I represent the farmers."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, who as candidate for Vice President, led the Progressive ticket with LaFollette in 1924, is also campaigning actively for Governor Smith.

Senator Charles Curtis, Republican of Kansas, who has been elected President of the United States, is also expected to endorse Governor Smith.

What Borah Told the Senate About Hoover

Pauline stricken over the imminent loss of all the States which have had the opportunity to see and hear Governor Smith, the Republican National Committee has cancelled Senator Borah's scheduled Eastern speeches so that he can devote his whole time in a desperate effort to stem the Smith tide in the West.

Since the campaign speeches of this high-powered Republican spell binder are purely "political," he, of course, will not divulge his own personal feelings and opinions. Those who hear him, however, might be interested in the Senator's real estimate of Herbert Hoover, as gleaned from his own utterances in the Senate.

In a scathing arraignment of the former Food Administrator after the war, Senator Borah said:

"Whatever may be the great ability of Mr. Hoover, there is one thing I have been here for seven years while Mr. Hoover has been Secretary of Commerce, and he is the one man who has never raised his voice against agricultural inequality. He should never be elected President."

SENATOR PETER NORBECK, Republican of South Dakota, said in the Senate on April 20, 1925:

"I have been here for seven years while Mr. Hoover has been Secretary of Commerce, and he is the one man who has never raised his voice against agricultural inequality. He should never be elected President."

SENATOR GERALD P. NYE, Republican of North Dakota, said on June 11, 1928:

"This man Hoover, whom some are trying to drive down our throats, believes that agriculture is improving. Agriculture is improving, it is dying from improvement."

SENATOR CHARLES CURTIS, Republican of Kansas, who has been elected President of the United States, is also expected to endorse Governor Smith.

Exposing the irresponsibility and hypocrisy of attacks upon Governor Smith ostensibly because of his stand on prohibition, hundreds of the country's most notable Dries are openly avowing their support of the Democratic candidate.

These sincere men and women, many of whom have been actively identified for many years with the prohibition cause, are convinced that the Governor's election is the only hope of ending the carnival of crime, corruption and debauchery which has characterized the Republican mal-enforcement of prohibition in America.

As a campaign speaker in behalf of the Governor's candidacy, Senator Sheppard of Texas, one of the authors of the Eighteenth Amendment, is regarded as one of the foremost advocates of prohibition in America.

Most impressive of the declarations of loyalty to Governor Smith, so far as prohibition is concerned, is that of Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas, one of the authors of the Eighteenth Amendment. W.C.T.U. Executive, A Republican and Baptist, for Smith

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Not all Southern Dries are so naively credulous that they allow themselves to be duped by the furtive labels conceived by the instigators of the "whispering campaign."

Among influential prohibitionists who are working actively for the election of Governor Smith is Mrs. Mabel Jones West of this city, a member of the State Executive Committee of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Declaring in a public statement that "Smith is a better prohibitionist than Hoover," Mrs. West has appealed to all Alabama women "not to be deceived by paid Republican propaganda."

Mrs. West is an active worker in the Baptist church. Until this year she has been a Republican.

Popular Hotel Man Con- fined to His Room.

Mr. P. C. Ford who has been suffering for some time of rheumatism is still confined to his room at the Usona Hotel. His many friends have been greatly concerned regarding his condition and inquiries are received daily from all parts of the country.

There has never been a man in Fulton conducting a hotel who has so thoroughly cemented friendships, esteem and admiration as Mr. Ford. No wonder inquiries are coming in daily from all over the United States asking of his condition.

From the very beginning of his management of the Usona many years ago, the traveling public has enjoyed accommodations and courtesies unprecedented in Fulton hotel life, and the same accommodations and courtesies are maintained and enjoyed today.

While Mr. Ford is confined to his room and his geniality and appearance is missed in the lobby the same atmosphere of warm welcome and home life of this popular hotel remains the same under the management of his son Henry, and faithful assistants, all trying to do their utmost in carrying out the instructions of the sick man who has made the Usona one of the leading hotels of our beloved Southland. All of his friends and admirers hope for his speedy recovery.

Yanks Win 1928

World Series

Sportman's Park, St. Louis, Oct. 1.—The Yankees said it with homeruns today and brought the 1928 world's series to a crashing, record-busting conclusion with their 4th straight triumph over the Cardinals.

5 cracking circuit clouts, 3 of them by the one and only Babe Ruth, 4 of them in two successive innings and all of them sounding taps for the Red Birds, enabled the Yankees to win by the decisive count of 7 to 3 and record a new world's series achievement by making their second successive clean sweep over National League champions.

The central and dominating figure in the most smashing triumph of world's series history was the Mighty Ruth. The babe's first two home runs twice tied the score, his second started the downfall of Willie Sherdel, game little southpaw of the Cardinals, and his third equalled the record for long range clouting that he set for himself in the same park two years ago.

The Farmer Finds A Real Champion

Governor Smith's speech on the farm question at Omaha, has set the western prairie on fire with enthusiasm for the Democratic candidate. That in Governor Smith the farmers have at last found a champion who is jumping into the fight for agricultural justice on their side is the keynote of all unbiased comment coming from the Western states.

Governor Smith went to Omaha, in the heart of America's great farming empire, to tell the farmers that he is prepared immediately on election to take the leadership in setting the kind of agricultural legislation they have been vainly demanding from the Republicans for the past eight years. The response to this offer of friendship and action has been electric.

The people who till the soil and supply the nation with its food are now assured that if Governor Smith is elected they will see the standard of "Equality for Agriculture" hoisted to the flagstaff of the White House. They are expressing their enthusiasm in no uncertain terms.

Especially telling has been the contrast drawn between Governor Smith's policies for the farmer and Herbert Hoover's policy of evasion. Hoover's hostility to Agriculture has been well known ever since his days as wartime Food Administrator. Now as Republican candidate he is trying desperately hard to cover up his bad past record, but his heart remains the same as before, and his only plan to solve the problem of the surplus crop is to starve the farmers out until there is no more surplus.

On such cruel and unjust policies, Governor Smith has turned his back. He offers the farmer prosperity and equality through the McNary-Haugen principles and the farmers are showing that they know him now as their best friend and chief hope.

LON CHANEY LEARNED UNDERWORLD DIALECT FILMING THIS STORY

Lon Chaney, "Man of a Thousand Faces," had also to become a man of a thousand strange new words, when he mastered one of the oddest languages in existence—the argot of the New York underworld. In "The Big City," in which he plays a New York gangster leader, he delved deeply into the lore of the underworld, learning the language of crooks and thieves.

The new picture which comes to the Grand Theatre, is a vivid mystery tale of New York's night life, with Marceline Day, James Murray, Betty Compton, and others of note, directed by Tod Browning. Research for the picture included a detailed study of the lore of the underworld.

"The language of the underworld," says Chaney, "is really a language within a language, as there has grown up a sort of slang language that to the layman is incomprehensible."

For instance, he explains, a safe is a "keister," and opening one is "cracking a keister." A "rod" is a revolver; to carry one is to "pack a rod." Nitroglycerin is known as "soup," a safecracker as a "peterman." A gangster's sweetheart is his "moll." If she helps him in crimes she is a "gun moll"; a uniformed policeman is a "flat-top" or "harness bull" and a detective a "dick." A diamond is known as "ice" or a "rock," a pickpocket as a "dip"; a lawyer is a crook's "mouthpiece," and to be in jail is to be "in stir."

In the new picture Chaney plays a gangster leader in a vivid mystery play.

Syd Chaplin Coming in Brilliant Comedy

The confirmed movie fan, the occasional picture-goer and the individual who is finicky about his screen entertainment will all hail with joy the announcement of the Warner Bros. production of Syd Chaplin in "The Fortune Hunter" is to be seen at the Orpheum theatre next Monday for a run of two days.

There is much occasion for the joy. To begin with, Syd Chaplin is such an artist that he is welcome in anything which he elects to be seen and, again "The Fortune Hunter" needs little or no introduction.

As a play this comedy was one of the biggest successes known to the legitimate stage. At one time there were no fewer than 5 companies touring the country in it.

AN AMERICAN CAREER
(Optional Single Column Head)

CHAPTER IX

Smith entered upon his gubernatorial duties soon after the armistice was signed ending the World War. He struck the keynote of his administration in his first message.

"Our hearts go out to the afflicted families who have but the memory of their loved ones, and the sad sight of the returning sick and wounded puts the pang of sorrow in our hearts. Let us, nevertheless, greet the dawn of peace as meaning the end of the black night of conflict that has convulsed practically every civilized nation in the world. The new era that is coming in the United States puts the duty upon our State of blazing the way in the conception of readjustment. The old order of things that means standing by and meeting the situation when it presents itself must at once give place to a policy of initiation, broadness of vision and foresight that will not only hold the position we have inherited in the country's affairs, but will provide for the successful solution of every condition that can arise.

"... In the wake of war, there is much that needs readjustment, and ours is an opportunity for the up-building of the service of the State to the people on permanently progressive lines."

When Smith was elected Governor he received letters of congratulations from old neighbors who settled in every part of the U. S. and even from the Philippine Islands. Commenting upon these letters, he said: "Consult the history of the city, you will find that the lower end of Manhattan was the beginning of the State of New York. At one time practically the whole population of the State lived there.

"It was from the lower part of Manhattan that the adventurous pioneers moved up through the Hudson Valley and out through the Mohawk Valley beyond. That movement has continued ever since. It was particularly strong in my young boyhood and young manhood. Horace Greeley's advice, 'Young man, go West,' still carried force. From the letters I received it appears that the migrants from the old Fourth Ward have contributed something to every community they have settled in."

With Smith in the Governor's chair, a place is reached to insert a statement of his views on the general subject of parties. He says:

"Under our system of government, organized political parties are essential for ascertaining the will of the majority of the people. The medium through which that will is ascertained is a party platform. The party platform is a declaration of political faith and the promise to the people of performance in political office should a majority of the people see fit to approve the platform, endorse the principles of the party, and select its candidates for public office. A platform to compel the confidence of the people must in the first instance be honest. It must be straight-forward, clean-cut, and free from misleading promises susceptible of different interpretations."

In pursuit of this theory, Smith carefully studies every plank in the party platforms at conventions. Nothing is slipped in without his knowledge and understanding. At times he uses his own will against the will of the majority of the politicians of his party, as when he insisted in 1920 on the insertion of a plank on housing and, more recently, joined with Senator Wagner, Franklin Roosevelt, and others in advocating a World Court plank in the platform. As a rule his function has been to see that the planks are sincere and definite, and then that they are lived up to.

Anybody who wishes to undertake such an exercise can find this spirit carried out by comparing the Governor's annual messages to the Legislature with the pledges given in the platform. When he starts to write a message, the platform lies in front of him. He checks what he says with what is in the platform. From this rule he never departs.

In the election of 1920 Smith ran 1,690,929 votes ahead of the presidential ticket, but was defeated. He was succeeded in office January 1, 1921, by Nathan L. Miller, a distinguished lawyer and judge who was and is a favorite of big business Republicans. Miller was looked upon by the financial element as particularly well equipped for the position and they were pleased with his work through his term. Two years later in 1922, after two years in private life, Smith ran against him again, receiving 1,977,657 votes, and was elected by the unprecedented majority of 385,932. After that came a presidential election in 1924. Smith ran against the very popular young Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. Coolidge carried the State by a plurality of 869,262. In spite of this enormous Republican wave, Smith was elected by 108,561. In 1926 the Republicans put against Smith the man they considered their strongest postwar candidate, Representative Ogden L. Mills. Again Smith won, by 247,478 votes.

Smith could never have turned New York from the Republican column into the Democratic if his understanding had been confined to the great city. His triumph would have been impossible had he not comprehended the needs of the smaller cities and the agricultural districts as well as he understood those of the metropolis. It is worth notice that in 1926 Smith's vote in the city fell off, while it increased in cities and counties upstate. When he took his seat on January 1, 1918, he knew what he wanted. He started out with a program which he has pursued with energy up to the present day; some of it is finished; some remains to be finished. It all hangs together, and the people of New York have decided that it is honest, liberal, and sound. He had a series of measures of major importance, and he hammered these measures through the Legislature. When it was necessary he went with convincing appeals directly to the people. Except for the sessions of 1923 and 1924 both the Assembly and the Senate have been Republican. In those two sessions the Senate had a Democratic majority of one, under the leadership of James J. Walker, the present mayor of New York. When Smith was reelected in 1922 Governor Miller sent him a telegram reading, "Evidently the voters prefer your brand of government to mine."

It was a frank way of putting the result. The voters had had Miller for two years giving an intelligent representation of plutocracy. They had to choose and they chose with emphasis.

CHAPTER X

Ordinary politicians think success consists in interfering with the opposing party, so the Governor, though supported by the best men in the Republican party, found himself opposed by the machine. The result was that before the State could be brought to its present condition of modernity and efficiency, four campaigns had to be waged, and many appeals to the electorate had to be made. Perhaps providence had a hand in this delay. The voters have had an education such as perhaps no State has had since the civil war, unless it be the long drill in Wisconsin for many years preceding 1914; and the questions there were much simpler than in New York. Reconstruction work at Albany will be almost completed when Smith lays aside the Governorship. It will be for the people to say whether under other governors the splendid relation between the executive and the people shall continue.

That relation could never have been created had not Smith put party politics into a secondary position, and handled the State as a huge corporation, in which the people's dearest interests are invested. When Colonel Greene was selected to be highway commissioner, he knew nothing whatever about politics, and took no interest in them. Robert Moses, appointed Secretary of State, was a young man of Republican antecedents and practically no political interests, a brilliant student of efficiency in government. In the Labor Department, extremely important in the reconstruction program, the first vacancy was met by the appointment of Miss Frances Perkins, well known in labor legislation; and at a later opportunity Smith made her chairman of the Industrial Board. George V. McLaughlin, appointed by Smith Superintendent of Banks, later in the immeasurably difficult and important post of Police Commissioner of New York City, was one of the very few men to come out of the office with a reputation for high success. As Conservation Commissioner Smith retained the Republican in office; he likewise retained the Republican head of the Bureau of Standards. On the Reconstruction Commission he put Abram L. Elkus, former Ambassador to Turkey, as chairman; Charles H. Sablin, president of the Guaranty Trust Co.; Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the Federal War Industries Board; Dr. Felix Adler, Charles P. Steinmetz, a scientific genius and Socialist; William M. L. Olcott, former Republican District Attorney; Arthur Williams, Republican head of the New York Edison Co.; Michael Friedsam, Republican president of B. Altman and Co.; Mortimer L. Schiff, Republican banker; V. Everett Macy, Republican head of the National Civic Federation; Alfred E. Marling, Republican president of the State Chamber of Commerce; Sarah Conboy and Belle A. Brady, representing New York State Federation of Labor, and others of equal standing and all shades of political opinion. With that straightforwardness we have already noted, the Governor justly declares that all his appointments have been made for merit.

Smith as Governor is something besides a great executive, rising above partisan weakness. He has also been a tower of strength whenever there has come into his field a threat against those traditions of freedom to which he feels so strong a personal debt. The most notorious attack on those traditions bore the name of the Lusk bills, and have become known all over the country as the symbol of intolerance. In the hysteria during which they arose five Assemblymen were thrown out of their seats merely for being Socialists. Smith said: "Although I am unalterably opposed to the fundamental principles of the Socialist party, it is inconceivable that a minority party duly constituted and legally organized should be deprived of its right to expression so long as it has honestly, by lawful methods of education and propaganda, succeeded in securing representation, unless the chosen representatives are unfit as individuals.

Our faith in American democracy is confirmed not only by its results, but by its methods and organs of free expression. They are the safeguards against revolution." The Lusk committee recommended, and the Legislature passed, three bills which the Governor vetoed. Of one, providing special facilities for espionage, he said: "The traditional abhorrence of a free people of all kinds of spies and secret police is valid." Of the bill that would restrict the free thought of teachers, he said: "It limits the teaching staff of the public schools to those only who lack the courage or the mind to exercise their legal right to just criticism of existing institutions." Not only did he veto the bills. He called a special election to enable the people to send back the representatives of whom a panic-stricken Legislature had deprived them.

The same unfrightened belief in freedom breathed in his release of political prisoners, and in his pardons of theoretical cranks such as James Larkin and Benjamin Gitlow. His conception of the range of freedom has steadily been that enunciated in recent cases by Justice Holmes and Brandeis. Watching the workings of the Governor's mind, President Wilson said: "I believe he feels in an unusual degree the impulses and compulsions of the nation's and the world's affairs."

It is because he can sit down and in a friendly way discuss anything, with men from Wall street, from an engineering society, from a Bar Association, from a Trades Union organization, understand them, never be fooled by them but always interested in any just point they have, that this most liberal Governor has nevertheless the confidence of the conservative business men. A confidence such as they seldom give to anybody except their own associates and political servants.

People who attack the Governor's probity, from the beginning of his rise all the way down through Congressmen Mills and the second Theodore Roosevelt to William Allen White and John Roach Straton, invariably break their knuckles; for while Al Smith is tolerant of differences of opinion, he is never in the frame of mind to be charged with immorality. The Hearst papers asserted that New York had a dangerously bad milk supply, and that Smith was responsible for it. Smith not only swept to defeat all who took part in this charge, but he remembered it when the party was trying to induce him to continue in office, at a time when he was inclined to devote himself to business, and thus protect his family and his old age. Strong pressure from party leaders and personal friends was brought to bear on him to run either for Governor or Senator, with Hearst for the other position, and thus to heal a bitter feud. Smith remembered that his old mother in her last delirium had cried out: "My boy did not do it. He was a poor boy. He loves children. He would not feed them poison milk." Smith was like that. He was nominated without Hearst, and it is hard to find anybody, in either party who does not respect him for his unhesitating loyalty to his affections and his self-respect.

In the midst of his executive labor and campaign efforts the Governor, like Lincoln, often solidifies deep thought into short and racy expression. The rather boastful young Roosevelt said: "We put up men who can deliver the goods." The pictures of Daugherty, Fall, Allen Property Custodian Miller, and Forbes of the Veterans' Bureau rose before the mind of Smith, and he replied: "This is the largest mouthful that the Republican candidate has said in the whole course of his campaign. . . . Let us look over the goods for a moment. Let us see just what goods were delivered, and to whom they were delivered."

Congressman Mills said that if elected Governor he would get along with the Legislature like a cooling dove. "The people of New York," Smith replied, "want clear-headed, strong-minded, fighting men at the head of the government, and not doves. Let the doves roost in the eaves of the Capitol, not in the Executive Chamber. So much for the doves; let us pass them up."

Lesson for October 21
CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

LESSON TEXT--II Cor. 8:1-15; 9:6, 7.
GOLDEN TEXT--First gave their own selves to the Lord.
PRIMARY TOPIC--Glad Giving.
JUNIOR TOPIC--Glad Giving.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC--What Is God's Claim on Us?
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC--Principles of Christian Stewardship.

I. Examples of True Christian Benevolence (II Cor. 8:1-5).
The liberality of these Macedonian churches exhibits practically every grand principle and motive which enter into the giving which has God's sanction. Observe:

1. The source of true giving (v. 1).
This is said to be the grace of God, by which is meant that the disposition to give freely of our means is a disposition created by the Holy Spirit. This puts the Christian giving on a much higher plane than that which brings the people under the bondage of the law to give a tenth.

2. They gave from the depths of their poverty, not from the abundance of their riches (v. 2).

Their limited means did not cause them to restrict their gifts, but their deep poverty abounded unto the "riches of their liberality." On the basis of this philosophy our poverty ought to be a call for greater generosity, for God has promised that if we give liberally He will give liberally in return.

3. Their willingness surpassed their ability (v. 3).

God's gifts are reckoned by the degree of willingness, not by the amount given (II Cor. 8:12; 9:7).

If such grace were to come upon the churches today, there would be an abundance of funds to carry on the Lord's work.

4. They were insistent on being allowed the privilege of giving (v. 4).

They did not need to be pressed into giving. How far we have departed from the apostolic method. Today we employ the shrewdest men in financial affairs that can be found to make appeals at our missionary meetings and the dedication of our churches.

5. They first gave themselves to the Lord (v. 5).

This is most fundamental to right giving, for when one gives him- self to the Lord there is no reason for withholding his gifts. If one does not give himself to the Lord there will be the desire to retain as much for self as can be done within the bounds of respectability. The only right method of raising money for the Lord is first to induce men and women to give their lives to the Lord and then to give of their possessions.

II. Emulation of Macedonian Benevolence Urged (II Cor. 8:15).
Moved by the generosity of the Macedonian churches, Paul desired Titus to commend to the Corinthians the same grace. This grace he urged upon them, giving:

1. Not as a command (v. 8). It must be spontaneous--liberal.

2. As a proof of the sincerity of their love (v. 8). Love is more than mere sentiment; it is benevolent action toward the object loved.

3. As the completion and harmony of Christian character (v. 7).

The Corinthian church abounded in spiritual gifts such as faith, utterance, knowledge, diligence, and in love for their ministers. But the grace of liberality was needful for the harmony of their lives.

4. The self-sacrificing example of Christ (v. 9). Self-sacrifice is the test of love.

5. Because the true principles upon which gifts are acceptable with God is a willing mind (v. 10-12). God does not estimate the value of a gift on the ground of its intrinsic worth but the underlying motive of the giver.

6. Because of a common equality (v. 13-15). Every Christian should give something. The law governing the gift is ability.

III. Encouragement to Give (II Cor. 9:6, 7).

1. The volume of reaping is based upon the sowing (v. 6). Those who sow sparingly cannot expect to reap bountifully.

2. There should be a heart purpose (v. 7). This calls for intelligence as to the object of giving.

3. Giving should not be of necessity (v. 7). No particular value attaches to the giver who gives through pressure.

4. God loves a cheerful giver (v. 7). The one who has the right understanding of his responsibility toward God with reference to temporal possessions will regard giving as a glorious privilege.

Carelessly you flip a switch. You wait... one ten thousandth of a second. Then yours is light--heat--power to drive fans, cleaners, refrigerators.

In that fragment of time two hundred intricate electrical arms and brains have carried your command through a maze of channels to the generator at the power house and have returned it as an executed order.

Electricity must be made while you wait that one ten thousandth of a second. And only because men and equipment are constantly alert and on the job are the endless modern demands for electricity met with an abundant supply of power.

You are entitled to a full participation in the advantages which electricity can bring you. It is the aim of the electrical industry to make this possible for everybody in America.

GOVERNOR SMITH AND EDUCATION

A group of distinguished educators, headed by Professor John Dewey of Columbia University, said of Gov. Smith's record on public education:

"His whole attitude on education has been one of foresight and progress. Whether it was the extension and strengthening of the system of special classes for exceptional children or supporting the program for continuation schools, and schools for vocational training or maintaining the standards of state training schools for teachers, he has always been ready to take his position with the most advanced thought on the subject."

He aided and developed by adequate appropriations public education.

Sponsored equal pay for equal work.

Developed Normal Schools for teachers' training. Increasing enrollment from 1,900 in 1919 to 7,783 in 1927.

Increased appropriation for public education from $8,000,000 to $86,347,855.

BIGOTRY

Herbert Hoover regards in silence the most malicious and un-American demonstration in our history: accepting apparently the support of the bigots, the fanatics, the ignorant and the hired slanderers. What would Theodore Roosevelt have done?

Writing to J. C. Martin of Dayton, Ohio, in 1908, Roosevelt, a Republican President, a true American, declared:

"You say the mass of voters will not support a man for office, especially for President of the United States, who is a Roman Catholic. I believe that when you say this you foully slander your countrymen. I do not for one moment believe that the mass of our fellow citizens, or any considerable number of our fellow citizens, can be influenced by such narrow bigotry."

Telephone service,
a public trust

THE widespread ownership of the Bell Telephone System places an obligation on its management to guard the savings of its hundreds of thousands of stockholders.

Its responsibility for so large a part of the country's telephone service imposes an obligation that the service shall always be adequate, dependable and satisfactory to the user.

The only sound policy that will meet these obligations is to continue to furnish the best possible service at the lowest cost consistent with financial safety.

There is then in the Bell System no incentive to earn speculative or large profits. Earnings must be sufficient to assure the best possible service and the financial integrity of the business. Anything in excess of these requirements goes toward extending the service or keeping down the rates.

This is fundamental in the policy of the company.

The Bell System's ideal is the same as that of the public it serves--the most telephone service and the best, at the least cost to the user. It accepts its responsibility for a nation-wide telephone service as a public trust.

Mrs. Sarah M. Owen
Passes Away at Paducah

Paducah, Ky. Oct. 12
Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah M. Owen, 81, a resident of Paducah, who died from a complication of diseases Thursday morning, Oct. 11, at her home, 1010 Harrison street, will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the residence, with interment in Oak Grove cemetery. The services will be conducted by the Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of the Broadway Methodist church, and the Rev. Andrew Goforth, pastor of the Fountain Avenue Methodist church.

Surviving her are two sons, C. W. Owen, of Tampa Fla., and J. J. Owen, of Fulton, three daughters, Mrs. Buchanan and Mrs. Jones, both of Kevil, and Miss Cappy Owen, of Paducah, also a brother, Bob Hart, of Detroit.

Grandsons of Mrs. Owen will be the pallbearers. They are Tully Owen, Horace Owen, Richard Jones, Owen Jones, Harold Owen, Vernon Owen, Jeff Buchanan and Elgie Buchanan. Paducah News-Democrat.

Hickman News

The cotton crop in this county is now opening at a good rate. The crop will not yield more than 50 per cent of an average, due in part to the June rains, but largely to the deterioration that has shown up within the last six weeks. This deterioration was caused by the drouth of late summer, followed by the exceedingly cool spell in September, at which time there was frost in some sections. The prospects today are not nearly as good as they were six weeks ago.

R. G. Cotton, the 12-year-old son of Will Cotton and wife, south of town, is recovering from injuries suffered in an automobile accident Sunday night when he was struck by a car driven by Harry Gildewell. The boy was returning from church and three cars coming toward him blinded him so that he became confused in the road in front of the church. The Gildewell car ran over him, then stopping suddenly, backed up on him, badly injuring him. No bones were broken but he was seriously bruised and cut.

Miss Myrtle Jackson, the new home agent for Fulton county, has made arrangements for Miss Zelma Monroe, assistant state leader to conduct a training school for the officers of the Fulton county Homemakers clubs in this city next Wednesday. The meeting will be held in the American Legion hall.

Miss Jackson has been completing Homemakers clubs all over the county, with one in every vicinity, and the officers of all the clubs will attend the meeting Wednesday, then in turn they will demonstrate to their clubs the work shown by Miss Jackson.

News has been received here of the death of Dr. Cassius Lee Price, 56 years old, former rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church of Hickman, and later rector of Trinity Episcopal church at Florence, Ala. Dr. Price was found dead in bed. He lived here a number of years early in his ministry and was well known to all the old residents of the city. He was head of the City Beautiful club, a member of the Exchange club, and Superintendent of Parks at Florence, and considered by many the outstanding citizen of that city. He resigned as rector in 1925 because of bad health. He is survived by his wife, one son and three daughters.

MAKING FOOD HEADWAY ON STREET IMPROVEMENT WORK

Work on the street improvement project is now progressing rapidly and with fair weather conditions, all West Fulton streets will be completed in short order. Large crews are at work. Fourth street is finished and open to traffic. Third street is completed and will soon be open to traffic. Practically all curb and gutters are finished on the West side and every effort will be made by the contractors to finish pouring concrete before freezing weather sets in. It is a wonderful improvement and Fulton can soon boast of having the best streets in Western Kentucky. It is hardly probable that the entire contract will be completed this year but a good start will be made before cold weather halts the work.

THRILLING BALL GAME

A large crowd of Fulton fans attended the ball game in Paducah Sunday between the Fulton Leaguers and Paducah Hooks. It is said to have been the best game witnessed in Western Kentucky this season, and ended in a score of 4 to 4 in nine frames, when the game was called on account of darkness. Simons, playing with Fulton, smacked one over the garden wall for a homer, and Weaver, pitching for Fulton, had 17 strikeouts to his credit. We understand the same line up will play in Fulton, Sunday, when the game ended.

Community Building

Schedule of Odd Jobs Will Help Home Owner

It is a good thing to have a monthly schedule of repairs for the home, so that the various odd jobs can be anticipated and done in the proper season. A midwinter blizzard is no time to patch a leaking roof, nor is the fly period suitable for repairing screens. There is also the point of service and economy in buying equipment, as a heating plant in the off-season, and likewise in hiring certain work to be done.

The following schedule of odd jobs and repairs for the summer and fall, which may be modified to suit local conditions, is recommended by John R. McMahon, a national authority on home ownership, in Popular Science Monthly.

July: Make thorough repairs on the roof. Replace all missing or rotted shingles and stop leaks. Inspect gutters and leaders for patching, painting or replacement.

August: A good time for excavations of any kind. If foundations or cellar walls need tarring or cement plaster, do it now. All kinds of general building can be done without much need for weather protection.

September: If a new heating plant is needed install it now. Apply weather stripping. Renew floors. Fix up the coal bin and put in a supply of winter fuel.

October: Get the heating plant ready to fire up. Clean chimney from the roof down. Point up loose bricks with cement. Connect furnace smoke pipe—new if required.

November: Take down screens and screen doors. Rake up leaves around the house. Start furnace.

Mistakes in Building

One's Home Are Costly

All normal men and women plan, some day, to have a home of their own; a place with trees, flowers, a garden; a home for the children. But most people building their first house usually make mistakes that can be avoided. An architect, in an article on home-building in Liberty Magazine, says: "Most architects make a mess of the first house they build for themselves. I made one of mine. I was fished about it so much that I decided to let a few of the wife's wishes prevail in my next one—there was bound to be a next one, for the mistakes in the first were too accusing. Instead of going at the job from a running jump the next time, I'd take counsel with my wife all the way through. No building again in a valley, with its wet mornings when the hill tops were bathed in sunlight. No western exposures, with their sun-baked rooms. No more scourge of mosquitoes. No laboring uphill through snow and slush on my way to work—that was a job in itself. No, in our new home we'd eliminate most of these bugbears. We'd live on a hill!"

Standardized Cities

Fifty years from now the traveler in America will be impressed with the similarity in general plan and appearance of American cities. This has been made certain by the passage of zoning ordinances in practically every important center of population in the United States. Latest figures by the Department of Commerce indicate more than half of the urban population live in zoned cities and towns. In 1916 only a tenth resided in communities where zoning ordinances governed building activities and city development. The number of zoned cities increased from 6 in 1916 to 73 in 1921, 265 in 1923 and 425 in 1925. Grouped according to population, 47 of the 68 largest cities in the United States having over 100,000 population and 150 of the 287 cities and towns having over 25,000 population have zoning ordinances in effect.—Lincoln Star.

Rose-Trellis Worth While

An alluring little rose-trellis is a fascinating adjunct to any country or suburban home, or, in fact, any home that is not cramped for space. Even the amateur carpenter can construct an article like this, since it is little more than an arch over a seat. The arch is made of lathes work so that a climbing vine may find a firm hold. A back of open wood-work for the seat is in keeping with the airy nature of the trellis. The whole should be painted either white or green. White is the more effective as a background for the greenery of the vines and the bright color of the pink or red roses. A comparatively small space will provide room for this bower.

Cities With Zoning Laws

Half the urban population of the United States live in cities that have been laid out or rebuilt to comply with modern principles of zoning, according to a communication from the United States Department of Commerce. The number of cities zoned at the present time is 436, the communication states. In 1915 only six cities of the country had zoning laws or ordinances. Cleveland is one of the cities in which the zoning and planning commission is working out a special program.

School Notes

Last Tuesday morning the chapel program was conducted by Nedra Marlin, Montez Winstead and Joseph Williams, each of whom rendered some enjoyable musical numbers.

Mr. Perry, the Harmonica King, gave a very interesting program for chapel on Wednesday, playing a harmonica, and a small, eight-noted, French Harp. The annual Student Inauguration was held on Thursday of last week. The program was sponsored by the Piano club and the following numbers were well rendered: Minuet (Paderewski) played by Elva Davis.

"Lucindy Talks Over the Phone" — Erin Brock.

"Midsummer Night's Dream" played by Nedra Marlin.

Cornelius Edwards, then, making a short opening address, introduced the President, Talbert Sawyer, who, with well chosen words, expressed his gratitude to the student body, and pledged his support in all issues of the coming year. The President was escorted to the platform by the Presidents of the various classes, and organizations of the high school.

Mr. Swann made a very interesting talk Monday, on the subject of "Birds and Bees." He told of their customs and characteristics and how they live.

The Bulldogs scored a brilliant victory for Fulton High, Friday, against McKenzie. The score was 31-0. A touchdown was made by the Bulldogs in the first two minutes.

This Friday Madisonville will play against Fulton here. Our team is in fine shape and we have great hopes for victory in the game.

Mr. Aubrey Nugent was the speaker on the chapel program Tuesday. The subject of his talk was "Contentment," and he told how, all about us, are opportunities and diamonds of contentment, if we only look for them.

The game of Volley Ball has been introduced in the high school, the equipment having arrived Tuesday. This promises to be a source of much pleasure and affords splendid opportunity for the students to get exercise.

Gov. Smith Says---

The way he wants to relieve the farmer is to destroy him.

Mr. Hoover, as the chief adviser of the last two administrations, upon the subject of agriculture, assumed a direct responsibility for the hostility and inaction of the Administration, and continues to assume the responsibility by his fulsome endorsement of the record of Coolidge policies.

"Do you believe that liquor is the great issue of this campaign?" I certainly do not.

The absolute separation of state and church is part of the fundamental basis of our Constitution. I believe in that separation and in all that it implies.

I can think of no greater disaster to this country than to have the voters of it divided upon religious lines.

If there is any citizen of this country who believes that I can promote its welfare, that I am capable of steering the ship of state safely through the next four years, and then votes against me because of my religion, he is not a real, pure, genuine American.

Rye Will Make Fair to Good Grade of Silage

Rye when cut in the flower or early dough stage will make a fair to good grade of silage. The silage is liable to be rather strong smelling and is liable to taint the milk, although this can be largely overcome by feeding the silage directly after milking rather than before. Care will also have to be exercised that the mangers are well cleaned out and the silo is cut off from the barn as otherwise the odor in the barn itself may be taken up by the milk during milking time. One investigation indicated that rye silage was about 10 per cent less valuable for milk production than was corn silage. It is, perhaps, not quite as palatable as corn silage and has not been largely used for silage.

A Change of Thought.

When you get a little time for reflection, what do you think about? Probably along some of the following lines: The injustice that appears to prevail the world. Political corruption that is apparent from congressional investigations. How some of the people of your acquaintance are able to do it and still make both ends meet. The disregard for law that on the surface, seem to be growing. Murders, robberies, divorces scandals and similar evils.

There are some of the multitudinous thoughts that come to the average person, with their long trail of dissatisfaction and disgust.

This is the black side—the unusual side of life that gets into print. The usual, commonplace things are too often overlooked. Try a change of thought and see if it isn't beneficial. Think of some way of building up the home life and making it more attractive.

Devising some way to exercise a greater amount of supervision over the children and to be of assistance to the school teacher who labors diligently that they may grow up to be decent and respectable men and women.

Make a special effort to be a booster for everything at home, instead of a critic. Thoughts frequently come unbidden, but it is not difficult to divert them along wholesome lines.

Give this recipe for peace of mind a trial and see if it does not benefit you as well as those about you.

Found in Each Community

The citizen who stands on the street corner, with his hands stuffed down in his pocket, his shoulders stooped and a sneer on his face, is of no value to any community.

He is the fellow who says the fire department doesn't know how to fight a fire and tells how it ought to be done. But he never lends a hand.

He is the fellow who complains about the ruts in the street but he hasn't paid any taxes for years and, of course doesn't help keep them in condition.

He is the fellow who finds fault with the public schools and the teachers, but never did anything in his life to improve the schools.

He is the fellow who condemns everything and sees no good in anything.

You all know him and his type. The sooner he leaves us, the sooner we will be able to move forward.

Contrast him with the citizen who is a booster and be counted on to help every worthy cause.

This type of citizens pays his debts and his taxes, stands for everything that is for the betterment of the place where he lives and never allows his enthusiasm for his hometown to lag.

He is an asset to any community. It is men of his class who are responsible for all of the improvements that are made. We owe it to him that we have as good streets as we do, that our school system is as modern as it is and that we live in a place that we can boast of to our friends.

Classify yourself and see which class you belong to, which type you can match. If you belong to the former, its time for rejuvenation. If you belong to the latter, more power to you.

Fulton Team Beats McKenzie, Tenn., 32-0

The Fulton Bulldogs ran rough shod over the McKenzie, Tenn., high school eleven here last week to score a 32 to 0 victory. It was a fast game and the Fulton backs furnished many thrills with long runs. The entire Fulton team showed a big improvement over its previous games. Binford scored two touchdowns and the other three were accounted for by Chapman, Williamson and Holloway. The second team faced McKenzie during most of the second half.

Railroad News

The average freight train in 1927 carried 778 tons of freight—the highest on record—compared with 708 tons in 1920.

Good railway service at reasonable rates enables fruit and vegetable growers in every agricultural state of the Union to compete in the great consuming centers. Last year Chicago obtained its supply of fruit and vegetables from 43 states; New York, Detroit and St. Louis from 41 states; Cleveland from 45 states; Boston, Jacksonville and Indianapolis from 40 states; Louisville, Cincinnati and Minneapolis from 39 states; and Birmingham, Toledo and New Orleans from 38 states.

The Illinois Central System spent $69,000,000 last year for the upkeep of tracks, buildings, bridges, locomotives, cars and other property.

Louisiana and Arkansas produce approximately two-thirds of the nation's rice. Last year Louisiana produced 17,316,000 bushels, and Arkansas produced 7,438,000 bushels of the nation's 40,000,000-bushel crop.

More than 6 cents out of every dollar which the railroads receive from their transportation operations go for taxes. Railway taxes in the U. S. now exceed $1,000,000 a day.

The orchards of Illinois supplied 1,968 carloads of apples to 40 large markets last year. The distribution extended as far east as Boston, Mass., as far south as Tampa, Fla., and New Orleans, and as far west as Denver, Colo., and San Antonio, Texas. The Chicago market took 828 carloads.

The average railway locomotive now in use is more than 1/2 again as powerful as the average locomotive of 1911.

In the last 6 years the railroads of the U. S. have spent $4,768,000,000 for improvements. This is approximately $40 for every man, woman and child in the country.
