THE LISTENING POST

For the past few days I have heard the cheerful chirp of a cricket about my home. Never have I been particularly superstitious, and indeed, I have heard it said that a cricket is supposed to bring good luck and happiness to a family. On the contrary, I have also heard that the sound of a cricket presages some sort of bad luck. Personally I have never been a great believer in luck, one way or the other. There is a bit of the old time predestination belief in me, and I do not waste a great deal of time thinking about luck one way or the other. I merely know that I will have some good luck and some bad luck, some sorrow and some joy, and signs have little to do with it.

There is something about the sound of a cricket, however, which is more or less cheerful. It occurs to me that the chirp of a cricket is heard only in houses "which have had a heap of living" in them. I never heard a cricket in a brand new house. This sound is always heard in a house which has weathered the storms of many a winter and the searing heat of many a summer. Only by time can a house become a home, and to me the sound of a cricket suggests a house which has aged enough to become a home. Such a house has heard the prattle of little children, and the deepening voices of boys who are becoming men. It has seen gatherings of young and old, its floor boards have creaked to the passing of many feet. Perhaps sorrow has been there, and certainly a lot of joy. All of these things go into a house and transform that house into a home.

The sound of this cricket did another thing for me. It woke to pleasant life a vagrant memory which for many years has been dormant. I remembered myself when I was a youngster, just emerging into adolescence; when I was beginning to read the Henty books. I was also just beginning to work at the printing trade. It was at Hickman and I was working sixty hours a week for five dollars, and when Saturday night came I felt like a real vacation had come. I was tired, but not unduly so, and knew that I could sleep late the next morning. There was a book store in the little river town, owned by Fred Berendes, and I had discovered that Henty books could be bought there for a quarter. That was in winter and it was a cold winter, too. The wind can certainly blow cold off that old river, and a warm room is something to be cherished at such times.

For weeks during the winter I bought a new Henty book every Saturday night. Going home, I would make a fire in the spare room, in order not to disturb the family, and tell the others I would read late. Curled up in front of a warm fire, with the wintry wind rattling that old parsonage, which still stands just at the rear of the Baptist Church, I would read that book completely that night. At times I might read until two o'clock in the morning, and only a few times did I fail to read a complete book in one night. Then I would practically fall out of my clothes, grope my way to the bed, and fall into the sleep that only youth knows.

Inside that old and worn room there was always a cricket during the winter. As I read hour after hour, that cricket seemed to be talking to me. I never knew where he was hidden behind the walls, and as matter of fact, I never saw a cricket in my life. I have no idea what shape or color or size a cricket may be. I only know that I have heard them in the quiet hours of the night in many old and worn houses, and there is something about their chirping which is at once cheerful and heartening. They seem to be really a part of a home.

10 Are Killed As Airliner Hits Mountain

Failure Of Range Or Radio Beam Is Blamed For Crash

Salt Lake City, —A United Airlines plane, lost in a blinding snowstorm, crashed into a mountainside today killing its 10 occupants.

S. V. Hall, Ual vice president in charge of western operations, said "it looks very much as if the accident was caused by a failure of the range or radio beam."

Hall said the range was reported "O. K." at 4:24 a. m. but that it evidently failed about the time the San Francisco to Salt Lake plane, piloted by Capt. Howard Fey of Oakland, approached Salt Lake.

All indications were that the pilots had no forewarning of their danger. The passengers' safety belts apparently were not fastened.

Wheels Retracted Although the wheels were torn away, evidence showed that the landing gear was retracted at the time of the accident.

The transport radioed about 4:40 a. m. that it was 8,000 feet over Layton, 25 miles north of Salt Lake City, and was heading for the airport here.

Further efforts to contact the plane were futile. Shortly before noon, Ual pilot Williams Haws sighted the wreckage from the air.

The wreckage were strewn over a wide area about three miles northeast of Centerville, 10 miles north of Salt Lake City. The Wasatch mountains tower to 7,000 feet at that area.

Ground parties struggled through foot-deep snow and tangled underbrush to reach the scene.

Bodies In Jumble Bodies of the passengers and stewardess were piled in a jumble at the front of the cabin.

The nose of the plane, which struck in a grove of scrub oak 2550 feet from the top of a ridge and bounced or skidded another 40 feet up the 25-degree slope, was broken away in the crash, exposing the control compartment and leaving in it a mass of twisted instruments.

Both Fey and Thomas E. Sandegren, first officer, still strapped to their seats, were thrown 20 feet in front of the wreck.

The plane's left wing was bent back against the fuselage, sheared from the body, and both motors were torn away.

ARMY USING COMFORTERS LIKE GRANDMA MADE

Fort F. E. Warren, Wyo. —The Army is sleeping in comforters. They're modeled after the soft, cotton type Grandma used to make, and will supplement the two all-wool olive-drab blankets that have been scratching Uncle Sam's soldiers for nobody knows how long.

Two Boys Rig Up Diving Device From Discarded Water Tank

Salt Lake City. —Good swimmers both, George Hansen and Roland Heppner, each 15, thrilled by Jules Verne's "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," and decided to rig up something that would permit them to walk around under water.

They located a discarded hot water tank. The owner wanted $2 but they made a dicker to clean up his garden. A machinist reduced it to head size, cut out a window and rests for the shoulders.

Seal Glass Into Window The boys then sealed a plate of flexible glass into the window, riveted rubber tubing around the rough edges, attached a length of garden hose, and were ready for a test.

On the first trial, in a swimming pool, the helmet floated away when filled with air from a tire pump. So they fastened on fifteen pounds of lead. Their problem was solved.

Successful in the pools, the boys moved to nearby lakes and their fun began. They began, also, to get cash business. While they have not yet ventured more than fifteen feet below the surface, they have recovered several fishing outfits.

Feel Air Bubbles Out The gadget is practically fool proof. Foul air bubbles out through the open bottom. If anything should go wrong, all the wearer has to do is duck out and rise to the surface.

The biggest thrill young Hansen has had so far came while walking around in Utah Lake.

"Those big carp," he related, "keep nosing around your head, peering at you through the porthole. Of course, they're much more afraid of you than you are of them, but just the same it's a funny sensation to suddenly see one of those big fellows giving you the once over."

Book Tells School Aid To Defense

Frankfort, Ky. —The aid schools can give the national defense program was described Monday in a bulletin issued by the State Committee on Education and National Defense which recently met here.

The bulletin declared the schools can contribute to military preparation by developing "sound program of health and physical education," to economic preparation by vocational courses and to morale by teaching the value of democracy.

In a letter accompanying the suggestions, Superintendent of Public Instruction John W. Brook said the State committee felt that "local needs and conditions will determine the best program of action" in the various communities.

FILES SUIT TO CONTEST WILL OF E. K. BECK

Union City, —Mrs. Mary Beck has filed suit in the county court contesting the will of her late husband, E. K. Beck. The suit was filed, on behalf of herself and of her daughter, Bette Beck, by Attorney John M. Drane of Newbern, and Lannom and Nailling of Union City.

In the suit "the petitioner charges that the said instrument admitted to probate by the aforesaid court is not the will of Embrey K. Beck, deceased, because he was of unsound mind at the time of said paper writing and was therefore incompetent to make a valid will, and moreover, he, Embrey K. Beck, was unduly influenced to make said will by several or all of his aforesaid sisters and brothers who are legatees and devisees under the will."

Army Streamline Office Work With Punched Card Machines

Washington, —The Army is turning over to high speed electric machines the job of keeping individual tabs on the million men expected to be in uniform by spring.

Complex punch card machinery already has displaced clerks in the Adjutant General's office, and is to be installed at important military posts.

Punched Cards Used By means of special cards, with holes punched in appropriate positions, this machinery will keep up-to-the-minute records on both personnel and material, assuring that the soldier will get his pay, receive mail from home properly, and be assigned work for which he is best fitted.

Officials said the new system would take from the shoulders of troops in the field a great part of the burden of paper work which has been an onerous chore to military forces in the past.

"Snowflakes" Recalled In the World War, the Army was almost snowed under by little white and blue slips of paper recording each change in the status of soldiers. The slips became known as "snowflakes."

The Navy, too, is streamlining its paper work. Secretary Knox has put a force of business efficiency specialists to work on the record system at the Navy Department.

Control Of House May Be Decided In Vote Tuesday

Washington, —The big question mark hanging over the Senate and House elections tomorrow is: Will the Democrats retain control of the House or will the Republicans take it over for the first time since 1929? Both parties claimed to know the right answer.

Rep. Drewry of Virginia, chairman of the House Democratic campaign committee, predicted today there would be "very little net change" in the House membership. Claiming a possible net gain as high as 15 seats, he asserted House Democrats would come out of the election with an "absolute safe majority."

On the other hand, Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, House Republican leader and national committee head, forecast a net gain of from 60 to 75 seats with only 48 needed for a Republican majority of 218 of the total membership of 435. Martin probably would become speaker if his party should win the House.

Senate Thought Safe The Democratic majority in the Senate is considered safe. To gain control in that branch—49 seats—Republicans first would have to keep their present strength unimpaired at 24 seats by holding the 8 of those seats contested for tomorrow and then they would have to win either all the 25 Democratic seats at stake, or 23 of the Democratic seats plus the single Farmer-Labor and Progressive memberships.

Five of the Democratic seats to be voted on are in the "solid south" and holders of two of these—Senators Charles O. Andrews and of Florida, and Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi—have no opposition.

Army Housing Is Promised On Schedule

Washington, —Maj. M. B. Birdseye, War Department construction executive, predicted Monday that all the Army's troop housing projects will be completed "on schedule" and said new production plants are "progressing with remarkable speed."

In an address before the Washington Building Congress, Birdseye said the department's building program calls for expenditure of $1,147,000,000 and constitutes "by far the largest undertaking of its kind ever launched in time of peace by Government or private funds."

Outlay For Arms Will Hit Peak Late In 1941—Gains Are Steady

New York, —The defense-stimulated business upswing has entered the seventh month of rising factory output and yet the full force of United States and British arms spending probably won't be felt until well along in 1941.

Army and Navy expenditures, running at the rate of about $150,000,000 monthly before the present industrial advance began, have climbed to nearly $300,000,000 or more a month by next summer.

Much of the autumn increase in factory activity appears to have stemmed from forward buying by manufacturers and dealers to build reserve supplies of raw materials and tide off defense spending rolls.

As soon as the Administration disclosed plans for stepping up the arms expenditures last spring, the second big war-time wave of in-

Outbursts Of Oratory Precede Test

25 Senators, 432 Congressmen Will Be Chosen Today

By the votes, America will settle the great third term question today and decide whether Franklin D. Roosevelt or Wendell L. Willkie will occupy the White House in the four years just ahead.

Some 50,000,000 citizens, by all indications, are expected to crowd the polling places. This would be a record number, attesting the nation's unusually intense interest in the outcome of a hotly contested campaign.

In addition to a President and vice president, 35 members of the Senate will be chosen together with 432 members of the House of Representatives and state and local officials by the hundreds.

The campaign came to a bustling conclusion last night in an outpouring of oratory that loaded the air waves for several successive hours. Final appeals to the electorate from both Willkie and Roosevelt as well as addresses by the vice presidential candidates, Charles L. McNary and Henry A. Wallace.

FDR's Last Campaign For President Roosevelt, the day before election saw him making a series of informal addresses in the course of a motor tour along the Hudson river in New York.

At Beacon, N. Y., Mr. Roosevelt told a crowd that this was the last time he would be visiting them as "a candidate for office." This, he said, was "not a campaign speech but a visit of sentiment."

In New York City Willkie, having pledged himself to propose an anti-third term amendment to the Constitution if he is elected, issued a statement urging that all who have the privilege cast their votes.

"Despite last minute rumors which counsels of desperation spread about me to mislead voters, I repeat now what I said to the convention at Philadelphia immediately following my nomination," he said.

No Harmful Pledges "I stand before you without a single pledge, promise or understanding except for the advancement of your cause and the preservation of American democracy."

Editorial

OLD FIGURES ARE INTERESTING

It is interesting to look back at other elections for the Presidency and note the ever increasing number of voters, and also some of the odd results which have come about because the popular vote is not used to elect a President. Three times in the history of the Republic since 1860 the man who received the largest popular vote has failed to win the electoral vote. All of these losers were Democrats, and the years 1876, 1880 and 1888 marked these peculiar results. In the first one quite a dispute ensued which for a time threatened grave results. To this day many students of history are quite prepared to say that Tilden was robbed of the Presidency.

In 1876 Hayes was the Republican candidate against Tilden, the Democrat. The popular vote was 4,036,298 for the Republican nominee, while Tilden received nearly 300,000 more votes than that. Yet when the issue was finally decided Hayes was given 185 electoral votes, while Tilden was beaten when he could secure only 164. That was perhaps the closest Presidential election in the history of the United States and its bitterness lasted for many years.

The following year Garfield was pitted against Hancock, and the popular vote for Garfield was 4,454,416, while Hancock surged ahead of that mark with 4,851,981; almost 400,000 more votes than the Republican nominee received. Yet when the electoral college finished balloting Garfield had 214, while Hancock had only 155. For the second straight time the Democrats had won the election by popular vote, but lost by the electoral vote. Democrats were still swearing they had been robbed in the Hayes-Tilden contest when the year 1884 rolled around and this time the strong Democratic tide finally rolled itself into the electoral college. Curiously, however, when Grover Cleveland was elected he barely won by the popular vote, but had a lead of 37 electoral votes.

The popular vote in that year was 4,874,986 for Cleveland, and 4,851,981 for Blaine. Pivotal states, with large electoral votes, turned the tide for Cleveland, and with a lead of only 23,000 in the popular vote, he was elected, whereas the two preceding Democratic candidates had failed to win with a lead in this respect of three and four hundred thousand respectively.

Then, in 1888, running for reelection, Cleveland held a lead of slightly more than one hundred thousand votes, yet lost in the electoral college 233 to 168. The popular vote in that year was Harrison, 5,439,986, Cleveland 5,501,309. This marked the first time the vote had passed the five million mark for any nominee, and both crossed the line the same year. Cleveland came back in 1892 to swamp Harrison by half a million votes, the electoral vote being 277 to 145 in his favor. Cleveland's popular vote was pushing towards the six million mark that year.

However, the vote did not stop on six million, for 1896 McKinley pushed past the six million mark to swamp Bryan by 600,000 popular votes. Only once since then has a winner dipped below seven million. In 1912 Wilson polled a little more than six million, but the total vote of Theodore Roose-

ONE JUMP AHEAD

American industry in general is setting not only a record of fine patriotism but one of far-sightedness in the present national defense program.

Other groups might well learn some valuable lessons from industry's sane approach to the whole broad problem.

One recent example comes naturally to mind. It is the action of a subcommittee of the Employment Relations Committee of the National Association of Manufacturers, which after careful study has submitted certain proposals concerning defense work to the Board of Directors and to the nearly 8,000 members of the Association.

The proposals deal with alien employees in defense industries, with drafted employees and with the new workers who replace them, and with espionage and sabotage. They are notable for the fact that they steer far clear of "alien-baiting" without at the same time losing sight of the realities this country must face in the line of possible sabotage and espionage activities by foreign agents.

The N. A. M. group in particular suggests that alien employees should be "encouraged and assisted" to become citizens; that there should be no fingerprinting of employees except as requested or required by the government prohibits employment of aliens because of the confidential nature of the work in progress, particular thought should be given to shifting present alien employees to other jobs.

These problems are ones that this country will soon be forced to face.—Dyersburg State-Gazette.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Twenty-five miles of electric lines are being constructed in Rockcastle county.

Several Trimble county farmers spent a day in Indiana studying cooperative sale of creamery products.

In Grant county, an unprecedented amount of rye grass is being seeded as cover crop.

Fifty-nine farm men and women made entries in gardening at the Kenton county fair.

Seventy-eight miles of rural electric lines will be built at once in Whitley county.

Carlisle county farmers have used 3,000 tons of limestone and 200 tons of superphosphate during the past eight months.

Ballard county's Burley crop, almost entirely housed during August, is reported to be one of the best ever grown in that county.

Many Grayson county farmers attended a beef cattle tour, paying special attention to 4-H calves.

vent and President Taft was past seven million. In 1936 an all time high was set, with President Roosevelt receiving almost twenty seven and a half million votes, and Landon just under seventeen million. More than 44 million votes was cast in that contest, and it is believed that this record may be shattered in the voting today, with perhaps fifty million votes being cast.

Is there any wonder that we, who are at peace in a land of plenty, should pause one or even two days each year and proclaim a day of Thanksgiving. No doubt the nations at war in Europe look with envy upon America as she stands alone in the world today. For American citizens are free; we have an abundance of food, and may come and go as we please.

The big Dornier 215 was seen above the clouds over Essex by two Hurricane pilots, who fired machine gun bursts. With one engine stopped and smoke pouring out the plane started down.

South Fulton To Play Last Home Game Tonight Against U. T. Frosh

In their last home game of the season, Coach Jess Haynes' Red Devils will meet the strong University of Tennessee Junior college freshman at Southside tonight, the game being called at 8 o'clock. South Fulton has one more game scheduled this season, it being at Mounds, Ill., on Nov. 15.

The game tonight promises to be one of the best six-man games seen here this year, with a strong freshman team from the U. T. furnishing tough opposition to South Fulton's clean slate. Several of the players on the college team have been playing regular 11-men football all season and are well qualified to give South Fulton some stiff competition.

Coach Haynes has replaced Malhard, regular fullback, by Irvin. He states that this team is in fine shape for the tilt tonight. Four of the six regulars on this year's unbeaten team will be lost by graduation and tonight will be the last time that McKinney, Parham, Buchanan and Irvin will see action on the home field. All four are good players and have done lots toward keeping South Fulton's record perfect for the season. Only Luther and Dyer will be on the team next year.

If South Fulton can conquer Martin's team tonight, things look well toward a 100 pct. season, as the Red Devils have already defeated the Mounds team once this year by a top-heavy margin.

Probable starting lineup for tonight's game will be:

McKinney—LE.
Parham—C.
Buchanan—RE.
Dyer—QB.
Luther—HB.
Irvin—FB.

Vote Fund Probe By U. S. Summons Records Of Banks

Philadelphia, —Subpoenas for the records of twenty banks in the Philadelphia area were issued Monday by a Federal grand jury investigating charges of election and registration irregularities in Eastern Pennsylvania.

The banks were directed to produce the records at 10 a. m. Wednesday the day after the election—and show all payments of $2,500 or more to "any committee of group or representative thereof."

The subpoenas were drawn by Assistant United States Attorney James P. McCormick and went to banks in Philadelphia and four nearby counties.

The American Institute of Laundering said that the American habit of "doodling" on table linens at the thousands of campaign luncheons and in restaurants was the chief reason for the increase in laundry business.

Foe Of N. R. A. Loses Fight On Job Tax

Harrisburg, Penn., — Fred M. Perkins, York, Penn., battery manufacturer who once gained national prominence by defying the National Recovery Act, was overruled Monday by the Dauphin County Court in a move to upset the Unemployment Compensation Act.

Judge William M. Hargest held the court "had no power to consider" the manner and operation of the four-year-old statute and the size of the revenue provided under it. These questions, the judge said, are for the Legislature to decide.

Perkins objected to paying $222.61 in the 2.7 per cent wage tax claimed by the State, arguing it was a "surrender" of Pennsylvania's rights because the Federal Government had taken custody over a $120,000,000 trust fund accumulated from social security taxes.

Roosevelt Spikes Report Pensions Are In Danger

Hyde Park, N. Y., —President Roosevelt said in a statement Monday that he was informed circulars had been distributed saying legislation pending in Congress would deprive State, municipal or county employees, or school teachers of their pensions.

"This is another unethical and deliberate misrepresentation of fact similar to the last minute effort in 1936 to scare the employees as to the validity of their social insurance," the President declared. "That failed—this will fail," he said.

No Federal law, his statement added, will threaten or endanger the pensions, and "this applies to all States."

Vatican City, —Pope Pius XII. is determined to remain in the Vatican despite new air raid alarms in Rome, it was reported unofficially Monday.

A Vatican source said the Pope probably would protest if Rome is bombed because of the many valuable church properties in the city.

It was said that the Pontiff finally has agreed for work to proceed on a personal shelter.

Ninety tons of steel are being used in the shelter, which will have its own heating and light plants, a small bedroom, library, kitchenette and a prayer corner. Also, it will be built so it might be hermetically sealed against gas.
