Outbursts Of Oratory Precede Test

25 Senators, 423 Congressmen Will Be Chosen Today

By the vote, America will settle the great third term question today and decide whether Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was elected President for his second term in 1936, should stay in the White House for another four years.

Some 800,000 citizens, by all indications, are preparing to vote today. This would bring the total voter turnout to a little over 70 percent and would certainly show that the nation's interest is intense in the outcome of a hotly contended campaign.

It is expected that a President and vice-president, 58 members of the Senate and 435 members of the House of Representatives will be chosen.

Surviving are the 89 men, their wives, and 3,915 women.

For President Roosevelt, the day will be one of triumph or defeat, depending upon the outcome of 81,636 for clothing, owned a Fifth of the time he had

Two Boys Dig Up Diving Device From Discarded Water Tank

Belleville, Ill.—Two 14-year-old boys, Donald Hoagland and Joseph Lumley, were digging a discarded water tank in a field near this town when they found a device used for underwater fishing.

"It took us about half an hour to dig the tank out of the ground," said Hoagland. "We found a device used for underwater fishing that we thought might be of use to someone."
It is interesting to look back at other elections for the Presidency and note the ever increasing numbers of voters, and also some of the odd results which have come about because the popular vote is not used to elect a President. Three times in the history of the Republic since 1860 the man who received the largest popular vote has failed to win the electoral vote. All of these losers were Democrats, and the years, 1876, 1880 and 1888 marked these peculiar results. In the first one quite a dispute ensued which for a time threatened grave results. To this day many students of history quote this problem to say that Tilden was robbed of the Presidency.

In 1876 Hayes was the Republican candidate against Tilden, in whom the voters were divided. The popular vote was 4,056,280 for the Republican nominee, while Tilden received nearly 300,000 more votes than that. Yet when the issue was finally decided Hayes was given 185 electoral votes, while Tilden was beaten when he could secure only 199. This was perhaps the closest Presidential election in the history of the United States, and its bitterness lasted for many years.

The following year Garfield was pitted against Hancock, and the total vote for Garfield was 4,454,418, while Hancock surged ahead of that mark with 4,501,931, almost 450,000 more votes than the Republican nominee received. Yet when the electoral college finished balloting Garfield had 144, while Hancock had only 135, giving the President-elect only one more than he needed. For the second straight time the Democrats had won the election by popular vote, but lost by the electoral vote. In 1880 the Democrats were still swearing they had been robbed, and once again the same problem occurred when the year 1884 rolled around and this time the strong Democratic tide finally rolled itself into the electoral college. Certainly, however, when Cleveland was elected he barely won by the popular vote, but had a lead of 27 electoral votes.

The popular vote in that year was 4,674,906 for Cleveland, and 4,651,982 for Hancock, state with a large electoral vote, turned the tide for Cleveland, and with a lead of only 23,000 in the popular vote, he was elected, whereas the trend of Democratic candidates had failed to win with a lead in this respect of three and four hundred thousand votes.

Then, in 1888, running for re-election, Cleveland held a lead of slightly more than one hundred thousand votes, yet lost in the electoral college 333 to 146. The popular vote that year was Harrison, 4,639,406, Cleveland 4,501,939. This marked the first time the total vote had passed the five million mark for any nominee, and both crossed the line the same day and came back in 1892 to swamp Harrison by half a million. In 1892 the electoral vote was 277 to 145 in his favor. Cleveland's popular vote was pushing towards the six million mark that year.

However, the vote did not stop at six million, for 1896 McKinley past the six million mark to swamp Bryan by 600,000 popular votes only seven since he has a whipper-dipper total of seven million. In 1912 Wilson pushed a little more than six million, but the total vote of Theodore Roos-

South Fulton To Play Last Home Game Tonight Against U. T. Frosh

In their last home game of the season, the South Fulton Red Devils will meet the strong University of Tennessee Junior College team tonight at 8:30. It will be the last of its kind for South Fulton as the college team will go to Lilloistown tonight to take on the junior level team there. South Fulton has one more game, the state tournament, but this will be the final home game of the season.

The Red Devils possess a formidable defense, with the best six-man unit in the state. South Fulton has been playing a tough schedule of games and is well known for its defense. The Red Devil offense has been plagued by injuries, but with Irvin quarterbacking the team, things look well toward a 100 pct. season, as McKinny, Purkiss, Buchannon and others have done their share toward holding opponents to the season. Only Luther and Martin's team tonight, things look well in getting to the state tournament. If South Fulton can conquer Martin's team tonight, things look well in moving to the next round of the state tournament. South Fulton possesses a strong team.

Coach Haynes has replaced Malton and Battle, he says. He says that his team is in fine shape. The team is well equipped for the season. Only Luther and Martin's team tonight, things look well toward a 100 pct. season, as McKinny, Purkiss, Buchannon and others have done their share toward holding opponents to the season.

Probable starting lineup for tonight's game will be: McKinney—L.E. Purkiss—P. Buchannon—BE. Over—RB. Irvin—FB.
