Calloway alternative programs recognized

Special to the Ledger

FRANKFORT, Ky. - Ten alternative education programs have been selected as Best Practice Sites in an effort designed to recognize the work of educators and programs that serve at-risk students.

Included on the list are the Calloway County Day Treatment and the Calloway County Alternative Education Center.

The Kentucky Department of Education (KDE) began the project in 2009 to highlight exemplary practices in A5 and A6 programs in public school districts. A5 programs are school district-operated and -housed instructional programs that provide services to at-risk students with unique needs, and A6 programs are district-operated instructional programs that are located in non-district facilities or schools that serve youth who are considered state agency children through the Kentucky Educational Collaborative for State Agency Children (KEC-SAC), the Department of Juvenile Justice, the Department of Community Based Services and/or the Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation

Prohm 'Citizen of the Year'

Chuck Jones, left, the Murray Calloway County Chamber of Commerce Citizen of the Year for 2010, presented this year's award Thursday night to Steve Prohm, MSU's head men's basketball coach. The chamber held its 85th annual dinner on the upper level of Murray State University's CFSB Center, overlooking the court where many of Prohm's 32 victories took place last season.

As the featured speaker of the 85th annual dinner for the Murray Calloway County Chamber of Commerce, Murray State University men's head basketball coach Steve Prohm told the crowd that the community's support was one of the key ingredients to the team's success during the 2011-12 season.

"I'm honored to be able to speak to you guys tonight, and then second of all, I'm very, very honored and humbled to be the head basketball coach here," Prohm said. "It's a great privilege, a great honor, and it's something that I dreamed of for a long time, but never really thought it would ever happen, and I couldn't do it in a better place than

MSU Racers' Mens Basketball Coach honored for 31-2 season

By HAWKINS TEAGUE

Staff Writer

Murray State University men's head basketball coach Steve Prohm was named Citizen of the Year Thursday night at the Murray Calloway County Chamber of Commerce's 85th annual dinner.

Prohm was presented with the award by last year's recipient, Chuck Jones. Jones said that shortly after Prohm took the job of head coach last year, Prohm had a talk with him and asked him a question.

"He said, 'What advice would you give me in my first year here at Murray?'" Jones said. "And I told him, 'To win.' And he certainly did. You know, Steve, I'll give you the biggest compliment that I can give you, and that's to tell you that you're certainly a guy that I wouldn't mind my son growing up to be like. I applaud your achievements and I respect your character. It's my distinct honor (to present) Steve Prohm, Citizen of the Year."

Prohm became the 15th head coach in MSU history in May 2011, and had one of the best rookie seasons in the history of college basketball this year when he led the team to a 31-2 record and into the third round of the NCAA Tournament, according to goracers.com. Prohm's Racers were the last unbeaten team at 23-0 and the only team in the nation to go undefeated on the road at 13-0.

After accepting the Citizen of the Year award, Prohm thanked chamber members, as well as his coaching staff, MSU Athletic Director Allen Ward and Paul Bubb, associate athletic director for external affairs.

"I can't thank you guys enough... I want to win 31 games again next year bad," he said. "I want to win 32 if we can, but I want to do things the right way. I want to continue to impact this community, and I want to continue to have sell-outs, and I want to continue to have our guys be able to have all those (youth basketball) campers come out and see them and have our guys continue to give back. And if we do that, if we continue to do that, (we'll have) maybe 26 wins, maybe 28 wins, maybe 23 wins. But we'll continue to win championships, we'll continue to graduate our players and we'll continue to impact this community and keep Murray State on

Local Red Cross chapter offering swim lessons

By PAIGE GRAVES

Staff Writer

The Murray City Pool has never looked more inviting as the summer heat has made its presence well-known. If you've never learned how to swim, that heat can be oppressive. However, the Red Cross chapter of Murray has a solution for people of all ages.

The Red Cross is currently offering swim classes for two remaining sessions. Session two will run June 25-30, and session three will run July 9-14. The cost of the class for the week is $60. The classes are available for parents with their kids, as well as adults on their own.

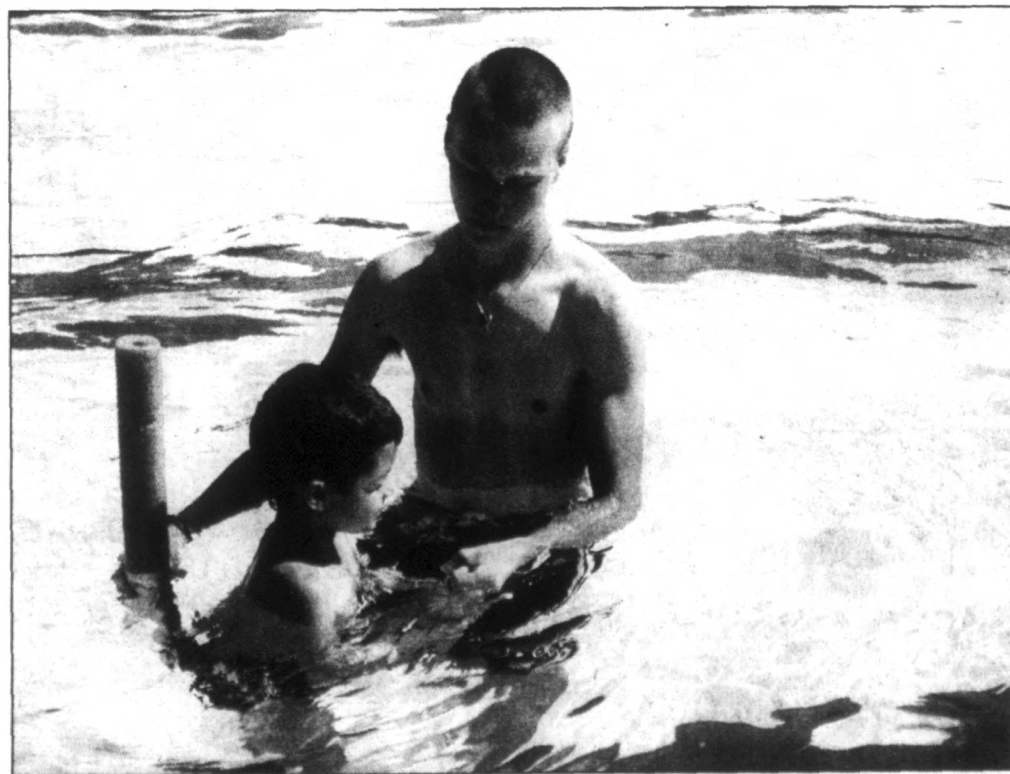

April Dunn, Water Safety instructor, said these classes have been offered for at least 35 years.

"Our goal is to make sure everybody who is involved is as safe as they can possibly be in the water and to give them all the skills they could need for a lifetime of swimming," Dunn said. "Swimming is one of the few sports you can do for your entire life."

For each class there is a certified instructor as well as trained aides to ensure the safety of the participants.

"Safety is the very most important thing, so we try to emphasize that above all other things," Dunn said. "We also want to teach strokes. As they get older, they develop their strokes. With these skills they can get to the point where their personal health and fitness is the map and Murray, Kentucky on the map."

Under Prohm, MSU tied the Ohio Valley Conference record with 31 wins in a single season, and 23 straight wins set a league record. He received many post-season accolades, including OVC Coach of the Year, USBWA District IV Coach of the Year, Basketball Times Coach of the Year and NABC District 19 Coach of the Year. He was also the inaugural winner of the Joe B. Hall Award.

Jones said Prohm had lived in Murray for six years, having moved here in 2006 to work as an assistant coach under former head coach Billy Kennedy. Despite being here for such a short time, Jones said Prohm had already made a huge impact on the community, making Murray a household name across the nation and giving its citizens the most incredible experience Jones had witnessed in his time here.

"One of the things I promise is, for the 920 minutes of perfection that he was involved with, he did everything he could not just to win, but he also did for this community to be part of the fantastic ride," Jones said. He saw our pride, and that made his journey even more special."

The chamber also presented its annual business awards during the dinner. Large Business of the Year went to Culver's. Allison said the category is for any business with more than 50 employees, although the employees do not all have to be full-time. Mid-size Business of the Year, which is for businesses with 11-49 employees, went to K-Squared Designs. Small Businesses of the Year, for businesses with fewer than 10 employees, went to Heskett Chiropractic Center. Agri-business of the Year went to Tractor Supply, although no one was available to accept the award in person.

Outgoing Chamber of Commerce Chairwoman Gale Cornelison Award presented the Chair's Award to Angels Attic Thrift Shop, with manager Mike Crook accepting.

"And then, I want to thank everyone in here for all their support. It was an amazing season, but it's not Coach Prohm. The reason it was an amazing season is because I had a great staff, I had really, really good players, this is a really great program, and we had unbelievable support from everybody in the community and everybody in western Kentucky. So I really, really appreciate you guys' support throughout this season."

Prohm said he was most proud of the humility and selflessness his players showed, as well as the impact they had on the community. He said he tried to the team to not seek honor and to have faith that if they did their jobs, honor would find them. He said he also taught them to keep their "eyes up," or to stay focused on the goals of the team.

The third thing that Prohm made a refrain last season was to "Stay on your wall," which he said became a catch phrase in the community. The phrase comes from the Book of Nehemiah in the Hebrew Bible, in which Nehemiah returns to his homeland of Jerusalem to rebuild the city's walls. As it was nearing completion, Nehemiah was tempted to stop, but stayed on task, saying, "I am doing a great work, and I will not come down." Prohm said one cannot become distracted from his or her purpose, and that every person should make sure that their actions come from the heart.

"(The story of Nehemiah) says the heart is the key of everything that you do," Prohm said. "If everything is heart-centered, then your passion, your purpose will always be right. If your heart is truly the center and the focus of your faith, then your actions will bring true joy, peace and contentment."

Lance Allison, the chamber's president and CEO, has often joked that he felt partially responsible for Prohm's remarkable first season because Allison told him in front of an audience at a chamber breakfast shortly after Prohm was hired as head coach that he expected great things from him. Prohm addressed the running joke in his closing remarks.

"Lance challenged me at the chamber breakfast last year; he set the stakes high for our season," Prohm said. "So if you had anything to do with this success this season, I'll speak at breakfasts, I'll speak at dinners, I'll speak at chamber lunches if it had anything to do with us winning games."

directly connected to being in the water."

Water safety is particularly relevant to this area as nearby lakes offer potential relief to the heat of summer. By taking these classes, anyone can prepare themselves to stay safe while still enjoying the water.

Jennifer Wilson, executive director of the Calloway County Chapter of the American Red Cross, said the community should take advantage of these classes.

"Across the United States, what you're going to see in other communities is the YMCA running these programs and that's fine," said Wilson. "But our chapter has been able to do this for almost 40 years. The only other chapter-facilitated programs in Kentucky are Elizabethtown and Lexington, and we are the largest. This is not in every county."

Services.

The programs were nominated in three categories: Category 1: Curriculum, Instruction and Assessment; Category 2: Culture, Support and Professional Development; and Category 3: Leadership, Resources/Organization and Planning.

The Calloway County Day Treatment and the Calloway County Alternative Education Center were both recognized as being exemplary in all three categories.

School districts nominated their programs for recognition based on criteria developed by the KDE Alternative Education Advisory Committee. Applications were screened, and finalists received site visits from a KDE review committee.

Each program selected as a Best Practice Site will receive $1,000 for instructional support and will be formally recognized at a future meeting of the Kentucky Board of Education. Information on the schools also will also be posted on the KDE website, so that other schools can use the program as a model, according to a press release from Lisa Gross with the KDE.

Statewide educational training hosted at MSU

By TRISH LOFTON MSU Print Media

The Murray State University college of education hosted a statewide training on June 11-12 to assist with preparation of new teachers for Kentucky classrooms. The Education Professional Standards Board (EPSB) sponsored the training, with educators from 14 teacher preparation institutions and 10 school districts attending. Co-teaching is a new method that promises to provide a comprehensive and rigorous experience for student teachers by allowing the supervising teacher to remain actively involved in the classroom, thereby improving the quality of instruction for PK-12 students.

In a co-teaching classroom, the supervising teacher provides consistent mentoring to provide student teachers the support needed to gain the skills and confidence necessary to teach successfully. St. Cloud University in Minnesota provided the training and presented research demonstrating that student achievement scores on standardized tests was higher in co-teaching classrooms than either traditional student teaching classrooms or classrooms with a single experienced teacher.

Dr. Renee Campoy, interim dean of the college of education at Murray State, praised the co-teaching method saying, "We understand the pressure teachers and schools are under to improve student learning and there is good evidence that this method helps children to achieve while it better prepares new teachers for the classroom. We are looking forward to providing this training in the next year to the 18 school districts in our service region. The co-teaching method seems to be a win-win-win situation for children, student teachers and supervising teachers."

The following teacher programs were represented: Asbury University, Bellarmine University, Boyce College, Brescia University, Campbellsville University, Kentucky Wesleyan College, Lindsey Wilson College, Mid-Continent University, Murray State University, Northern Kentucky University, Spalding University, Western Kentucky University, University of Kentucky and University of Louisville.

The following school districts were also represented: Adair County, Boone County, Bowling Green Independent, Campbellsville Independent, Daviess County, Graves County, Hardin County, Jefferson County, Trigg County and Warren County.

Barkley bridge restriction planned

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet plans a daytime lane and load width restriction on the U.S. 68/KY 80 Lake Barkley Bridge in Trigg County starting Monday, June 25.

This daytime lane and load width restriction at U.S. 68 mile point 8.284 is to allow a detailed inspection of the bridge structure.

Motorists can expect to encounter one-lane traffic with alternating flow controlled by flaggers between approximately 8 a.m., CDT, and 3 p.m., each day. Due to the use of a snooper truck to assist with the inspection, this work zone will include a strictly enforced 8-foot maximum load width.

Motorist should use caution in this work zone where equipment, flaggers, and inspection personnel will be on the bridge deck in close proximity to traffic flow, it was reported.

This inspection work is expected to take about one week to complete.

The U.S. 68/KY 80 Cumberland River/Lake Barkley Bridge, also known as the Lawrence Memorial Bridge and the Canton Bridge, carries approximately 5,500 vehicles in an average day. The bridge is located at U.S. 68 mile point 8.596 in Trigg County and serves as the eastern entrance to Land Between The Lakes National Recreation Area.

On teens and college students, coal's decline IN OTHER WORDS

The following are editorials from newspapers across Kentucky offering divergent points of view about issues of importance.

The Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky.

It's summertime, but the living ain't easy - especially for teenagers on the job hunt. Fewer than three in 10 American teens now spend June through August working the jobs that have traditionally belonged to the youth, such as busing tables or working cash registers.

Employment rates for 16- to 19-year-olds are at the lowest level since World War II. The Associated Press reported recently.

We already knew that we live in a country where application pools for entry-level jobs are teeming with the overqualified; where job fairs touting underpaid positions draw in crowds by the hundreds. But now, it is also one where a 16-year-old can no longer expect to bag groceries all summer, watching those precious minimum-wage paychecks add up in their college fund.

These lower-skill jobs once filled by high school students now go to college graduates, immigrants and the recently laid-off, struggling to pay off loans and support families in a weak economy.

What's even more frightening is that teen employment may never return to pre-recession levels, according to a projection by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The work ethic that was instilled in many at a young age may now be lost with the rising generation, the consequence of which we likely won't learn until they take the helm of the working world.

The lower employment levels are also in part reflective of a cultural shift, in which a number of students now spend summers in college preparatory camps or arts programs rather than scooping ice cream, in hopes of better preparing for university life - at least academically, if not financially.

But Americans were smacked with another unpleasant statistic: The average tuition at four-year public universities rose a whopping 15 percent between 2008 and 2010 - faster than the cost of health care. Tuition rates have also significantly increased at private universities, with some lesser-known schools charging twice as much as Harvard. ...

So what are teens supposed to do, when work is nearly impossible to get, and public university tuition, along with loan interest rates, continue to rise? These are problems that cannot be ignored in the upcoming election. ...

The Independent Ashland, Ky.

America is shoveling coal to the sidelines, reported a story by Associated Press energy writer Jonathan Fahey. If he's right - and he certainly had the statistics to show that America's use of coal to produce its electricity is rapidly declining - then it does not bode well for the future of this region which relies so heavily on the production of coal.

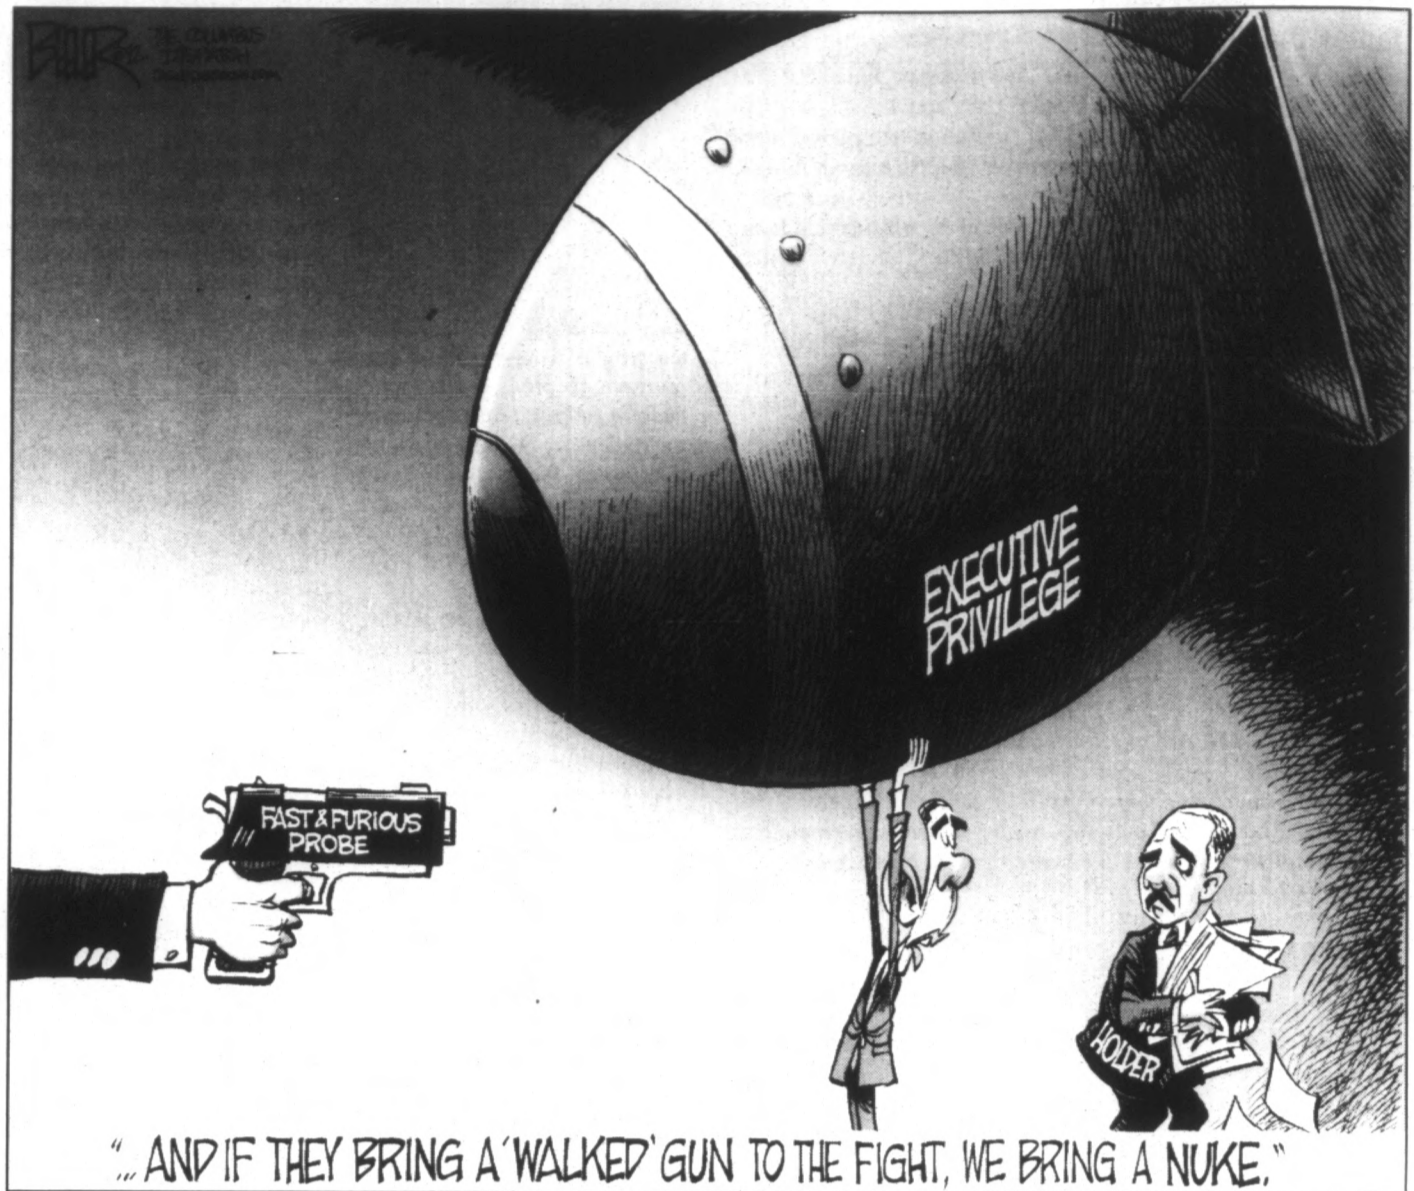

Despite all the environmental problems caused by coal - both in getting it out of the ground and in burning it to produce electricity - it creates the vast majority of high-paying jobs in their region and fuels the economy of many rural counties where non-coal jobs are scarce and mostly low paying. Simply put, when coal jobs disappear in this region, there simply are no other comparable jobs available to replace them. A coal miner earning more than $50,000 a year can suddenly find himself either working at a minimum wage job - or not at all. ...

While coal use is declining, natural gas use is rising. Natural gas will be used to produce 29 percent of the country's electricity this year, up from 20 percent in 2008. Nuclear accounts for 20 percent. Hydroelectric, wind, solar and other renewables make up the rest.

The shift from coal is reverberating across Appalachia, where mining companies are laying off workers. ...

Bruce Nilles, director of the Sierra Club's Beyond Coal campaign, says the shift from coal to gas was accelerated by the low price of natural gas. That, along with tougher environmental rules and alternatives such as wind and solar will keep the pressure on coal. "We won't go backwards," he says.

And so the fight continues. It should not be a choice between saving the environment or saving jobs. Instead, we must find a way to preserve jobs without leveling our mountains, burying our streams and polluting our air. An impossible task? Well, it won't be easy but it is the best hope of keeping coal an important source of energy.

The silenced majority

Although Elinor Ostrom's passing made headlines when she died last week, her name and her amazing achievements are unknown to most of us. Not only was Professor Ostrom a 2009 Nobel Laureate in Economics, she was a woman in a field dominated by men. Trained in political science, not economics, her research challenged a fundamental economic belief about the management of shared resources, something called the tragedy of the commons.

In economics, the traditional approach to common ownership was thought to result in excessive exploitation, such as fishermen over-fishing a common pond. To explore this assumption, Professor Ostrom studied cases around the world in which communities were able, through cooperation, to regulate the responsible use of resources. She and her research partner, Oliver E. Williamson, discovered that self-regulation was possible when participants could reach agreement.

On the day the Nobel announcement was made public, Professor Ostrom explained that her work filled a gap that had been overlooked by other economists. "What we have ignored is what citizens can do,"

she said, "and the importance of real involvement of the people involved versus just having somebody in Washington ... make a rule."

According to Avinash Dixit, a Princeton economics professor quoted in the New York Times, the announcement of Ostrom's receipt of the Nobel sparked amazement - and some disdain - among economists who were not familiar with her name or her work.

"Some things said about her in blogs and other media were so ignorant and in such bad taste that I felt ashamed on behalf of the economics profession," Mr. Dixit said.

The scorn heaped upon Ostrom emerged from the fact that she was an outsider who had the audacity to follow a different line of reasoning that led to the possibility of successful management of shared resources. As the prize committee explained when Ostrom was awarded the Nobel:

"Elinor Ostrom has challenged the conventional wisdom that common property is poorly managed and should be either regulated by central authorities or privatized. Based on numerous studies of user-managed fish stocks, pastures, woods, lakes, and groundwater basins, Ostrom concludes that the outcomes are, more often than not, better than predicted by standard theories. She observes that resource users frequently develop sophisticated mechanisms for decision-making and rule enforcement to handle conflicts of interest, and she characterizes the rules that promote successful outcomes."

The path to the Nobel was not a smooth one; the pitfalls encountered by Dr. Ostrom started all the way back to high school. In a public radio interview, she revealed that she was discouraged from studying trigonometry and calculus by her guidance counselor, and was routinely guided toward more traditional academic routes because she was a woman. "I can't tell you how many times I was told that I'd be barefoot and pregnant and didn't need to take those courses," Dr. Ostrom said.

While one might insist that such systematic exclusion of women no longer exists, there is ample evidence to the contrary. Look at the composition of state legislatures, the leadership of corporations, universities, school systems, churches and religious groups, hospitals, corporate boards, etc. In every case, there are far fewer females than males. Women make up 51 percent of the population, and we earn more than 50 percent of college and university degrees in every category - associate, bachelor, master, doctoral or professional; yet in spite of our numbers we continue to be obstructed when it comes to positions of power. Also in spite of our numbers, we are paid less than men - 77 cents on the dollar.

In spite of the barriers, some women do reach the top. Elinor Ostrom is a case in point. But imagine what progress could be made, what problems might be solved, if the "old boy" network were to be required to include more women.

'Heading Out to Wonderful'

In Robert Goolrick's new novel, "Heading Out to Wonderful," Charlie Beale sets out in 1948 to find his Shangri La, an idyllic place in Virginia where he can put down roots and live out his days in peace and contentment. So he starts out, "heading out to wonderful."

Charlie stops in his travels at Brownsburg, Va., a place not unlike Murray or Danville or any number of fine Kentucky towns. A butcher by trade, he ambles into the local meat shop and finds Will Haislett and his young son, Sam. In the way of a small town resident in the South, Mr. Haislett tries to find out all he can about this stranger.

"And where's home?" Mr. Haislett inquires innocently enough.

"You know the story," Charlie replies. "Came back from the war. Daddy dead. Mama moved in with relations. Family scattered. So I went traveling. Saw the country, looking for I don't know what. Yes, I do. Something wonderful, I guess. Someplace special. I saw Brownsburg. I've been here thinking hard on it for a week."

And then Mr. Haislett gave Charlie Beale some wise advice that we all should hear. And it's not that we should not be ambitious or that we should not strive for the best in life, but sometimes the best might not fit us just right. Sometimes, the best might be perfect for someone else, but for us, it might be ill-fitting and gaudy and unseemly.

Mr. Haislett did not hesitate to respond. "Let me tell you something, son. When you're young, and you head out to wonderful, everything is fresh and bright as a brand-new penny, but before you get to wonderful you're going to have to pass through all right. And when you get to all right, stop and take a good, long look, because that may be as far as you're ever going to go. Brownsburg ain't heaven, by any means. But it's perfectly fine. It's all right."

In America today, we often have a hard time taking Mr. Haislett's advice. We find it impossible to settle for what is just all right, and we head out to wonderful, only to find disappointment, and sometimes despair and disgrace. We want more, more, more. We are never satisfied, never fulfilled, never happy, but always striving, always heading out to wonderful.

Later in Goolrick's book, Will Haislett's wife, Alma, tells a story that her mother had told her "from back in the Depression." "The town drunk is sitting on the courthouse steps," she says, "and a tramp walks in the town and asks the drunk, 'What kind of town is this?' The drunk lifts his eyebrows, looks him over, and says, 'Oh, it's a terrible town. It's full of liars and cheaters and people who live for nothing but being mean.'"

The tramp thanks him and moves on down the road, looking for something better. Sometime later, though, another tramp comes through, and he asks the drunk the same question: "What kind of town is this?" "And the old drunk tells him, 'It's a wonderful town. The people are kind and good, and take well to strangers, and bring their children up right.'"

With that information, the tramp decides to stay awhile, and he's given a few hand-outs and eventually finds work, and "pretty soon, as times get better, he's got a wife and a little house and some children of his own. And he, like the rest of the town, brings them up right."

Charlie wants to know if the story is "about the town, or the drunk or the tramp?" And Alma replies, "I think it's about finding the thing you expect to find." For many of us, heading out to wonderful might mean little more than opening our front door.

Parker presents paper at annual symposium

Special to the Ledger

JACKSON, Tenn. — While a student at McAfee School of Business Administration at Union University in Jackson, Tenn., Matthew Parker co-authored a paper with management professor Dr. Andrew Tiger. Parker presented the paper at the eighth annual Union University Scholarship Symposium. It was also published as an operations management case study in the 2011 edition of Advances in Business Research.

The paper discussed the use of computer optimization software to achieve greater efficiency, sustainability and profitability for fundraising projects sponsored by Students in Free Enterprise (SIFE.) As a senior, Parker served as president of the SIFE chapter at Union. He had encountered optimization software in Tiger's quantitative methods business course.

"Dr. Tiger provided me with a valuable opportunity to further explore and apply the ideas I learned in class," Parker said.

The paper also highlighted the benefits of offering service learning experiences to students in business schools.

Parker, the son of Martha and David Parker, of Murray, graduated in May from Union University with summa cum laude honors. He earned a bachelor of science degree in business administration with an emphasis in management. He is currently employed in Plano, Texas by Crossmark, Inc.

Lord, Help Me To Believe

Somewhere between childhood and adulthood, our faith can sometimes deteriorate; the more we understand about life, the more doubtful we may become. For example, when faced with a serious problem, children seem to have the utmost faith that things will turn out for the best, because they know that their parents love them and will always do what is best for them. Children take things at face value, and although they may not always be happy with a parent's decision, they put their trust in their parents on important matters. A parent's love is the ultimate example of God's love, and as children grow into maturity, the trust and love they have for their parents will be reflected in their love and trust in our Heavenly Father. Our Lord told his disciples that unless they changed and became like little children, they would not enter the kingdom of Heaven. The greatest in the kingdom of Heaven is the one who humbles himself and becomes like a child. Lord, help me to believe and trust in you as a little child.

Jesus said, "Let the children come to me and do not stop them, because the Kingdom of Heaven belongs to such as these."

Bible and burial practices

Question: What does the Bible teach about burial practices? Do you think God approves of spending so much on funerals and burials as we do today? What would Jesus do?

Answer: The Bible has no specific instructions about burial practices. Instead, an overview of practices mentioned in the Bible indicates that God approves of the disposal of the bodies of loved ones with dignity, honor and respect even when it may involve some expense.

The Jewish custom of burial in a rock-hewn tomb or in the earth is the most common practice mentioned in the Bible. However, King Saul and his sons were cremated by his people who rescued their bodies from the Philistines; and the bodies of Jacob and Joseph were embalmed in Egypt so they could be returned to Canaan for burial.

In the New Testament, Jesus defended the woman who anointed him with a very expensive perfume, saying, "She has done a beautiful thing to me. . .

She poured perfume on my body beforehand to prepare for my burial" (Mark 14:6-9). Usually the bodies were washed, wrapped in linen with special spices and then laid in a tomb or buried in a shallow grave with rocks piled on top (John 11:44; Luke 23:53-24:1). Sometimes graves were marked by monuments of stone erected in love and honor of the dead (Genesis 20; 2 Kings 23:17).

The most important goal for Christians should be to see that our burial practices reflect our view of death and the afterlife. For Christians, death is not the end. At death, the spirit and the body separate (James 2:26). The spirit returns to God, and the body returns to the dust from which it came (Ecclesiastes 12:7; Genesis 3:19). When Christ returns at the end of this world, the dead who placed their faith in him will be raised with imperishable, spiritual bodies, not natural but glorious bodies (John 5:28; 1 Thessalonians 4:16; 1 Corinthians 15:42-44). Jesus taught that there is a place prepared for us after the day of judgement (Matthew 25:31ff). Because Christians have hope of life after death, they do not need to approach the dissolution of the body as though they will never see their loved ones again. We are sorrowful but not as unbelievers who have no hope (1 Thessalonians 4:13).

Memorializing the dead does not require spending large amounts of money for funerals, flowers, caskets and burial vaults. I do not intend to sound judgmental of those who do, but these things only temporarily delay the return to dust. It is possible to honor our loved ones in different ways, perhaps ways that can help others also find hope of life after death. Preserving our bodies is not essential to our resurrection when Jesus returns. The God who will raise the dead also has the power to give new and imperishable bodies to all the dead, even those who have been cremated, dismembered or those who gave their bodies for organ transplants and medical science.

Although we often prefer to avoid this subject, we need to talk with our families about how we want our bodies handled when death comes. Through faith, we can reassure them that we look forward to an eternal home with God that is free from the grief and pain of this world. We all desire a dignified disposition of our remains. You may wish to request that your family honor you by helping the living and by spending less on the funeral. I believe that there is an appropriate balance that can be achieved in this matter. May God bless you with great faith and hope for eternity in Christ Jesus.

THE NBA FINALS: MIAMI 121, OKLAHOMA CITY 106

LeBron James' triple-double leads Miami Heat to title

JAMES FINISHES WITH 26 POINTS, 11 REBOUNDS AND 13 ASSISTS EN ROUTE TO FIRST CHAMPIONSHIP

By BRIAN MAHONEY
AP Basketball Writer
MIAMI (AP) — The decision is final: LeBron James made the right call coming to Miami.

Finally an NBA champion, it's all worth it now.

James had 26 points, 11 rebounds and 13 assists, and got the kind of help that was worth leaving home for, leading the Heat in a 121-106 rout of the Oklahoma City Thunder on Thursday night to win the NBA Finals in five games.

Best player in the game, best team in the league.

James has found it all since taking his talents to South Beach.

"It means everything," James said moments after the win. "I made a difficult decision to leave Cleveland but I understood what my future was about ... I knew we had a bright future (in Miami). This is a dream come true for me. This is definitely when it pays off."

He left the game along with Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh for good with 3:01 remaining for a round of hugs and the start for a celebration he's been waiting for since arriving in the NBA out of high school as the No. 1 pick of the 2003 draft.

James hopped up and down in the final minutes, shared a long hug with opponent Kevin Durant, and watched the confetti rain down from the rafters.

The Heat took control in the second quarter, briefly lost it and blew it open again in the third behind their role players. James content to pass to wide-open 3-point shooters while the Thunder focused all their attention on him.

Bosh and Wade, the other members of the Big Three who sat alongside James as he promised titles at his Miami welcoming party two summers ago, both had strong games. Bosh, who broke down in tears as the Heat left their own court

KENTUCKY STATE AMATEUR

Twice as nice

JOHN SOMMERS / Courier-Journal

Murray State senior-to-be Patrick Newcomb fired a 71 on Thursday at Simpsonville's Cardinal Club, earning him a second-straight Kentucky State Amateur title.

NEWCOMB BECOMES FIRST RACER IN HISTORY TO WIN STATE AMATEUR BACK-TO-BACK

Staff Report
Murray State's Patrick Newcomb claimed his second straight Kentucky State Amateur Championship Thursday in the 101st playing of the event at the Cardinal Club in Simpsonville, Ky.

Newcomb, from Benton, Ky., and a senior this fall for the Racers, carded scores of 68-67-71 for a 206 total (7-under-par) and produced a four-shot win. He was 2-under through the first eight holes in the final round before hitting a stretch of four holes with three bogeys. Newcomb recovered and made a birdie at the par-5 13th before making pars all the way home.

"This felt different this year because I had been through this before," Said Newcomb who won his first Kentucky Am in 2011 at Kearney Hills in Lexington. "At the start I was thinking I was going to cruise. I was 9-under through 7. Then played no. 9 great, but had a three putt. It was a grind after that to keep it at even par for the day. I kept plodding along and hit a great shot from 250 yards out and made birdie on 13 and got in from there."

"This may take a little bit to sink in," Newcomb added. "I was thinking about that right after we finished. It was really exciting but I'm really beat up. The Cardinal Club really puts the pressure on you and you have to make good shots to score there."

Murray State ead men's golf coach Eddie Hunt praised Newcomb's steady play.

"Patrick just played great golf all three days and made very few mistakes," Hunt said. "It's quite an honor to win the state's biggest amateur event and represent Murray State among the best players in Kentucky and now he's done it back to back years. It just shows what kind of player he is."

Newcomb is only the second winner of the event from Murray State joining Chris Wilson of Mayfield, Ky., who won in 1992. Newcomb also joins a list of 13 who have won it back-to-back or more. The last to win two straight was Jordan Bland (2009, 2010).

Newcomb is now on the list of Kentucky State Am champions that dates back to 1911. He joins great players including: Bobby Nichols (1957), Frank Beard (1961, 1962), Brad Fabel (1974), Jodie Mudd (1979, 1980), Ted Schulz (1983), Steve Flesch (1986, 1988) and J.B. Holmes (2004) who have claimed the title. The Kentucky State Am has been held each year, with the exception of suspension of play from 1942-1945 due to World War II.

ROTARY CHARITY BASS FISHING

Murray Rotary Club expecting big turnout

TOURNAMENT DIRECTOR DENNIS HESKETT ANTICIPATES 80-100 BOATS

Staff Report
After raising over $7,000 in last year's Rotary Charity Bass Fishing Tournament, tournament director Dennis Heskett is expecting an even bigger turnout this Saturday.

With a total of 58 boats registered for the one-day event last year, Heskett said he anticipates anywhere from 80-100 boats in this year's tournament, putting the expected total proceeds upwards of $11,000.

Saturday's event, which will benefit the Murray Rotary Foundation for Families and Children, is set to cast off at 5:30 a.m. at Kentucky Dam Marina.

The anglers will have until 3 p.m. to make it back to Kentucky Dam Marina, where FLW Outdoors, supporters of the event, will conduct the official weigh-in.

Teams consist of two anglers per boat, and the team boasting the five biggest bass in total weight will take home the grand prize of $3,000.

There's also a $500 award for whoever catches the biggest bass of the day, and Heskett said there is a number of door prizes up for grabs for spectators at the weigh-in.

Registration is still open for Saturday's event, and anyone wishing to register the day of must bring $120 cash to Kentucky Dam Marina prior to the 5:30 a.m. cast off.

Penn State child sex abuse case goes to jury

By GENARO C. ARMAS
By MARK SCOLFORO
Associated Press

BELLEFONTE, Pa. (AP) — Jerry Sandusky was either a "predatory pedophile" who lured young boys to Penn State with gifts and access to big-time football, or a victim of now-grown men who lied to get a payout, attorneys argued Thursday as the former coach's child sex abuse case went to a jury.

As jurors deliberated into the evening, one of Sandusky's adopted sons came forward for the first time to say that his father had abused him. Matt Sandusky, 33, was prepared to testify for prosecutors at the trial, his attorneys said in a statement. The statement didn't specify what the alleged abuse was.

The elder Sandusky, who faces life in prison if convicted of 48 counts of abuse of 10 boys over 15 years, was smiling and chuckling to himself as prosecutors wrapped up closing arguments. His wife, Dottie, leaned forward in her seat with a concerned look, resting her chin in her hands.

The former assistant football coach was arrested last November in a scandal that led to the firing of beloved head coach Joe Paterno, who died of cancer in January, and the departure of the university's president.

The jury deliberated for more than eight hours Thursday before stopping at about 9:30 p.m.

Earlier in the evening, the panel asked the judge if they could rehear testimony from two witnesses: Mike McQueary, a onetime graduate assistant who reported seeing Sandusky assault a boy in a campus shower, and Dr. Jonathan Dranov, who testified that McQueary gave him a different account of what he saw.

They'll have a chance to listen again to that testimony, and restart deliberations, Friday.

Prosecutors said Sandusky was "a serial, predatory pedophile" who used gifts and the pageantry of Penn State's vaunted football program to attract and abuse vulnerable boys who came from troubled homes.

"What you should do is come out and say to the defendant that he molested and abused and give them back their souls," Senior Deputy Attorney General Joseph McGettigan III told jurors. "I give them to you. Acknowledge and give them justice."

During his closing argument, McGettigan put up smiling pictures of eight accusers when they were children; all testified at trial that Sandusky molested them.

Standing behind Sandusky, McGettigan implored the jury to convict him.

"He molested and abused and hurt these children horribly," McGettigan said. "He knows he did it, and you know he did it. Find him guilty of everything."

Defense attorney Joseph Amendola argued that the 68-year-old Sandusky was targeted by investigators who coached accusers into making false claims about a generous man whose charity gave them much-needed love.

"They went after him, and I submit to you they were going to get him hell or high water, even if they had to coach witnesses," Amendola said in a sometimes angry closing argument.

The closing arguments came after seven days of testimony, some of it graphically describing alleged abuse suffered at the hands of Sandusky, including touching in showers, fondling and in some cases forced oral or anal sex. One alleged victim — a foster child at the time — testified that Sandusky threatened him, telling him he would never see his family again if he disclosed the assaults.

Prosecutors said Sandusky met his victims through The Second Mile, a charity he founded for at-risk youth.

Eight young men testified that they were abused by Sandusky, and jurors also heard about two other alleged victims through other witnesses, including another former coach.

Sandusky has repeatedly denied the allegations, but he didn't testify during the trial.

But Amendola said the accusers' stories didn't make sense, since they also included frequent visits to Sandusky's home, trips to football games and other activities.

NBA

after losing Game 6 last year, finished with 24 points and Wade scored 20. The Heat also got a huge boost from Mike Miller, who made seven 3-pointers and scored 23 points.

The disappointment of losing to Dallas in six games last year vanished in a blowout of the demoralized Thunder, who got 32 points and 11 rebounds from Durant.

That made it easier for James, the most heavily scrutinized player in the league since his departure from Cleveland, when he announced he was "taking his talents to South Beach" on a TV special called "The Decision" that was criticized everywhere from talk shows and water coolers straight to the commissioner's office. James has said he wishes he handled things differently, but few who watched the Cavaliers fail to assemble championship talent around him could have argued with his desire to depart.

He found in Miami a team where he never had to do it alone — though he reminded everyone during his sensational postseason run that he still could when necessary. He got support whenever he needed it in this series, from Shane Battier's 17 points in Game 2 to Mario Chalmers' 25 in Game 4.

In the clincher it was Miller, banged-up from so many recent injuries that he practically limps from the bench to scorer's table when he checks in. He made his fourth 3-pointer of the half right before James' fast-break basket capped a 15-2 run that extended Miami's lead to 53-36 with 4:42 remaining in the first half. James had 15 points, five rebounds and five assists at halftime, with the Heat ahead 59-49.

Durant added 11 rebounds for the Thunder, who made a remarkably early trip to the NBA Finals just three years after starting 3-29. With Durant, Russell Westbrook, Serge Ibaka and James Harden all 23 or younger, the Thunder have the pieces in place for a lengthy stay atop the Western Conference.

But their inexperience showed in this series, a few questionable decisions, possessions and outright mistakes costing them in their franchise's first playoff appearance since Seattle lost to Chicago in 1996. Westbrook scored 19 but shot only 4 of 20, unable to come up with anything close to his 43-point outing in Game 4, and Harden finished a miserable series with 19.

Nothing they done could have stopped James, anyway.

Appearing fully over the cramps that forced him to sit out the end of Game 4, he was back to his dominant self, a combination of strength and speed that is practically unmatched in the game — and rarely seen in the history of it.

Wade skipped to each side of the court before the opening tip with arms up to pump up the fans, then James showed them nothing wrong with his legs, throwing down an emphatic fast-break dunk to open the scoring. He made consecutive baskets while being fouled, showing no expression after the second, as if he'd hardly even known he was hit. Drawing so much attention from the Thunder, he started finding his wide-open shooters, and the Heat built a nine-point lead before going to the second up 31-26.

Oklahoma City got back within five early in the third before consecutive 3-pointers by Chalmers and Battier triggered a 27-7 burst that made it 88-63 on another 3-pointer by Miller. James didn't even score in the run until it was almost over, hitting a pair of free throws after he was flagrantly fouled by Derek Fisher while powering toward the basket.

Gone was the tentative player who was mocked for shrinking on the big stage last year, too willing to defer to others who didn't possess half his talents. This time, he was at peace off the court and on attack on it, vowing to have no regrets and playing in such a way they wouldn't be necessary.

James promised multiple titles at his welcoming party, and the Heat have three pieces to build around. Pat Riley will have to fill some holes on the roster, but will likely find some players eager to come to Miami for the good weather and great chance to win.

Miller was one of them last year, and though injuries have ruined his effectiveness, his shooting turned this into the only blowout of the series after Miami had outscored Oklahoma City by just 389-384 over the first four games.

Notes: Miami became the third team to sweep the middle three games at home in the 2-3-2 format. The Detroit Pistons took all three from the Los Angeles Lakers in 2004 before the Heat did it against Dallas in 2006. ... Coach Erik Spoelstra tied Riley for the Heat franchise record with his 34th post-season win. He is 34-22, while Riley was just 34-36. ... The four-game losing streak that Oklahoma City finished the season with was its longest of the season. The Thunder had dropped three straight games to Memphis, Miami and Indiana from April 2-6.

breaking ball," the right-hander said. "Unfortunately, I missed bouncing it by about four feet and Prince killed it."

Lohse allowed a 425-foot homer to Prince Fielder in the fourth inning, and the Cardinals went on to lose 2-1 to Detroit in 10 innings Thursday. Quintin Berry's bases-loaded single won it for the Tigers.

Ramon Santiago and Jhonny Peralta started the winning rally with one-out singles off Victor Marte (0-1), who then grazed Austin Jackson's jersey with a pitch. Berry followed with a base hit up the middle through a drawn-in infield.

"I've never had a walk-off before," Berry said. "I showed it out there, jumping around, acting crazy. You don't know what to do with yourself."

Joaquin Benoit (1-1) got the win. The Detroit bullpen shut out St. Louis after Jacob Turner allowed a run and four hits in five innings.

Lohse allowed a run and four hits in seven innings for the Cardinals, lowering his ERA to 2.85. His performance came on the heels of a complete game by Jake Westbrook in St. Louis' 3-1 win Wednesday night, but the Cardinals (35-35) fell back to .500.

It seems like we're only one break away, and we know that they are going to come all at once and someone is going to have to pay for this," Lohse said. "We know we're a lot better than our record, but our record is where we are, and we can't go back and change that."

The 21-year-old Turner was recalled from Triple-A Toledo to make his season debut. Detroit left-hander Drew Smyly has been out because of a blister on his left middle finger.

Turner kept the Tigers in the game while their offense struggled. He walked five — one intentionally — and struck out three.

Fielder put Detroit in front with his long drive. The slugging first baseman flipped his bat forward after making contact with his huge uppercut swing, and there was no doubt about his 11th homer of the year.

"Kyle pitched a great game for us, but he left one 3-2 breaking ball up and Prince got all over it," Cardinals manager Mike Matheny said.

The lead didn't last long. With one out and men on second and third in the fifth, Matt Holliday lifted a foul fly that Detroit right fielder Don Kelly caught while almost falling into the seats. The tying run came home on the play, but after an intentional walk to Carlos Beltran, Turner got out of the inning on a flyout by Allen Craig.

Kelly appeared OK after his catch but eventually left in the eighth with a left knee contusion. He is day to day.

Turner, a first-round draft pick in 2009, posted an 8.53 ERA in three starts last year. He was named Detroit's top prospect by Baseball America earlier this year, and he acquitted himself fine in this game against his hometown team.

Turner grew up about 25 miles outside St. Louis, and Matheny actually helped mentor him in high school.

After Turner departed, Octavio Dotel, Phil Coke, Brayan Villarreal and Benoit pitched the next five innings, holding the Cardinals to two hits and striking out six.

The Tigers are without closer Jose Valverde, who has an injured right wrist.

Daniel Descalso hit a lead-off double off Coke in the seventh, but the Cardinals couldn't get him home.

Detroit intentionally walked Beltran with first base open again in the 10th, and again the move worked. Craig popped out with men on first and second to end the threat.

Tigers catcher Alex Avila had a single in his return from a right hamstring injury.

Notes: The Tigers optioned C Bryan Holaday to Toledo to make room for Avila. ... Detroit now travels to Pittsburgh for a three-game series. Doug Fister (1-3) takes the mound Friday night for the Tigers against A.J. Burnett (7-2). ... St. Louis plays three games at Kansas City. Joe Kelly (0-0) starts for the Cardinals on Friday night against Vin Mazzaro (3-1).

Hardin, Ky., carded scores of 78-72-71=221 and finished 34th.

"I was very pleased with how Hunter York battled back from the first round," Hunt added. "Hunter had to fight to make the cut and then was right there at the end. When you take a look at the pair of seniors we have in Hunter and Patrick, we're in good shape in the fall and spring with those two anchoring our team."

Two former Racers also played in the final round. Chris Griffin (Paducah, Ky.) current assistant coach with the MSU women's golf program had scores of 76-71-75=222 to place 40th. 2006 MSU Golf

Unsettling phone call knocks wife out of her comfort zone

DEAR ABBY: I have been happily married to my college sweetheart for 20 years. "Mark" is a great husband, a good father, and we are very compatible. He is the kind of man who brings me flowers for no reason, and who'd rather be home cooking dinner with me than almost anywhere. I know he loves me and our children.

Recently, a woman called our house, identified herself as "a friend," and told me Mark has been "playing around" all over town and she thought I should know I was married to a "perv." She hung up before I could comment. Mark swears he is not, and never has, had an affair.

Of course, I believe the man I have known for 25 years over a complete stranger, but this has been very upsetting. I now question my decision to be a stay-at-home mom and wonder if someone may be out to get me. I have become nervous in crowds, fearful that someone is watching me or us when we're out together. Mark is trying to be there for me and says we will go to marriage counseling or whatever I need.

Abby, I am happy in my marriage. Yet I feel violated, depressed and resentful that a stranger has the power to make me question my own happiness. Can you help me? -- SAD WIFE

DEAR WIFE: The prank you have described could have been perpetrated by a high school student dialing randomly, or a disgruntled person with a grudge against your husband -- or even you -- for some imagined slight.

You feel violated because you HAVE been. People can exercise power over us only if we allow it. You have a husband who loves you and a marriage many people would envy: I don't think you need marriage counseling. However, some sessions with a mental health professional might be helpful in putting this unpleasant incident behind you.

P.S. I assume this was a one-time thing. If the calls persist, the phone company and the police should be notified that you're being harassed.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I separated two years ago. For the past year, I have been dating one man exclusively. We have a wonderful relationship that has great potential. Never have there been two people with more in common.

There is one problem. I have no children and he has three. Two are adults -- responsible, good people. The youngest, "Erik," is 18, and he's the problem. He dropped out of school, doesn't work, refuses to even try to find a job and doesn't have a driver's license.

Erik has stolen money from me and also from his father to buy drugs and alcohol. Basically, the kid is good for nothing. He doesn't even have any friends left.

My boyfriend realizes his son's problems, but has essentially given up on him. I can't blame him. It has reached the point where I can't even stand to be around the kid. It doesn't look like he'll ever get a life and move on. Please tell me what to do. -- AT A LOSS

DEAR AT A LOSS: You and your boyfriend are overdue for a frank discussion. You could have a good relationship with this man if he agrees to insist that his son get counseling and drug treatment. Be firm and do not allow him to sidestep his son's obvious addiction.

A second look at the pain of colposcopy

In a recent column, I described a procedure called colposcopy, in which a woman's cervix is examined and, if necessary, biopsied to look for evidence of cancer.

During the procedure, the cervix is washed with a vinegar solution and then examined with a magnifying glass. The vinegar solution makes it easier to see areas of the cervix that may be undergoing cancerous change. I described the procedure as "generally safe and painless...but you may experience some mild cramping or a little discomfort."

A few readers wrote me to strongly disagree with my wording. One said that the vinegar wash burned. All said a biopsy of the cervix was painful.

Needless to say, I have not myself experienced a colposcopy. So I asked three gynecology colleagues here at Harvard about their experience. Two are women, one is a man. Here is what they told me:

All three colleagues agreed that their patients had never reported severe pain when the vinegar was applied. Instead, they said that some women described a brief (a few seconds) stinging sensation. How many women? One female gynecologist said "many" have brief stinging. The other female gynecologist said "very few." The male gynecologist said "only 5 percent."

What did my colleagues say about pain when a biopsy is performed? All three agreed that there was brief (again, just seconds) pain. Their patients said it felt like a "pinch."

When I asked my colleagues whether they gave patients any medicine before the procedure to reduce the pain they might experience, the two female gynecologists said they advised their patients to take one dose of over-the-counter ibuprofen an hour before the procedure.

All of my colleagues said that a small fraction of their patients are more sensitive to pain than the procedure might cause. She said that regional anesthesia -- injection of a drug to numb the nerves leading to the cervix -- was safe, but injecting the drug itself, was about as painful as the colposcopy itself. On rare occasions, she had used general anesthesia (the kind that makes you unconscious) when the patient appeared to have experienced pain with a past procedure and was reluctant to have it again without anesthesia.

So here's my conclusion from the letters I received and from the discussions I had with my gynecologist colleagues: Most women who have a colposcopy experience a few brief seconds of discomfort. Prescribing one dose of ibuprofen about an hour before the procedure makes sense. When a patient has had severe discomfort or pain in the past -- an experience they do not want to repeat -- it's reasonable to give a more potent pain medicine and intravenous sedative just before the procedure.

My thanks to the readers who asked me to take a second look into this issue.

Today in History

By the Associated Press Today is Friday, June 22, the 174th day of 2012. There are 192 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History: In 1870, the United States Department of Justice was created.

On this date: In 1611, English explorer Henry Hudson, his son and several other people were set adrift in present-day Hudson Bay by mutineers aboard the Discovery; their fate remains unknown.

In 1911, Britain's King George

V was crowned at Westminster Abbey.

In 1940, during World War II, Adolf Hitler gained a stunning victory as France was forced to sign an armistice eight days after German forces overran Paris.

In 1944, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, more popularly known as the "GI Bill of Rights."

In 1969, singer-actress Judy Garland died in London at age 47.

In 1977, John N. Mitchell became the first former U.S. attorney general to go to prison as he began serving a sentence for his role in the Watergate cover-up. (He was released 19 months later.)

In 1987, actor-dancer Fred Astaire died in Los Angeles at age 88.

Ten years ago: An earthquake in northwestern Iran killed roughly 250 people. St. Louis Cardinals pitcher Darryl Kile was found dead in the team's Chicago hotel; he was 33. Syndicated advice columnist Eppie Lederer, better known as "Ann Landers," died.

SOME IDEAS ABOUT SPOTTED TOWELS

Dear Readers: In a recent column, a reader named Sylvia wrote about a problem she was having with her BATH TOWELS looking as if someone had spilled bleach on them. Well, you had a lot to say on the issue. Here are just a few comments:

1. "I found out that the culprit for my towel spotting was the new whitening toothpastes people are buying to whiten their teeth," said Sally, via email

2. "As a mother of three daughters, I believe at least one of the causes is any medication or face wash that contains benzoyl peroxide. It doesn't show up until after the wash," said Jean, via email

3. "Same thing happened to me with two sets. Turned out to be my wrinkle cream that I use at night," said Jane, via email

4. "I've had the same problem as Sylvia. I discovered that after washing whites with bleach, you always should rinse inside the tub while filling for the next load. The next load should be light colors or delicates that aren't affected by bleach," said Helen from Nebraska

Absolutely yes to Nos. 1 and 2, maybe to No. 3, depending on the ingredients, and possibly to No. 4. -- Heloise

TRAVEL HINT

Dear Heloise: A hint for runners who travel: I save the cardboard from folded dress shirts that I get from the dry cleaners. I put it under my running shoes when I put them back in my luggage. It keeps the dirt out of your luggage, and you can recycle the cardboard when you return home. -- Roger B. in Houston

Also, you can use the plastic dry-cleaning bag that usually is hanging in the hotel closet. I use it for shoes, soiled clothes and even to hold fresh flowers I may bring home from a trip. -- Heloise

CAMERA COVERAGE

Dear Heloise: I found an easy way to ID my camera without giving out too much personal information. The very first picture is of my business card, with my name and phone number clearly showing. If it gets lost and someone checks the photos, my contact information is right there. -- David in Florida

T-SHIRT TURNAROUND

Dear Heloise: I have done my fair share of painting around the house. I, like many others, have a certain pair of clothes that I use just for painting: I still turn my shirt inside out, though. If I get a little paint on me, it is only the inside of the shirt that is ruined. That way, if I need to run an errand, like to the hardware store, I turn the shirt right side out and don't look too bad. -- Jimmie in Texas

STICKY SITUATION

Dear Heloise: A lot of restaurants put paper coasters on the table for your drinks. Once my drink starts to sweat, the coaster sticks to the bottom of the glass. I found a simple solution: Sprinkle a little salt on the coaster or napkin, and your glass will no longer stick! -- Abby, via email
