Classmates, others gather for annual Douglass Reunion

Attendees enjoy catching up with classmates in reunion's 43rd year

By PAIGE GRAVES
Staff Writer
The attendees of this year's Douglass Reunion would tell you that it's just good to see a familiar face. In its 43rd year, the reunion brought together classmates who haven't seen each other for years.

Carlton Bumphis, president of the Douglass Reunion Committee, said planning for the week-end goes on all year.

"After the program for that particular year ends, we meet and ask committee members for suggestions, including their friends and family members," he said.

Through local churches, radio and newspaper, Bumphis says the word gets out. The committee also sends out letters months in advance to let possible attendees know what they can expect.

Committee member Regina Hudspeth said the reunion was previously held in the second week of August, but for one reason or another it was held in the first weekend. Though attendance has been slightly down recently, Hudspeth said people are still coming. She noted that some attendees came all the way from Sacramento, Calif.

Bumphis said there is plenty of excitement when it comes to seeing people you haven't seen in years.

Governor visits American Cemetery at Omaha Beach

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) - Gov. Steve Beshear has concluded a visit to the American Cemetery at Omaha Beach where he participated in a wreath-laying ceremony.

thousands of Americans killed there to liberate Europe during World War II.

As a veteran, Beshear said the ceremony was "very emotional" when "Taps" was played to honor the dead.

The governor is in Europe on a trade mission where he has been meeting with political and business leaders to promote Kentucky.

Beshear visited Omaha Beach with Laurent Beauvais, president of Lower Normandy. Beauvais is calling for the D-Day beaches where American and Allied troops launched the invasion of German-occupied Europe to be listed among UNESCO's world heritage sites.

There was no shortage of food, family and friends Friday night as the Douglass Reunion held a community BBQ in the Curris Center Stables. Above, attendees enjoy a selection of hamburgers, hotdogs and all the fixings. Inset photo, age is just a number when it comes to enjoying yourself.

■ Reunion... From Front

"Some haven't been home in years, and just seeing everyone and catching up and finding out what everyone is doing makes the weekend really fun."

And catch up they did. The Curris Center Stables were alive with conversation and laughter as old friends reminisced about their younger years. Florence Hudspeth makes a point to attend the reunion since she never moved far away.

"I'm hometown, so I guess I've been coming for a long time," she said. "I was born here in Murray, and it's just good to see the homecomers every year. It's good to see who makes it back every year. Through the years the older ones have passed on, so we see the younger generation coming out. I enjoy coming every year."

Not even age can stop some from attending the reunion. 91 year old Earl Hudspeth has come to each reunion that has ever been held.

"I come to enjoy the people and to see friends, classmates" he said.

Hudspeth sat at a table with his best friend from school, someone he had not seen in 75 years, he said.

The weekend featured events such as a memorial service at the Church of the Living God, bingo, a talent show, and a community BBQ. The Douglass Bulldog Banquet will take place tonight in the Curris Center, featuring Mr. James (Jim) Stocks as the speaker.

Kentucky News in Brief

McConnell: Hardin County in drug initiative

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — U.S. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell is urging White House Drug Czar Gil Kerlikowske to include Hardin County in the Appalachia High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area.

That would mean more federal resources to combat illegal drugs in an area that has seen a significant increase in drug-related crimes.

McConnell said more than 80 Kentuckians are dying in Kentucky each month from drug overdoses. That, he said, is more than are killed in car crashes in the state.

Motorcycle ride to raise $100K for memorial

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Motorcycle riders are revving their engines for a charity ride that they hope raises $100,000 for a memorial at the National Guard Center in Frankfort.

Volunteers are raising money for the Labor Day weekend ride, called Ride II Remember, which is on Sept. 2. The money raised will be used for the construction of a memorial at the entrance to Boone National Guard Center in Frankfort.

More than 1,000 motorcycle riders will be departing from more than a dozen cities during the ride.

The Guard says the memorial is intended to honor all Kentucky Guard members who have served in any duty status from 1912 to the present. A total of $1.2 million is needed for the construction of the memorial.

Third time not charm for Hopkinsville city hall

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The third time didn't prove to be a charm for plans for a new Hopkinsville Municipal Center.

The Kentucky Department of Housing, Building and Construction has rejected the proposal, stalling construction on the facility once more.

Director of Community and Development Services Steve Bourne told The Kentucky New Era that the city has to consolidate the two sites the planned hall is scheduled to occupy before construction will be approved.

Senior Project Manager Tara Myers says the issue arose because the city didn't want to merge the two properties.

Bourne said property development owns the site and the sites will be consolidated before resubmitting the plans for state approval. Bourne hopes to have the issue resolved by the end of next week.

■ Fallen soldiers...

From Front

The following is a complete press release from the governor's office:

NORMANDY, France (Aug. 2, 2012) — Gov. Steve Beshear and First Lady Jane Beshear planted flags at the gravesites of fallen Kentucky service members today during a visit to Omaha Beach, the site of the American and Allied D-Day attack against Germany on June 6, 1944, during World War II.

"Today, we visited the American Cemetery at Omaha Beach with President Laurent Beauvais of Basse-Normandie Regional Council, and we participated in a wreath-laying ceremony at the memorial there. Jane and I also placed Kentucky flags at the graves of several Kentuckians," said Gov. Beshear. "We walked the beach where thousands of Americans were killed fighting to liberate Europe. This place has special meaning to every American. Being a veteran myself, it was a very emotional moment for me as taps was played to honor the dead."

Gov. Beshear is continuing his economic development trip, with meetings in Germany and France to showcase Kentucky's business-friendly climate and strengthen existing ties with European companies already operating facilities in the Commonwealth.

The Governor and First Lady are in Normandy as part of an American delegation in support of the Alltech FEI World Equestrian Games 2014, which will be held there. The delegation will meet with economic and tourism development officials in preparation for the upcoming competition.

implemented, including an organ donor and veteran designation imprinted on the license.

"The new licenses are the manifestation of Kentucky's efforts to improve the level of service provided to our customers, in addition to securing a credential Kentuckians use each day," Kentucky Transportation Cabinet (KYTC) Department of Vehicle Regulation Commissioner Tom Zawacki said.

"It was already time to replace the cameras and computer equipment — most of it more than 10 years old — that our circuit court clerks use in issuing driver's licenses," Zawacki said. "That made it an ideal time to also make this transition to a new license."

The new license has multiple layers of security features, all linked to each other, so counterfeiters must compromise multiple technologies — not just one.

The licenses' new features include:

- Digital watermark imperceptible to the human eye;
- Bank note-level fine line printing;
- Enhanced or Improved Dual-side lamination for greater tamper resistance and durability;
- Hologram with single-color, ultraviolet "ghost" image.

Kentucky last updated driver's licenses in 2001, with the introduction of digital licenses. The new format offered improved security. Kentucky was the first state to put the driver's image in the bar code on the back of the license. With the next stage of Kentucky's driver's license, those security measures will be tightened to provide even greater resistance to fraud.

"The big thing to us is that we're getting new equipment," Avery said. "A repair person came in three different days from Madisonville last week, so I'm excited for the new hardware. It seems like if you buy it today, its obsolete tomorrow, and our current equipment is 12 years old."

Avery said although she has not used the equipment yet, she has seen it, and she believes it will be easier to use. She also said the clerk's office would have the opportunity to go to McCracken County to look at their equipment.

"This will make the process easier, and it will make us quicker when we load new supplies in the machine," she said. "I think the changes will be beneficial, and they should make it harder to steal your identity. Our goal is to have one person with one identity."

Customers are not required to obtain new licenses until their current licenses expire. The process for obtaining or renewing a driver license will not change. The cost of $20 will also remain the same.

The clerk's office is open 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and open until 4:30 p.m. on Friday. More information and answers to some frequently asked questions can be found on KYTC's website: <http://transportation.ky.gov/pages/digital-drivers-license.aspx>.

Queen of the Mississippi to launch new service

By KEVIN MCGILL Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A comeback for old-fashioned paddlewheel riverboat travel on the Mississippi River continues this weekend with the departure from New Orleans of the Queen of the Mississippi, a brand new, quintuple-decked vessel mixing 19th century trappings meant to evoke the Mark Twain era with modern amenities including Internet access, satellite television, an exercise area and a putting green.

American Cruise Lines has set Saturday as the date for its first seven-night round trip to Vicksburg, Miss.

Future destinations include Memphis, Tenn., Minneapolis-St. Paul and, on the Ohio River and Pittsburgh.

The Queen of the Mississippi's launch comes six months after the competing Great American Steamboat Co. brought riverboat cruises back to New Orleans with the refurbished American Queen in April.

KTC completes work at Aurora bridge site

Staff Report

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet has completed work at the Eggners Ferry Bridge site at Aurora.

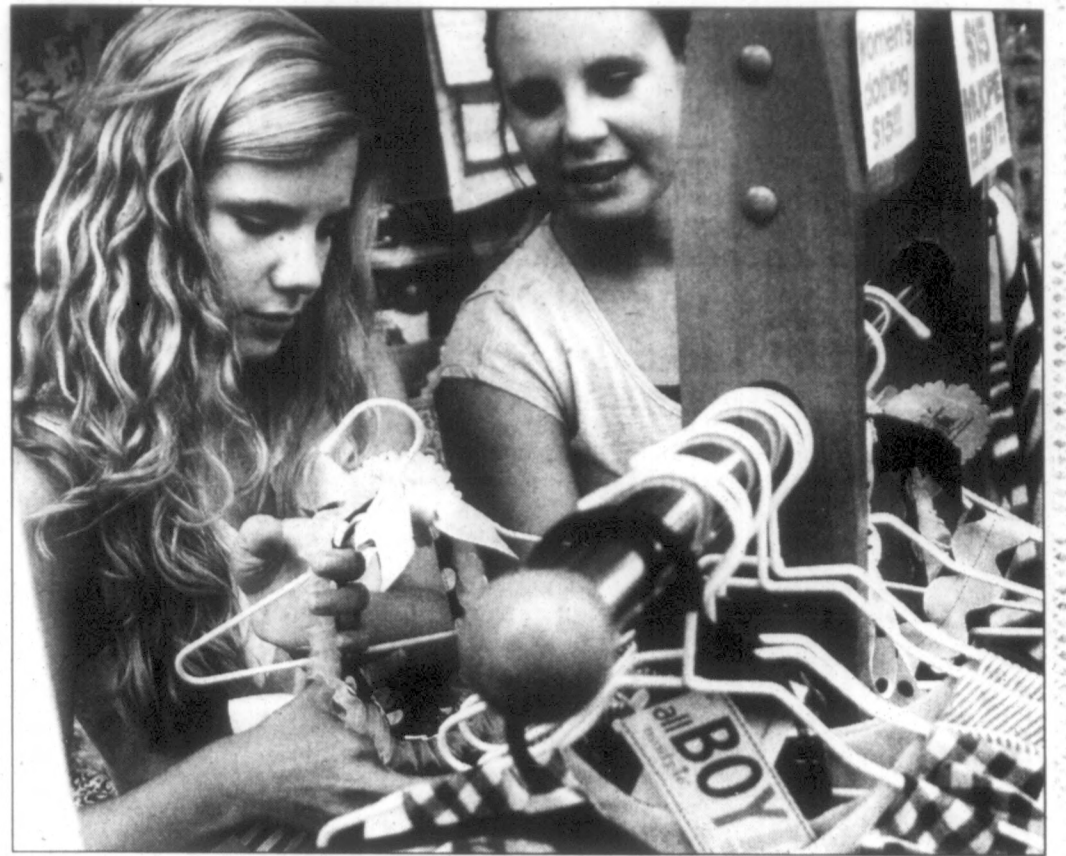

Officials reported earlier this week that KyTC crews would be working on the deck of the bridge over the Kentucky Lake as part of an annual inspection, while drilling crews worked on the water below it gathering information critical in the design of a new bridge.

The structure, which carries U.S. 68/Ky. 80 across the lake, has been under a great deal of scrutiny in recent months after a large ocean vessel collided with the bridge in January, bringing an entire span crashing into the water.

The bridge has since been repaired, and officials are now resuming efforts to prepare for the construction of two new bridges over the Kentucky and Barkley lakes. Visible work should begin by January 2013, beginning with the construction of a lagoon bridge for easier contractor access that summer.

KyTC officials instituted lane restrictions on the bridge starting Monday, leaving only an maximum eight-foot width for passing cars and trucks. The main channel of the lake also required increased caution while divers drilled the lake floor.

Officials announced Friday that both the bridge deck and water restrictions are now lifted, allowing normal traffic flow to resume.

Romney: Claim that he hasn't paid taxes 'untrue'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mitt Romney says it's time for Democratic Senate leader Harry Reid to put up or shut up when it comes to talking about the Republican presidential candidate's taxes.

Reid has been saying this week that an investor with Romney's former company, Bain Capital, claimed that Romney didn't pay any taxes for 10 years. Reid says that's why Romney isn't releasing more than a year or two of his tax returns.

Reid isn't saying just who makes that claim — and the Nevada Democrat adds that he isn't certain that it's true.

On Thursday, Romney told radio host Sean Hannity that Reid needs to, in Romney's words, "put up or shut up." He called the claim about his taxes "untrue, dishonest, and inaccurate."

National News in Brief

Sheriff officers walk past crushed cruisers at the Orleans County Sheriff's Department in Newport, Vt., Thursday, Aug. 2. A man in a large farm tractor crushed multiple cruisers at the department.

Man accused of crushing cop cars due in court

NEWPORT, Vt. (AP) — A Vermont man, who authorities say was angry over an arrest and used his tractor to drive over seven police vehicles, is expected in court.

State Police say 34-year-old Roger Pion was taken into custody in Newport on Thursday, shortly after he allegedly crushed the Orleans County sheriff's vehicles. Estimated damage was at least $250,000.

He was apparently mad over his recent arrest on resisting arrest and marijuana possession charges.

Sheriff's deputies working inside their building didn't know what was happening until a neighbor called 911. They didn't hear the ruckus outside because their air conditioners were humming. They said they couldn't pursue the man because their cars were crushed.

Pion faces numerous charges. He's expected to appear in court Friday. Authorities didn't know if he had a lawyer.

Man notches 7th DUI, this one on lawn mower

CLINTON, Tenn. (AP) — It was Lonnie Michael Haney's seventh drunken driving conviction that got him sent to prison. It was on a lawn mower.

Anderson County District Attorney Dave Clark told The Knoxville News Sentinel the court sent Haney "back to Go," a reference to the board game Monopoly.

In a plea bargain Monday, the 48-year-old Haney pleaded guilty in exchange for a two-year sentence and $3,000 in fines.

An Anderson County deputy, who knew Haney's driving license had been suspended, saw him on a John Deere riding mower on the shoulder of a road in Oak Ridge in August 2010. The deputy said Haney's speech was slurred, his eyes bloodshot and he didn't do well in field sobriety tests.

Haney must serve 30 percent of his term before release.

U.S. hiring picks up in July with 163,000 jobs added

By CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Employers added 163,000 jobs in July after three months of sluggish hiring, a pleasant surprise that could signal the U.S. economy may be resilient enough to shake off a midyear slump.

The economy has added an average of 151,000 jobs a month this year, although that's not been enough to drive down the unemployment rate, which ticked up to 8.3 percent from 8.2 percent in June.

Industrial average added 247 points to 13,126, while the broader Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 28 points to 1,393.

The Labor Department's July employment report did little to settle the political debate about the economy, with Obama administration officials and Gov. Mitt Romney seizing on the latest data to bolster their campaigns with less than four months to go until Election Day.

Before Friday's report, economists were increasingly worried that a slowdown in hiring and growth from April through June could get worse and develop into something more long-lasting. Now they are breathing a little easier.

"After a string of disappointing economic reports ... we'll certainly take it," said James Marple, senior economist at TD Economics.

Stocks rose sharply in mid-day trading. The Dow Jones industrial average added 247 points to 13,126, while the broader Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 28 points to 1,393.

The government uses two surveys to measure employment trends. Hiring is measured through a survey of businesses. The unemployment rate comes from a survey of households and is calculated by dividing the number of people who say they are unemployed by the size of the labor force. In July, more people said they were unemployed, while the size of the labor force shrank.

Economists say the business survey is more reliable.

A better outlook on hiring could make the Federal Reserve reluctant to take more action to spur growth. The Fed, which ended a two-day policy meeting Wednesday, signaled in a statement a growing inclination to take further steps if hiring doesn't pick up.

Paul Ashworth, senior U.S. economist for Capital Economics, said July's job gains were a "vast improvement" over the past four months. Still, they were well below the average 252,000 jobs a month added from December through February.

"It also isn't strong enough to drive the unemployment rate lower, which is what the Fed really wants to see. So, on balance, we doubt this would be enough to persuade the Fed to hold fire in September," Ashworth said.

The monthly report on job creation and unemployment is the most closely watched indicator of the U.S. economy. There are three reports remaining before Election Day, including one on Friday, Nov. 2, four days before Americans vote.

Stronger job creation could help President Barack Obama's re-election hopes. Still, the unemployment rate has been above 8 percent since his first month in office — the longest stretch on records that date back to 1948. No president since World War II has faced re-election with unemployment over 8 percent.

CONSIGNMENT SALE: Kentucky Kids Consignment Sale Event will have the fall sale at the CFSB Center Aug. 23 - 25. There is still room for sellers with kids and women's clothing and furniture. Volunteer opportunities are also available. For complete information visit www.kentuckykidssale.com.

Spain unveils savings plan worth $125 billion

By CIARAN GILES and HAROLD HECKLE
Associated Press
MADRID (AP) — The Spanish government has unveiled a savings package worth €102.1 billion ($125 billion) over three years as it tries to restore confidence in its public sector finances.

A statement on Prime Minister

Mariano Rajoy's official website late Friday said the government had submitted to the European Commission an outline of spending cuts and revenue increases to 2014.

The "adjustment" will save €13.1 billion ($16 billion) this year, €39 billion ($47.8 billion) in 2013 and €50.1 billion ($61.4 billion) in 2014. The total is 57 percent greater than previously forecast and Spain's regional governments will be required to contribute to the savings, the government said.

The statement also said Spain's economy would grow at a rate of 1.2 percent in 2014 by which time it is expected to begin creating jobs.

Swimming, fishing, wishing at Kentucky Lake

We keep thinking that the rainfall will come one day and we will just get out on the boat while the rain is falling and just relax in the rain. I remember a trip I did just looking for the shad baitfish, as they gathered in schools by the thousands, and they formed a barrier around my boat. I had swim trunks on so I got the idea to slip into the water very quietly and just drift into the massive school of fish very softly. It was so neat to be in a huge school of shad, eyeball to eyeball, just drifting with the current

Fishing Line
By Jerry Maupin
Outdoors Columnist

and having the shad all over me. I could surface and get a good deep breath and go back into the massive school very slowly and I was accepted as another swimmer.
My boat was about ten feet behind me and tied to my leg so there was no danger of any kind. However, all of a sudden, something grabbed me by my hair and started pulling me up toward the surface! I didn't have a choice because I was losing my hair fast! As I surfaced, there was someone pulling my hair and screaming, "Don't worry, I've got you, and I will pull you into my boat. Just relax." Well, sir, I am here to tell you, that man had made me mad, and because he would not release my hair, I punched him in the nose! He was mad then, and so was I, but he got the message about pulling my hair again. I pushed away from their boat and continued to swim with the shad baitfish.

I had the pleasure of fishing with Ryan and Jeremy Green, one day like Tuesday, and it was a great trip to be on the lake without the high winds. These two guys compete all the time and I laughed all day and listened to the chatter back and forth. The lake elevation is very low again so most of the decent size bass were out in the deeper pockets, bays and ledges. We had them throwing crankbaits, and did change colors a few times due to the color of waters we fished. There wasn't much activity in any one spot but we kept going and casting the good looking places, and each place produced some very decent bass, which they released safely back into the area. I don't even know how many were caught but it was a lot of fun to see these healthy bass giving the guys a run for the money.

I was shocked at the water elevation being so low but that may have helped to locate the other fish they caught. They made their pictures, I think, but my camera was back in my truck.
Anyway, these two guys, Jeremy and Ryan, were primed for fishing and did a super job with the water falling! I sure did enjoy their company because I didn't have a clue what would happen next. They caught some super-sized bass and released them, so I know they were happy fishing the way we did.

Not all exotic fish species are welcome in Kentucky's public lakes

From KDFWR
FRANKFORT, Ky. - In the 1870s, fishery scientists began to consider stocking exotic fish species into U.S. waters to compensate for the loss of native species.
The brown trout (Salmo trutta), a native of Europe, is arguably the biggest success story, having been first introduced into the Baldwin River in Michigan in 1884. Today, brown trout are thriving throughout North America, South America, Australia and New Zealand.
In Kentucky, brown trout are stocked annually in 10 streams and three tailwaters. The state record, caught from the Cumberland River in 2000, weighed 21 pounds.
But not all exotic fish species are welcome in Kentucky public waters, as many introductions, intentional or otherwise, have proven to be detrimental to native fish populations.
Kentucky Administrative Regulation 301 KAR 1:122 states that "no live fish, live bait fish or live bait organisms that are not native or established in Kentucky waters shall be bought, sold, possessed, imported, or in any way used or released into waters of this Commonwealth."
Also in that regulation is a list of exotic fish species that may not be imported, sold or possessed in captivity in Kentucky. This includes the piranha, Mexican banded tetra, sea lamprey, walking catfish or snakehead.
"The problem with a lot of exotics is they have a really high recruitment rate. They produce more young, so they gain an advantage over our native fish species," said Jeff Ross, assistant director of the Fisheries Division of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "They are often voracious feeders, too. They eat the same plankton or forage as our native fish species, so they directly compete against them."
Asian carp, which include silver and bighead carp, escaped from fish culturists in Arkansas in the late 1970s. They are now present in significant numbers in the Mississippi, Ohio, Tennessee, lower Cumberland, lower Kentucky, lower Salt, and lower Green river basins in Kentucky.
A serious concern is that holders of sport fishing licenses, who can legally take live bait with seines and cast nets from public waters, run the risk of unknowingly spreading the invasive carp species to other streams and lakes in Kentucky. Asian carp compete directly with native sport fish species because they feed on zooplankton.
Young silver carp look remarkably similar to the threadfin and gizzard shad that anglers target for bait. "Use live bait where you catch it," said Ross. "Don't transport live bait to other river systems or any lake. When you're done fishing it's best to dump your bait on the shore, just to be on the safe side."
The alewife (Alosa pseudoharengus) is a forage fish that became established in Kentucky in the 1990s, thriving in the deep, cool waters of Lake Cumberland. "Then we noticed that alewives have started to show up in three of our walleye lakes (Laurel River Lake, Carr Creek Lake and Green River Lake), and in Barren River Lake," said Ross.
Alewives not only feed on plankton that sport fish eat, but the sport fish themselves, when they are newly-hatched.
The establishment of exotic fish populations has spawned a whole new set of issues that anglers and fishery biologists alike will have to address in the future as competition for food and space in Kentucky's rivers and lakes increases.

Bears on the move in Kentucky

DEPT. OF FISH AND WILDLIFE OFFERS SUGGESTIONS ON SAFE CAMPING IN NATIONAL PARKS

From KDFWR
FRANKFORT, Ky. - This summer's early drought has prompted the London Ranger District in the Daniel Boone National Forest, including all campgrounds around Laurel River Lake, to implement a mandatory food storage order in an effort to prevent possible interactions between bears and visitors.
The drought has impacted the availability of black bears' natural foods, and as those foods have diminished, bear sighting reports have increased considerably in the London Ranger District.
Forest visitors must store food inside a hardtop vehicle or bear-resistant container when not cooking or eating. Burning or burying food, trash or any other bear attractant is prohibited.

Backcountry campers must suspend food and garbage at least 10 feet off the ground and four feet out from any tree or pole.
"In most areas of eastern Kentucky, this summer's wild berry crop disappeared quickly," said Steven Doherty, bear biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "This is a very important food source for this time of year and with it gone, bears are roaming extensively in search of alternate foods."
July is also the end of the breeding season for bears so, in conjunction with the shortage of natural foods, the natural tendency for male bears to travel is at a peak right now. Ultimately, this creates a heightened potential for human-bear interactions, and often in places typically not frequented by bears.

"Right now, residents living or recreating in bear country need to be particularly mindful of food and garbage containment," said Doherty. "The most effective resolution to almost all bear issues is also the simplest: eliminate access to human-related food."
Mandatory food storage orders are not new for the Daniel Boone National Forest. Existing food storage orders remain in effect for the Stearns Ranger District and the Red River Gorge. The orders define a bear attractant as any substance having an odor that may attract bears. Food, cooking grease, toothpaste, soap and garbage are considered attractants.
About 70 percent of all nuisance complaints in Kentucky are directly related to bears getting into somebody's garbage. After repeated access to human-related food or garbage, bears begin to lose their natural fear of people. Ultimately, it is that change in behavior that can cause nuisance problems in neighborhoods, towns, and backcountry areas. Kentucky law makes it illegal to feed bears - intentionally or unintentionally.

"Human-bear interactions are by no means restricted to metropolitan areas," explains Doherty. "Access to garbage or food in more remote areas causes problems every year, particularly in campgrounds." The resolution is the same, however, and eliminating access to food is the key.
"The most recent actions by the Daniel Boone National Forest illustrate the proactive nature of bear management," said Doherty. "Ultimately, food storage restrictions benefit the well being of people as much as bears."
If camping, picnicking, hiking or fishing, food should be stored in the trunk when vehicles are left unattended.
In residential areas, don't leave garbage outside overnight if at all possible. Instead, wait until the morning of the pick-up to put it outside. Food scraps, pet food, even seed in bird feeders, can attract hungry bears looking for an easy meal. Also avoid throwing food scraps outside to feed wildlife or pets as these are often overlooked lures for black bears.

"Just 10 years ago it was a rarity to even see a black bear in Kentucky," said Doherty. "Today, there is potential for regular sightings in any county east of the Daniel Boone National Forest. Contrary to popular belief, bears were not stocked in eastern Kentucky. Their natural return is a true wildlife success story and a testament to the overall health of Kentucky's forests."

Pre-registration available online for hunter education

From KDFWR
FRANKFORT, Ky. - Obtaining a hunter education course completion card for yourself or a youth in your family is easy to overlook until it is too late for the start of hunting seasons.

Hunter education courses are not required for children under the age of 12, although a child must be at least 9 years old to take the course. Those required to have a hunting license and born on or after Jan. 1, 1975 must carry a hunter education course completion card while hunting any species. This applies to Kentucky resident and non-resident hunters.

Hunters may obtain a one-time temporary hunter education exemption permit, but it is good only for one year from the date of purchase. A hunter education course completion card is good for a lifetime.

Hunter education courses are spread over 2-3 days. Training concludes with live range work.
Online pre-registration is now available for hunter education courses in September and October, the two busiest months of the year. Pre-registration will help hunter education instructors anticipate the number of participants in these courses earlier. The instructors will also have contact information in case of an emergency course change or cancellation.
To pre-register for a course, visit the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' homepage at fw.ky.gov and select the "Education and Outdoor Activities" tab. Click the "Hunter Education" tab followed by "Hunter Education Class Schedule."
After selecting a course, the information page comes up and you'll see a "Register online" link in blue. Hunter education courses are offered across Kentucky all year long.
Those without computer access can call the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources for more information weekdays at 1-800-858-1549.
A temporary hunter education exemption permit is available to all hunters for a fee of $5. The exemption permit is good for one year only and cannot be renewed. The permit is available online at the department's website.

Back in the saddle

RICKY MARTIN / Ledger & Times

Murray State head coach Chris Hatcher speaks with kickers and punters Friday morning during the opening practice of fall camp. Hatcher and the Racers finished 7-4 last season, and will open up this year against seventh-ranked Florida State.

RACERS RETURN TO THE TURF INSIDE ROY STEWART STADIUM ON FRIDAY FOR FIRST PRACTICE OF FALL CAMP

By RICKY MARTIN
Sports Editor

If a first-day practice of a third-year head coach is any sign at all, what the Racers showed on Friday morning could mean special things for Murray State come Saturdays.

Under the leadership of head coach Chris Hatcher, the Racers took to the turf at Roy Stewart Stadium on Friday morning, opening up what will be the first of 23 practices that will make up fall camp.

With All-American quarterback Casey Brockman anchoring the offense, and All-OVC caliber defensive players Brandon Wicks and Qua Huzzie leading the defense, continuity was certainly on the Racers' side on Friday.

"You come in here, and it's most of us' third year in the system with coach Hatcher," Brockman said. "So when you compare today's first practice to those in the past, they really don't compare.

"We have so many leaders and veterans on this team, that everyone knows where to go and what to do when practice starts, so it's just a matter of going through practice from that point."

Those leaders and veterans could be the reason the Racers find themselves atop the Ohio Valley Conference standings come December.

Brockman, Wicks, Huzzie and the rest of the veteran Murray State players were in good form in Friday's opening practice, and some of the new faces played a role as well.

Outside of incumbent running back Duane Brady and slew of the OVC's best receivers, 5-foot-6, 160 pound wideout Jordan Morrow turned in a solid first day, significantly cooler on Friday than the opening day of camp the previous two years.

"I don't know who controls the weather, but thanks to them," Brockman said after practice with a laugh. "It was nice that it wasn't 108 degrees today like it has been in the past, and I think that let us focus a little more on some details instead of thinking about how warm it was."

Morrow was one of the fastest players on the field on Friday morning, and Hatcher said he could utilize Morrow in a variety of ways, whether it be at running back or receiver.

Standing in front of cloudy skies and a slight breeze, Hatcher wasn't shy about his enthusiasm for Friday's practice, giving the session high marks in his books.

"This is the best first practice

LONDON (AP) — Five things to know about Friday, Day 7 of the London Olympics:

- Threetime Phelps achieves: Phelps wins last individual race at Olympics.

- Saudi woman's judo appearance hailed as victory for women in ultraconservative kingdom.

- Track and field gets underway with fans filling up stadium.

- Federer, Serena reach Olympic tennis finals.

- One U.S. boxer still fighting after overturned result.

Michael Phelps' last individual race at the Olympics ended like so many of the ones before it - with his hands on the wall before everyone else in the pool.

Phelps rallied to win the 100-meter butterfly on Friday for his third gold of the London Games and No. 17 of his career. The American was next-to-last at the turn but closed strong to finish in 51.21 seconds, just ahead of Chad le Clos of South Africa and Evgeny Korotyshekin of Russia.

"I'm just happy that the last one was a win," Phelps said. "That's all I really wanted coming into the night."

It was Phelps' third consecutive win in the event at the Olympics. He has said he will retire after the games, so his final Olympic race will be the 4x100 medley relay Saturday.

Phelps' 21st medal was part of another big night at the pool for the U.S., led by a pair of teenagers.

Missy Franklin set a world record in the 200 backstroke for the 17-year-old's third gold in London. And right after Phelps was done, 15-year-old Katie Ledecky - the youngest member of the U.S. team - nearly broke the world record while winning

Diary opens door to dialogue between mother and daughter

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 16-year-old girl who accidentally left my diary on the counter and my mother read it. When she told me, I was disappointed and hurt. To me, a diary is a place I can escape to and feel comfortable just being me. She now knows I struggle with depression and have done things I'm not proud of. I was angry and expected an apology because it was a violation of my privacy. She claims she had the right to read it because I left it on the counter, and if I didn't want her to see it, I shouldn't have left it there. Regardless of where my diary was, I don't feel she had the right to go through it because it's not hers.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

I told her I want an apology and I am willing to rebuild that trust. My mom said there is no reason to rebuild it or to apologize, and she did nothing wrong. Am I wrong for wanting an apology and a better explanation for why she did it? -- DISAPPOINTED DAUGHTER

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Your mother read your diary because it was out in the open and she was curious. Does she owe you an apology? Perhaps. However, if her level of communication with you is so poor that you live under the same roof and she hasn't noticed your struggle with depression -- whether situational or chronic -- and offered to help you find help for it, then what happened may have been a blessing. What you need with her is a closer relationship, not a combative one. Her job as a parent is to help you, and that includes teaching you to make the right choices. DEAR ABBY: A bridal tea is being held for my niece soon. The invitation says, "Hats and dresses, please." I was also told verbally by the mother of the bride (my sister) that they want everyone attending to wear hats. I told her I'm very uncomfortable wearing a hat, but would put flowers in my hair to "jazz it up" a bit. Last night, my brother-in-law called asking what I was wearing to the tea. My first reaction was that he was joking -- so I asked if he thought that it was even worth a conversation. He said if I don't wear a dress and hat, to not bother coming. I was so shocked that I said OK and hung up. I am very sad that I would not be welcomed without the hat -- something so superficial. If appearances are more important than having me there, then I really don't want to attend. I would, however, send a note and gift and also attend the regular shower being planned if invited. I don't want to alienate the family. How do you think I should handle this? I am lost for words -- although you wouldn't know it by my rambling on. Thanks for your advice. -- RAMBLING AUNTIE

DEAR RAMBLING AUNTIE: Obviously, your sister and her daughter are more concerned with the fantasy of how things will look at this tea than the feelings of those who will attend. People like that are easily offended/alienated and carry grudges. Because you don't want to cause a rift, buy a cheap hat and go to the tea. While sending a note and gift in lieu of attending is more than what most people would do under the circumstances -- and I don't blame you for considering it -- to keep peace in the family, put in an appearance.

Irregular moles should be closely monitored

DEAR DOCTOR K: I have many moles, some flat, some raised. Should I be worried about them?

DEAR READER: Yes, you should. I worry about mine.

Everyone has moles. They usually appear during childhood or adolescence. Most moles never become a problem, but sometimes they can become cancerous, causing a potentially deadly skin cancer called melanoma. Moles are small, pigmented spots on the skin. They can be flesh-colored, yellow-brown or dark brown. They can be flat or raised. They are usually no more than 1 to 10 millimeters (less than half an inch) in diameter. Over the years, you may develop more of them.

Dr. Komaroff

By Dr. Anthony Komaroff

Still, some moles do turn cancerous, so you should keep an eye on them. A relative of mine died of malignant melanoma, and I've kept a close eye on my own moles.

If patients are at risk for melanoma -- because someone in their family has it, or because they have had atypical moles or melanoma in the past, or because they got a lot of sun exposure, I recommend that they regularly inspect their skin. Use a mirror for hard-to-see areas, or have a family member regularly inspect the skin on your back and the backs of your arms and legs, the areas that you cannot see very well.

Not every brownish, pigmented thing on your skin is a mole. For example, many people have little brownish bumps on their skin called seborrheic keratoses. They aren't moles and don't turn into melanoma.

The things to look for when you are examining a mole are basically the size, the color and the border -- and any changes in size, color or border. A common or typical mole has an even color throughout and a distinct, regular border.

Some moles, called atypical moles, have different physical characteristics than common moles -- and they are more likely to turn into cancer.

Atypical moles are usually larger in diameter (5 to 12 millimeters). They may have a mixture of colors, including tan, dark brown and sometimes pink or black. The border is often irregular and indistinct and fades into the surrounding skin. Atypical moles usually appear on sun-exposed skin. But they can occur elsewhere, and they continue to develop after age 35. I ask my patients to bring any such moles to my attention.

You should inspect all of your moles, especially atypical moles, regularly for any abnormal changes. See a dermatologist if they:

- Get larger suddenly;
-- Develop an irregular border;
-- Become darker or inflamed;
-- Show spotty color changes;
-- Begin to bleed, crack or itch;
-- Become painful.

If the appearance of your moles suggests they may be cancerous, they should be removed and examined under a microscope. If they are found to be cancerous, additional skin in the surrounding area also must be removed.

Do not ignore warning signs. Melanoma is the deadliest form of skin cancer, but early diagnosis could save your life.
