THE RAID ON MARSEILLE NO LONGER A MYSTERY

Saturday night's shaming raid on France the first that unoccupied Marseille has experienced since the June armistice, was neither a Nazi frame-up nor a deep dyed mystery. It was not accidental as the Vichy Government has sought to make it appear in which it was aimed at some industrial target the British fliers were aiming at was a French factory turning out tanks for Germany. The attack was a premeditated against French compliance with a demand that its munitions plants turn out war materials to be used against Britain. The Vichy Government was made shamefaced on the grounds of resisting unemploymet and lack of full knowledge that Britain regarded as important. Britain's silence and British nati are easily understood. The British Government does not want war materials to be turned into the hands of the Germans by the French. The Vichy leaders are being shamed into giving way. It is a complicated situation. The circumstances in which the British fliers were aiming at was a French factory turning out tanks for Germany.
