Demand For Blue Grass Farms Continues Keen

Although construction plans for new homes in Louisville during September were slightly down as compared with the early part of the month, a number of new buildings were completed and home construction is expected to pick up all over the building areas in the city. W. E. Wixey, city director of the Department of Commerce, a new building construction corporation, reported that the value of new homes completed and under construction is expected to be $20,000,000. However, the construction of new homes in rural areas is expected to continue at a steady pace.

Traffic on Kentucky river shows

Traffic on Kentucky river shows a marked increase, with the price of late potatoes and early sown grain. Be very careful with freckle cream. Do not use freckle cream. If you use it, put it into a tiny bottle and keep it in the refrigerator. If you use it, it will clear away with the summer heat.

Advocacy Strengthens American Farmers

The organization of American farmers in support of a national farm policy is expected to gain strength and influence in the near future. The organization, which is aimed at securing fair prices and better terms for farmers, is gaining momentum. The organization has been active in promoting the interests of farmers in various states, and it is likely to gain further support as farmers become more aware of the need for a strong farm policy.

As late as 1917, officials of farm organizations were meeting in Indiana. They were discussing the need for a strong farm policy. It is expected that the organization of American farmers will continue to grow in strength and influence.
The 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program in the East established the establishment of national, state, county, and local committees to assist in the conservation of crops and soil-building practices. The program was initiated by Congress and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration (AAA) to address soil depletion issues.

Farm Goals to Be Set

Farm goals were set in the federal-state program to help farmers manage their crops and soil. These goals were based on the acreage of crops needed for consumption and exchange. The program aimed to rotate crops and soil-building practices to help prevent the depletion of soil resources.

Tobacco Production

Burley tobacco production was set to be between 400,000 and 500,000 acres. This was a significant increase from the previous year and aimed to stabilize the market for this crop.

Crop Rotation

A rotation of crops was recommended to help prevent soil depletion. This rotation would include crops that are needed primarily for consumption and exchange, such as cotton, wheat, and corn. The rotation would also include soil-building practices that would help maintain soil fertility. The rotation would be based on the acreage of crops needed for consumption and exchange. The program aimed to rotate crops and soil-building practices to help prevent the depletion of soil resources.
