Kasnow Fined In "Keep City Clean" Drive Here

L. Kasnow, who operates one of Fulton's department stores, was hauled into court here this week on a charge of permitting trash and loose paper to be left on Mears-st back of his store. This action was taken as the initial step on the part of the city in a drive to enforce an ordinance providing that each merchant shall burn or destroy any refuse from his store.

Kasnow, who is a member of the Chamber of Commerce and president of the Young Business Men's Club, took it good naturedly and said that the movement to improve the appearance of the city was a commendable one, and should be supported by all. The judge gave Kasnow the minimum fine of $1 but warned him that it would be doubled on second offense.

K. P. Dalton, chief of police, explained that the city is endeavoring to bring about a cleaner and better appearance of the city by enforcing the ordinance against promiscuous scattering of refuse, trash and old papers by business firms and citizens. He asks the co-operation of the community in this effort which will be beneficial to everybody.

DEMAND FOR FARM LAND IS STILL KEEN

The general trend of retail trade in the final days of October was not changed materially from conditions that have prevailed throughout the month, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from 35 key cities, just received by its Louisville District Office. The reports indicate that for the entire month of October substantial gains will be registered as compared with the same month last year, as was the case in September. Weather conditions continued to be the dominant factor in buying. Rain put a damper on shopping in some areas, while on the other hand crisp, cool weather resulted in definite upturns in other sections. Wholesale trade continued quiet, with buying, for the most part, marked by extreme caution.

Louisville reported that no recession in retail buying was apparent, sales during last week having risen from 6 to 15 per cent above last year. Record holiday trade forecast. Wholesale volume continued strong, averaging 12 to 15 per cent over same period last year. Employment services reported 914 placements in last week, 5.9 per cent under previous week.

CANCER

Cancer is not a hopeless, incurable disease and is not contagious or in itself hereditary. There are thousands of people in this country today who have been successfully treated for cancer.

The great hope for cancer patients lies in having their treatment during the first stages of the disease. The danger signs of cancer are present, more often than not, early enough to allow proper diagnosis and treatment, while there is yet time for successful treatment. If such danger signals are ignored until a later stage, treatment is only helpful in prolonging life.

External Cancer—Cancer on the outside of the body, which can be seen or felt, often begins as a wart, lump, mole, scab or sore. Cancer may develop from an unhealed wound or an irritated spot such as may result from wearing ill-fitting false teeth or repeated injury resulting from a sharp or broken tooth. Cancers involving the mucous membranes such as the lips, mouth, tongue and genital organs are very dangerous, since they spread to other areas early. Cancers on the backs of the hands and legs are especially dangerous for the same reason. However, in nearly all these cancers early and proper treatment results in a cure. All black or gray moles, warty growths and ulcerated or scaly areas should be removed since these often develop into cancer and are known as "precancerous lesions." In its early stage cancer is a local condition which is cured by complete destruction of the abnormal tissue. Acids and salves are dangerous since they may destroy only a part of the cancer and cause irritation which may cause rapid spread of the portion which was not destroyed. By giving attention to abnormal conditions of the skin and mucous membranes nearly all external cancers can be prevented. When they do develop early diagnosis and treatment will result in cures in a large per cent of the cases.

Internal Cancer—Cancer on the inside of the body is more difficult to diagnosis and treat by virtue of its location. However, many signs and symptoms which are significant to the physician appear in time to permit curative treatment. Unfortunately, people neglect these important signs and do not have medical examinations until the cancer has spread beyond hope of cure. Such a late diagnosis is usually a death sentence signed by the patient himself, as a result of ignorance and carelessness. The physician all too often, meets the patient for the first time when treatment can be of but little value, and cure has long since become impossible. Internal cancer does not usually pain until it is far advanced. There is no such thing as a "cancer age." It is true that most cancers occur after the age of forty, but it is also true that they appear at any age—some types are present in children at birth. Anyone who allows a suspicious condition to go untreated because he has not yet "reached the cancer age" is asking for serious trouble.

IN THE WAKE OF FLOOD

This scene was enacted many times in refugee centers established by the Red Cross during the Ohio-Mississippi Valley flood. Inevitably floods bring the danger of disease as drinking sources become contaminated and large groups of people are thrown together. The medical health service of the Red Cross serves thousands each year, and is maintained by membership funds contributed to the organization at the time of its annual Roll Call from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving.

More women die of cancer than men because many of them develop cancers involving the genital organs. Lumps in the breast may be due to cancer or, if not, actually cancerous they may later become cancerous. Any irritation of the breasts (nipples) which does not heal with simple care must be regarded with suspicion. Bleeding from the nipple is abnormal and when present may be caused by either tuberculosis, syphilis or cancer. Increased or irregular menstrual flow, or return of the flow after change of life in women, or blood in the urine of men are suspicious. Old tears resulting from childbirth which have not been properly cared for may become chronically infected and as a result of this irritation cancer may develop. Any change in bowel habit after the age of 40 should be corrected, and rectal bleeding or pain and other symptoms of local irritation should result in a careful medical examination.

Much cancer can be prevented and more of them cured when people will have a thorough medical examination each year. The same fact is true of many other dreaded diseases. Consult your family physician for any of the above symptoms.

AMERICA'S FAVORITE FAMILY IN THEIR MOST UPROAROUSLY HUMAN HIT!

THE JONES FAMILY

in "HOT WATER"

"THE NEWS" WEEKLY SCRAPBOOK

WEEK'S BEST RECIPES:

Spiced Beef Stew—2 pounds lean beef; 8 small onions; 8 small potatoes; 4 carrots; 3 slices bacon; 2 tablespoons whole mixed spices. Crisp the bacon in the bottom of a stewing pan and sear the beef in the fat. When beef is richly browned add 2 quarts hot water, salt to taste, add the spices tied in a bag. Cook 15 minutes, then remove the spices. Cook another hour then add the vegetables and continue cooking until all the ingredients are tender. Thicken the gravy with a little flour moistened with cold water.

A BEAUTY HINT:

It's no longer smart to look obviously painted. The idea is to put a very faint hint of light of medium or cream rouge over the entire face so that the skin will look as though put on face powder all over the face and apply a darker shade of rouge to the cheeks just as you would when applying your usual makeup.

A STYLE HINT:

A liberal use of suede appears in autumn style collections. Suede is used to trim or make entire hats. It trims many of the smartly tailored frocks and forms entire jackets that are combined with woolen skirts for sports.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS:

If a bureau drawer sticks do not rub it with oil as oil tends to make it worse but rub the bottom of the drawer and the runway with a cake of dry soap—Discoloration caused by food or water containing iron is easily removed from aluminum utensils by rubbing briskly with steel wool and soap. Rinse and dry thoroughly.

KITCHEN KINKS

Maple syrup mixed with powdered sugar to which a little butter or cream is added makes a delicious cake frosting. Cottage or cream cheese moistened with orange juice makes a delicious filling for peach or pear salads. A spicy relish served with the usual boiled dinner adds the right flavor.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR:

Pressure on the upper lip at the outer edge of each nostril will often stop nosebleed, or a piece of ice rolled in cotton or cotton soaked in ice water may be inserted in nostril applying steady pressure from outside. Place feet in mustard bath, drawing blood away from the head. Do not allow the nose to be blown ments in the sum of $11,874.70. On October 1 the Michigan Commission had a balance of $27,011.46 on hand. The total funds available in the final quarter of this year will be $85,907.63.

This brings to date grants to the Kentucky Commission of $213,652.32. Under the Social Security Act the Federal Government pays the administrative expenses of unemployment compensation plans now in operation in every State and territory in the Union.

Incomes of million dollars or more increased in forty-one in 1935, report by Treasury shows.

KEEP THIS IN MIND

Every newspaper in the country feels it would be remiss in its duty to its readers if it neglected along about this time each year to sound a warning against that deadly enemy of the motoring world—carbon monoxide gas. The warning is now timely, even though it may be sounded in words with which Fulton motorists are familiar.

To those ignorant of the deadly menace, it may be said that carbon monoxide is nothing more than the exhaust from an auto engine. In summer, when temperatures are high, the gas passes into the air unnoticed and with damaging effect. During fall and winter months however, when temperatures are low, the gas hangs in the air and its fumes, breathed into the lungs, has a deadly effect. If your engine is running out in the open air, then there is no material danger. But if you start your motor in a closed garage, or permit it to run in a garage whose windows and doors are closed, then your chance of escaping death is reduced to a mighty narrow margin.

Carbon monoxide is the most deadly of all known gases and the annual toll of death directly due to it in this country runs into the thousands every year. But one positive and absolute protection from it exists. Never start your motor during the fall or winter in a closed garage. Be sure the doors or windows are open before you step on the starter, and then do not permit the motor to continue running indoors any longer than necessary. Back the car into the open. You are taking your life in your hands when you follow any other course.

A BLOW AT WAR

When officials of over 300 big insurance companies gathered in London recently and resolved that henceforth no losses will be paid on property damaged through war, uprisings and revolutions, it was the hardest blow ever struck at war. They assert that if big business realizes it is not going to have its properties and munitions stocks and war supplies protected, then there isn't going to be enough profit in war to warrant the gamble. And that is the way a lot of citizens around Fulton have long felt about it. Take the profits out of war and the chance of starting one will be greatly lessened. When war begins to flatten instead of fatten pocketbooks there will be a more general demand for peace. The insurance men have hit the old God of War an awful rap, and humanity owes them a debt of gratitude for doing so.

WIL OR MILD?

The returns now seem to be in, and it looks like a tie. About half of the country's amateur weather prophets are forecasting another long, hard winter like the nation shivered through two years ago, while the other half contends that time-tried and long-tested signs all indicate it is going to be both short and balmy.

One half says the squirrels are

It Makes All the Difference in the World.

By PERCY CROSBY

storing more nuts than usual and that means a hard winter; the other half contends wild duck and geese did not start south as early this fall, and that means a mild, open season. Some of them contend husks on the nation's bumper corn crop are thicker than they normally are, which indicates plenty of snow and ice ahead; others assert that moss is almost absent from the north sides of forest trees, and that mild winters invariably follow this condition.

And so they go, these amateur prophets of joy and gloom, about evenly divided in their forecasts of what kind of winter lies ahead. As long as they are evenly divided there is always the chance of course that half of them are bound to be right. But the average citizen around Fulton isn't being fooled by their predictions. He is putting his house in order for whatever comes. If it is a mild season, he will be thankful. If it is a severe one, he is prepared to make the best of it. The only thing ahead that he looks forward to with dread is the coming of spring, when at least one-half of these amateur weather prophets will be chirping: "I told you so!"

MORE MACHINES

A news report out of Chicago is to the effect that every corn-picking machine that was on the market was sold this year and that the manufacturers say they could have sold ten times as many if they had produced them. Of course, there was a bumper corn crop to be handled. Then, too, there was a scarcity of farm labor—let it be said to the shame of a country with such a vast army of unemployed. The new device that gathers the ears, husks them and then loads them onto a truck may be the means of solving the farm labor shortage in the future. Many Fulton citizens, however, probably will take a more pessimistic view of it. They will wonder if this newest labor-saving device will not, on the other hand, create a still greater army of unemployed for the taxpayers of the country to take care of. If so, then the corn-picker will turn out to be a burden instead of a blessing.

Most Fulton women seem to be content when they reach 40. By that time they've either got a husband or quit worrying about it.

Possibly the nations of the world would get better results if they would hold a conference for the limitation of dictators.

If you live past babyhood there's never very much danger in being killed by kindness.

Maybe more Fulton fathers would send their children to college if they knew the kids wouldn't come home and criticize their grammar.

WHEN TELEPHONES WERE NEW

None of us have lived in times before the invention of a wagon but many of us can guess how these objects must have impressed the people who first knew them. The telephone was invented some years before I was born, but it did not come into general use in rural sections of Kentucky until I was a good-sized boy. I helped put up the first line in our neighborhood. We organized a local company called (really) the Sunnipple Telephone Company; the local postmaster was the promoter and most of the company. When we tried to get a right of way for the line, we met some difficulty, because some of the farmers were afraid the contraption would injure their crops. One man who gave in and allowed the wire to be strung up across his cultivated fields stoutly maintained that the corn was much poorer under the wire than elsewhere. He forgot to observe that the ground there was very poor and worn out. Since I was just a boy I did not get to climb the posts and attach the wire, but I could hand up brackets and insulators and run errands; I could unroll the wire and help with the stretchers. That made me a part of it, anyway, and I can still boast of having helped install this new invention.

When the line was up, it was some days before our boxes came from the makers. Meanwhile an old citizen died. As the funeral cortege was passing along by the singing wires, a daughter-in-law of the deceased remarked: "There goes a message and I haven't got my box." But the boxes came by and by and the party line opened up new experiences for all of us.

Our neighborhood very quickly widened. At one time there were 44 boxes on our line. It was about all one could do to keep up with so many conversations, not through any desire to be nosy, but from sheer interest in what others were doing and thinking. The man who lived on the other side of the farthest hills that we knew sounded as near as the neighbor right by us. He and we were much more natural after the newness of the experience wore off, than we had been when we had met at the country store or the country church, for both of us had on store clothes then, while with the telephone we could talk just as we were. Before we knew it we found ourselves vitally interested in the whole side of the county for we sometimes listened in on conversations that went through ten or three centrals, so that people ten or twelve miles away were connected.

There was no use in having a contraption like this without using it. It soon became the means of afternoon and evening entertainment. Love affairs or near-love affairs grew up. It became easier to make a date by telephone than by sending a boy on a mule with a formal note. Some of us learned to talk to the girls in this way when we were entirely too bashful to speak to them in public and too cowardly to ride our mules over and hitch them to the fence on Sunday afternoon.

Sickness, death, birth, marriage, visiting, all had their part in the news that flashed over the wires. Neighborliness was behind it all; it might have been a little provoking when we had to repeat our messages for the benefit of our listeners. It was ever so much better than the weekly paper, for the bare news items there hardly did the subject justice. Besides, we heard by telephone many things that no newspaper ever printed. And so, after so many years of isolation, the telephone brought us together, and we learned to know and respect an ever-widening group.

Hobson at Least Had a Chance

By IRVIN S. COBB

THIS story has to do with two sisters and their father and a youth named Jim who came a-courting. Now, one of these young ladies was a young woman of fine character but she was not especially beautiful. In fact she was not beautiful at all. Cruel-minded persons had gone so far as to say that she was as homely as a mud-fence. She was shy on the accomplishments, on the graces, on the winning ways for which Southern womanhood is famous.

She was getting well along in years, too. The prospects for her to round out her life as an old maid seemed first rate. Her name was Mary. The other sister was younger. She was rounded and plump and light on her feet and she had glorious eyes and wonderful hair and a peach-bloom complexion, and the most kissable mouth upon which the eyes of man had ever lingered—and her name was Ann, and she was a prime favorite among all the beaux of the county.

In his attention to the pair this young fellow, Jim, showed no discrimination. Sometimes he would take Mary to church or prayer-meeting or a neighborhood party. Sometimes he would take Ann. Sometimes he would take the whole family along—for he meant business. This sort of thing went on quite awhile. Then one night, the young chap called and asked for a word in private with the old man. "Mr. Jones," he said, when they were alone, "I am in love with your daughter and she cares for me and we want to get married and I have come to ask your consent to the match."

The father embraced him. "God bless you, my boy!" he exclaimed. "I always did think there was the makings of a man in you. Of course you can have my beloved child for your wife. Take Mary and be happy."

"Hold on, Mr. Jones," said Jim, "It's not Mary I want—Ann is the one."

With his face aflame with indignation, the fond parent backed away from him. "Why—why, you infernal young scoundrel!" he sputtered. "Do you mean to tell me you have the effrontery to come into my house and pick and choose between my girls?—get out of this house before I throw you out!"

The pigs received crushed wheat and tankage in a self-feeder, and at times corn, shorts and milk. They were kept gaining from birth to market size, and topped the market by fifty cents a hundred pounds the day they were sold.

January Floods Reveal Strength of Red Cross

Aid Given 1,062,000 Persons
Through Set-Up
by Agency

The elasticity and scope of Red Cross disaster work is shown in a recent report on Red Cross relief measures during the unparalleled Ohio-Mississippi Valley flood of this year.

At the height of the emergency Red Cross relief offices were established in 152 inundated counties and in 146 counties where refugees were cared for, the report stated. Eight regional headquarters offices controlled the 328 county offices, and were in turn supervised by the National Red Cross in Washington, D. C.

A statistical summary of persons aided by the organization indicates that the floods constituted the greatest peace-time emergency ever faced by the nation. The Red Cross gave some form of assistance to 1,062,000 men, women and children. From January to August hundreds of trained workers helped by thousands of volunteers administered to the sufferers.

A Red Cross rescue fleet of 5400 boats was organized, according to the report. Emergency hospitals established totaled 300 and 3500 nurses were assigned to flood duty. In more than 1,000 refugee centers the victims of the flood were sheltered, clothed and fed. Through the Red Cross medical health program and the work of public health agencies sickness was kept to normal for the time of year in all inundated areas.

Because of its disaster experience the Red Cross was directed by the President of the United States, who is also president of the Red Cross, to coordinate the effort of all federal flood relief groups. Government and Red Cross officials met daily at the Red Cross headquarters building in Washington to plan relief measures and prevent duplication of effort.

"We were fortunate in having 56 years of disaster relief experience to call upon in meeting the emergency," Admiral Gary T. Grayson, chairman of the Red Cross, said.

It was found that 97,000 families composed of 436,000 persons had to have their resources supplemented or an entirely new start provided by the Red Cross, the report stated. Red Cross emergency and rehabilitation assistance was as follows: rescue, transportation and shelter for 62,000 families; food, clothing and other maintenance for 193,000 families; building and repair for 27,000 families; household goods for 99,000 families; medical, nursing and sanitation help for 15,000 families; agricultural rehabilitation for 10,000 families; other occupational aid for 3,000 families and other types of relief for 4,000 families.

"Credit for this largest peace-time relief operation in the history of the nation must go to the American people who contributed a Red Cross relief fund of more than $25,000,000," Admiral Grayson said.

During the year the Red Cross gave aid to the victims of 105 other disasters in 36 states, Alaska and the District of Columbia. The Red Cross financed the majority of these relief operations from money contributed through memberships during the annual Roll Call last November, since it is only in case of large scale disasters that a national drive for relief funds is made.

This year the Roll Call is from November 11th to the 25th. The Red Cross seeks a greater membership to meet its disaster relief and other service obligations during 1938.

Last year Red Cross Chapters gave vital help to 120,000 needy families.

Red Cross Replaces Farm Family Losses

The Red Cross gave agricultural rehabilitation to 10,116 farm families following the severe eastern floods of last winter. Types of aid included feed, seed, livestock, farm tools and machinery and other items essential to agricultural productivity. More than $599,000 was expended by the organization to meet these requirements.

In addition to occupational assistance, rural families hard hit by the flood waters were rescued, clothed, fed and sheltered by the Red Cross. Where it was necessary the Red Cross repaired and rebuilt out-buildings, barns and other structures. Medical and nursing care were provided and homes re-furnished.

Red Cross agricultural rehabilitation benefited nearly three times as many families as received all other types of Red Cross occupational rehabilitation combined.

Labor's advocacy of the Red Cross program is attested by recent statements from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America.

"Red Cross aims and purposes are highly commendable and deserving of the support of all classes of people," said Mr. Green.

"The activities and service of the American Red Cross satisfy a great need of the people, and I strongly urge that it receive the unqualified support of all during its annual Roll Call for members," Mr. Lewis said.

RED CROSS OBSERVES NURSING ANNIVERSARY

1937 Marks 25th Year Of Public Health Nursing In Rural Areas

"Prior to inauguration of the Red Cross Town and Country nursing service in 1912, no national effort was made to bring nursing skill to the rural sickbed," James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations for the American Red Cross, said today in commenting on the silver anniversary of Red Cross public health nursing.

In a plea for an increased membership during the coming Red Cross annual Roll Call held from November 11 to the 25th, Mr. Fieser pointed out that Red Cross rural nursing rounds out 25 years of continuous service this year. "It is essential activities such as this which the American people support through membership," he said.

In 1910 Lillian Wald, then head resident of the Henry Street Settlement in New York City, proposed that the American Red Cross pioneer in the field of rural nursing. Public health nurses were active in urban districts but no similar provision had been made to guard the health of the rural dweller. Miss Wald felt that the Red Cross was best qualified for the undertaking through its long experience in converting humanitarian ideals into practical accomplishment.

Two years later the first Red Cross rural nurse set forth upon her rounds in a county in Massachusetts. Jacob Schiff, member of the Red Cross Board of Incorporators, and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid each contributed funds to start the project. Special courses of training for nurses resulted in young women who thoroughly knew the mechanics of this new job.

By 1918 there were 100 rural nursing services conducted by Red Cross chapters; and 18 months later the number of services had skyrocketed to 2,000, as the signing of the Armistice released a flood of War nurses for peace-time duty.

"Reorganization and consolidation eventually cut the number of public health nurses serving under the Red Cross flag," Mr. Fieser stated. "But as a group their efficiency increased."

Mr. Fieser called attention to a study of Red Cross public health nursing accomplishments since the service was begun. "Statistics show that in all nearly 3,000 services were established by the Red Cross," he said. "During the past 15 years 6,800 public health nurses were assigned to chapters, and a total of 15,000,000 visits were made to or in behalf of patients."

"Each year during the past 11, more than 440,000 rural school children have been found to have physical defects. Each year 189,000 of these children were helped through treatment."

At the present time there are 666 Red Cross public health nurses engaged in health work in rural communities, and last year more than 1,000,000 visits were made on behalf of the sick.

"It has been our purpose from the first," Mr. Fieser emphasized, "to demonstrate that rural nursing was needed and could be organized. In many instances we have turned established community nursing services over to local health authorities. When this was done, we turned our effort toward opening up additional virgin territory."

Other Red Cross services supported by Roll Call memberships are life saving; first aid; disaster relief and the work of organized Red Cross volunteers.

Many Red Cross chapters carry on extensive civilian relief work. During the past year 120,000 needy families received this type of Red Cross help.
