FULTON, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1937.

NUMBER FORTY-SIX

BUSINESS SURVEY SHOWS PROGRESS

A business survey of the Fulton territory as the close 1937 approaches, indicates that this vicinity has a record which definitely proves that the depression has fled. Changes have been so many and varied that it is difficult to trace them down the Young Business Men's Club here reports. But these improvements have affected agriculture, business and industry.

This territory, supported principally by agriculture, first began to feel the upward swing as farm prices increased and government subsidies were allotted to farmers. Soil and climate suited to diversified farming, such crops as corn, wheat, tobacco, lespedeza, Korean and other grass products, truck fruit agriculture has raised its head. The Fulton County Farm Bureau organization has grown from a few dozen members to the most outstanding membership per capita in the state of Kentucky, and activities among the farmers has played no small part in the general economic improvement of this community.

So large has grown the livestock industry that a new stock yard has been erected here at a cost of $20,000, and last year 116,001 head of hogs, calves, cattle and sheep were shipped to bring the farmers $1,786,045.83. During the present year it is estimated that more than $2,000,000 worth of livestock will be shipped from Fulton, because nearly a million and a half dollars worth were shipped during the first six months of 1937. Aside from this revenue, the farmers have sold approximately a half million dollars in grain, white cream and milk sold from dairy herds, and poultry and by-products have brought as much or more, figures indicate.

Back in 1933 bank clearings dropped to $673,000, then in 1934 they started to rise, climbing steadily until 1937 when they reached $1,066,000, with the Christmas holiday business yet to be added. In the meantime with deposits at $826,906.23 in 1934, they increased to $1,047,910.75 in 1936, with still a larger report indicated at the close of business on December 21, 1937.

By 1, 1934, the indebtedness on county was $599,470.56, as reduced to $569,363.13 at 30, 1935, for a net reduction of $105.43. During the same year $33,905.25 in county warrants and interest and $44,535.19 in bond and bridge bonds and coupons retired. Judge Claude L. Walker, Hickman, stated in a recent financial report. Since 1934, the report shows, this county has paid off $125,891.06 in county warrants and reduced the road and bridge bond indebtedness $8,200. During this time the county has been placed on a cash basis in conformity with a new law, with non-issuance of warrants, with the result that the county's indebtedness has been lowered $214,091.06.

During this same period 22 hard-surfaced roads have been built in Fulton county, with 23 others approved and set up for construction in 1936. A new concrete bridge crossing the Illinois Central railroad tracks at Riceville, a suburb of Fulton, is now under construction at a cost of $6,000, with another overhead bridge to be erected at the south end of the city next year.

Material progress has been made by the city of Fulton in the past few years, including the refinancing of its indebtedness. A $50,000 diesel plant is now being installed to provide power for the city water works and furnish current to light the whiteway in the business district and for municipal buildings. Lake street, a principal downtown thoroughfare, has been widened and paved with paving of Fourth street extension and Mears streets completed. Considerable curb and gutter work has been done on various of the residential streets.

Over in South Fulton, Tenn., the city officials have reduced their indebtedness from $56,000 to $42,000 in the past two years, retiring the balance of a $20,000 school bond issue. These reductions and improvements in the face of readjustments

DEATHS

ROY WALKER EDWARDS

Roy Walker Edwards, age 19, who died last week in the Baptist Hospital, was buried here Sunday at Fairview cemetery. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. N. Wilford, pastor of the First Methodist church, assisted by Rev. E. M. Mathis and Rev. Woodrow Fuller, of the First Baptist church. Roy, better known by his friends as "Bub," was a popular member of the younger set here, having attended Fulton High School, and he was a stellar player on the football and basketball teams. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Edwards on College street, one brother, William Henry, and one sister, Jane, all of this city. He was a member of the First Methodist church here, and had become an Eagle Scout, the highest rank obtainable in that organization.

A legion of friends, students of the Fulton High School and teachers, paid their respect in his memory. Active pallbearers were: Carl Williamson, James Wiseman, C. A. Boyd, Jr., William Scott, J. R. Powell, J. C. Lawson, John Lloyd Jones and Warren Thompson.

G. B. BOULTON

G. B. Boulton, age 74, died at his home two miles south of Fulton Tuesday at 4:30 p. m., following an illness of several weeks. Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon from the Johnson Grove church by the Rev. T. A. Duncan, with interment following in the church cemetery in charge of Winstead-Jones & Co.

Mr. Boulton is survived by one daughter, Mrs. L. B. Allen of near Fulton, several grandchildren, nieces and nephews. He was born in Smith County, Tenn., and came to Obion county some fifty years ago. He had been a member of the Baptist church for nearly a half century, and numbered his friends by his acquaintances. He was well known in this vicinity.

SAM V. HOLMAN

Sam V. Holman, age 79, well known citizen of South Fulton, died suddenly last Saturday at 12:30 a. m. at his home on Holman avenue. Funeral services were conducted Sunday morning from the Chapel Hill church by the Rev. Paul E. Cates, with interment following in the church cemetery in charge of Hornbeak Funeral Home.

He is survived by his wife; two sons, Sam of near Harris, and Will who operates a grocery near the South Fulton school; four grandchildren, Rodney, Virginia Lee and Matha Elouse and Mrs. Sarah Frances Cummings of Newberry, S. C.

Mr. Holman was born and reared on a farm in Obion county, and was respected by a large host of friends. He had been in ill health for some time, but his death came suddenly.

Following the depression, clearly indicate the steady progress that is being made here.

Building activities took on new life early in 1936, with the result that in past eighteen months approximately a $750,000 building program has been underway. Among the principal construction jobs were the erection of the new telephone exchange and installation of a new flash-light system at $47,000; new stock yards $20,000; new theatre building $75,000; overhead bridge $86,000; paving work $18,500; addition to old factory building $45,000, and opening of new garment factory by Henry I. Seigel Company; new water works plant $25,000; construction of the new consolidated school at Cayce $40,000; the Sassafras Ridge school $25,000; erection of new business buildings and remodeling of others approximately $150,000; with building of new homes inside the city and in rural section ranging upward to $500,000, contractors estimate. During this period more than a score of new businesses have opened in the main business district.

Entering Fulton from Tennessee via the State Line down Lake-st, the motorcade passed under the Illinois Central viaduct to the Mayfield highway. The caravan was met here by two Kentucky highway patrol cars to escort it through Western Kentucky. A Mayfield delegation headed by Bob Humphreys, state highway commissioner, met the group in Fulton, accompanying them to Mayfield. Luncheon was served at Hotel Irvin Cobb in Paducah at noon and the motorcade continued on its journey into Illinois.

AFTERNOON CLUB WITH MRS. G. G. BARD TUESDAY

Mrs. G. G. Bard delightfully entertained her luncheon bridge

PROSPECTS FOR XMAS BUSINESS ARE GOOD

With ready cash from the sale of burley tobacco Kentucky and southern Indiana farmers who grow it, are preparing for a big Christmas in this section of the country, though business may be "off" in some other areas. Though tobacco receipts per pound so far are lower than last year, there has been gradually increase in prices the buyers are paying during first week of the auction warehouse sales, and growers anticipating a market below last season's, all seem happy over prospects, especially since tobacco has been included in the Congressional crop control bill.

Christmas shopping gathered momentum during the week with most cities reporting gains over the previous week and a large number over the same period a year ago, according to Department of Commerce reports from 36 key cities, just received by its Louisville District office. As was the case last week, the pickup was largely noted in the South and Mid-West with most of the large Eastern cities failing to develop the volume of sales anticipated. While purchases were varied, holiday gifts were for the most part useful commodities rather than the luxury lines. The wholesale markets were slow and somewhat spotty. Chicago reported wholesale demand noticeably improved. In New York the sentiment of the visiting buyers was a bit more optimistic though actual orders varied from fair to quite slow.

Louisville reported that although cooler weather spurred buying of winter commodities retail sales decreased 5 to 10 per cent compared to same period last year. Expectation is keen that flood of tobacco money following auction sales of Burley will bolster volume considerably.

Kentucky ice manufacturers reported 125 per cent increase in sales of ice and refrigerator equipment in 1937 over 1936.

Wholesale hardware houses reported volume decreased 15 per cent below year ago, but for 10 months of year were 10 per cent above period 1936.

Industrial employment in Louisville in October was up 5.6 per cent over same period last year; 11 firms with more than 11,500 at work November 15, 1937, showed no decrease in payrolls or personnel; 5,400 employees of two large firms awarded $200,000 in bonuses, effective December 15.

Illinois Central Railroad has notified 800 employees to report for work at shops at Paducah.

State and National Reemployment Services reported 528 placements during week 10 per cent increase over previous week.

THE LIONS CLUB

The Lions Club met in regular weekly luncheon session last Friday at which time the annual election of officers was held. A. G. Baldridge was chosen president to succeed Dr. J. L. Jones; Dr. Russell Rudd was named first vice president; Forrest Riddle, second vice president; Lawson Roper was chosen secretary and Vodie Hardin, treasurer.

In conformity with their program carried out for ten years, the club decided to distribute Christmas baskets again this year. About 100 of these baskets filled with groceries, candies, fruit and nuts will be distributed Christmas Eve.

club Tuesday afternoon at her home on Carr-st.

The lovely Bard home was decorated in the Christmas motif and a well planned luncheon was served at one o'clock. The dining table was draped with a lovely cloth and centered with a colorful poinsettia. After the luncheon games of contract were enjoyed and high score was held by Mrs. Sarah Meacham.

Gifts were taken from an attractively decorated Christmas tree and presented to each of the eight club members present.

"Certain Basic American Rights"

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

In one of the most inspiring discussions that marked the writing of our Constitution, James Madison identified the people as "the fountain of all power," and insisted that by resorting to them all difficulties would be solved.

How true the statement was, subsequent history has proved. In virtually every serious national difficulty, it has been the voice of the average citizen, rather than of the partisan politician, that spoke the constructive answer. And within recent weeks America has seen another demonstration of this great verity.

At the National Convention of the American Legion, many resolutions were heard and adopted. But the one to strike a responsive chord in the heart of every American was that which reaffirmed "our belief in, and adherence to, and our resolve to defend, certain basic American rights and institutions."

They included personal liberty, religious freedom, home and family, "constitutional guaranty to safeguard these precious rights."

This was not the voice of political partisanship—for the American Legion includes members of all parties. It was not the voice of any economic faction—for the Legion includes employers and employees, professional men and artisans; every strata of our great productive body of workers.

It was, instead, the pronouncement of the composite American, voiced by men who had demonstrated their faith in the American ideal of democracy and were willing to demonstrate it again.

It was an expression of that spirit which the Founders invoked and foresaw when they made this a government of, by, and for the people, and knew they had placed it in firm and capable hands.

ENGLISH PLUM PUDDING

THERE are those to whom Christmas dinner would not be Christmas dinner without ending with plum pudding. Scald 2½ cups stale breadcrumbs with 1 cup cream. Cream ½ pound beef suet and add to it ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup corn syrup, 5 well-beaten eggs, ½ pound chopped citron, ½ pound currants, 2 teaspoons baking powder and ½ cup brandy or rum. Turn into a buttered mold and steam for 24 hours, 12 hours one day and 12 hours the next. Turn into a tin and seal until ready for use, when it must be reheated for serving. Serve with a sauce of choice.

Joyful Mornings

A LOVED hymn which has sustained and inspired many begins with the lines: "Still, still with Thee when purple morning breaketh, When the bird waketh, and the shadowa flee, Fairer than morning, lovelier than the daylight, Dawns the sweet consciousness, I am with Thee."

These words emphasize the joy and light which illumine thought as one realizes the presence of God.

There may be those who do not look forward to the morning awakening, because to them it seems but the beginning of another day of care or worry or fear. And there are others who have yielded to the habit of allowing some time to elapse before arousing themselves to being thoroughly awake and responsive to good for the new day. But all may awaken each morning with joy and energy, fresh as the birds, when it is realized that, even though sleep has intervened between the experiences of one day and those yet to come in another, we are still with God, still loved, guided, supported, protected by the adorable Father of all.

Even though there may have been in the human experiences of yesterday evidences other than those of the peace and joy which come with the realization of God's presence, yet the dawn ushers in a new day, in which a discordant past need have no part. Each may awaken quickly, if he will immediately turn to God, and much may be accomplished if joyous, spiritual thinking is begun early. Prompt, right mental activity helps to make the day harmonious and fruitful, and to overcome any sense of discord resulting from whatever in the previous day may have been unworthy and regrettable.

Many have learned to engage at once, upon awakening each morning, in quiet prayer and contemplation of God's glory and God's gifts to His children—joy and peace and health.

It is not necessary to dwell in surroundings entirely desirable to human sense, in order to experience joyful mornings. No matter where one's home may be located, one may always realize God's power to dispel the night dreams that may have come with the darkness, or the waking dreams of a not too happy past or present experience.

Suppose one feels in the morning that the night has not been restful, one may not be glad that the dawn has come and another day has arrived. Then, if that one will but turn his thoughts from self to meditate on God and His creation, he will realize that the new day promises all the possibilities of joyous, new experiences. And if one persists in thinking of God first each morning, the habit of undue self-contemplation will surely disappear.

With practical application, Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, refers to the experience of sleeplessness on page 385 of Science and Health as follows: "You say that you have not slept well or have over-eaten. You are a law unto yourself." If one who has not slept well will refuse to voice or retain in thought that experience, and will persistently remember that God is always with His children, he will learn to anticipate only joy in the new day, knowing that also, by such true thinking, the fear, and therefore the experience of other wakeful nights will be averted.

When we comply with the demand to think truly before we go to sleep, we shall not awaken thinking untruly or unhappily.

Further on in the hymn quoted from above are found the words: "So shall it ever be in the bright morning, When hearts awaking see the shadowa flee."

The true awakening is the heart's awakening to the truth about God and man, by which one realizes health, harmony, and peace. This spiritual awakening is possible.

Each one may voice his grateful praise in the words of the Psalmist (Psalm 133:1, 2): "How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them! If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand: when I awake, I am still with thee."—The Christian Science Monitor.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Baker of Centralia, Ill., and Mark Davidson of Sandoval, Ill., will spend Christmas in Fulton with Mrs. Baker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Norris, and Mrs. Davidson on Park avenue.

Dolls Of Yesteryear

by Frances Grinstead

TWENTY-FIVE years ago a little girl's letter to Santa Claus went something like this:

Dear Santa:
Please bring me a new head for my dolly. Her name is Christina. She still has a nice body, but her head has so many dents it won't last another year. I would like one this time with real hair made into curls and eyes that open and shut.
Your trusting friend,

What has become of those Christmas dolls whose bodies could outlast half a dozen heads? When the curls went straight, or the wig dropped off, or little brother Johnnie picked the wax off the eyelids, and sister was consoled by promising her a new head. Mother took her to a department store where there was as large a display of doll heads as of dolls. There were china heads, metal heads, and heads of papier-mache. There were heads with wigs and some without. There were those with parted lips and dainty teeth showing, while others hid their smiles behind firm mouths and staring eyes.

One thing these varied heads had in common. Their necks widened into four-square bibs front and back with holes at the corners for applying the needle to the old body. The bodies in those days were of cloth, their inner substance sawdust. Where now are those torsos that could withstand endless repairing, fresh sawdust, and new heads?

They probably found their way to the attic in time and sister was promised a whole new doll. Then her trip to the department store was a matter of deciding between a "dressed" and an "undressed" dolly. Mothers preferred the latter because they would bear closer inspection as to materials and workmanship. Dolly's clothes were easily made out of the family scrap-bag or by the willing hands of the family seamstress, who did the job for recreation. Moreover, the undressed doll cost a little less. But sister had to linger over those in silks and satins with poke-bonnets and plumes covering their golden curls. They wore petticoats and often they held their fragile fingers in tiny muffs of mink and sable.

OLD SANTA CLAUS—
Some don't believe in him because He makes them spend.
They like to hoard, but never lend
That Christmas cheer
Which permeates this time of year.

They are tight-fisted cynics, these,
They never know how presents please
The little kids, and others;
The sisters and the brothers;
The careworn dads and weary mothers.

They never learned to live
Because they never learned to give.
You've got to plant before you reap.
If all you get you keep
Your soul gets barren, sterile, sour,
It takes the power
Of cheerful giving
To give a zest to living.

night seem brighter. They left together.

There was more than the bicycle. It seemed a shame, Mrs. Greene said, for mittens not to be used, and these books, now, and—well, why not? Mary would be scandalized, and her sons might not understand—but there was their room, never opened now—

"Listen, lad," she said. "I've been aching my heart out for a son. And you need a home. Couldn't we give ourselves to each other for a Christmas present? Won't you be my son?"

"Gee!" cried the boy, voicing a wonder of love and gratitude. "You can sure have me, and Merry Christmas! Merry, Merry Christmas, Mother!"

BOOKS AND PLAYTIME

I do not know how much studying we did in the old-time schools, but we did a lot of pretending. To give the appearance of being hard at work, we would walk up to the front to ask the teacher to pronounce a word for us or to get some help in arithmetic. This constant procession, equalled by the one going in the other direction to the water bucket, kept the poorly-built old schoolhouse in a constant state of unstable equilibrium. Sometimes mischievous boys stuck out their feet and tripped us; I shall not dwell on what happened next, except to say that no amount of punishment seemed to stop the recurrence of this infraction of rules. Talking was always forbidden. Some teachers had us tell at the end of the day how many times we had talked. Those who had fallen from grace used many ways to induce others to fall, like Eve getting Adam to eat that apple.

All of us liked to study geography, for the big book could cover a multitude of sins. We might filch something from the dinner buckets and baskets, we could write notes to our best girls, we could play with our popguns, or we might even take a nap in the shelter of the big book. I once caught a boy in my school brandishing his knife at me, much to the amusement of the other boys; he got so interested that he flourished the knife beyond the range of the geography.

Note-writing was always in style. If we got in a tight place, we sometimes chewed up the note hastily and swallowed it. If it were on a slate, a grubby hand could soon obliterate all offending messages. Woe unto him who got caught. He might have his note read by the teachers for the amusement of the rest of us. He might have to read it himself or might have to sit by the girl to whom it was addressed. I suspected some of my school mates of wishing for this sort of punishment. In the wall were cut several slits through the ceiling. Into these the notes that had been "received and contents duly noted" were slipped to prevent the teachers from finding them. When the log schoolhouse was torn down, several bushels of these notes were found between the weatherboarding and the ceiling. I wish I could have salvaged some of these, partly for fun and partly to see what was the general style of the notes that we wrote such palpitating little hearts and such grubby fingers.

There were never enough books. It became necessary, then, for two or more of us to sit together to study the same book. It was a great event when the one to use the book was one's best girl. We used thumb cards in those days, a combination of a book mark and a device to keep the pages clean. Since we used the gradually memorized the greater same books year after year, we portion of each, so much so that I can still repeat part of the table of contents of some of the texts.

Sometimes visitors came. Nearly every boy or girl had a younger brother or sister who came for a day or two to get the hang of things. Most of these small fellows were quiet, but some of them got to crying so loudly that the whole school had to cease operations to calm Little Brother. I remember one such youngster coming to school in a boy dress, even though he had a voice like an auctioneer. Parents came sometimes to help break in little fellows; irate parents dropped in to question the discipline (accented on the second syllable) meted out to their young hopefuls. The county superintendent came around one or two times a year and regaled us with good advice and a new joke or two. The great visiting day was at the end of school, when we said our pieces and got our treat.

On Big Brothers

As a younger brother I want to plead for justice. All my childhood I suffered from the greatest malady that a small boy can have, that is, being a younger brother. While I probably got more than my share of pie and cake, entirely too much for my digestive system, there were other things that quite over-balanced this favor. Why some one has not already demanded justice for the younger brother I cannot guess unless writers were themselves older brothers or else came between brothers and thus were able to pass on the treatment they had already received. Now I was at the end of a pretty long line and had no one that I could pick on; my oldest living nephew was born after I was practically grown. Thus I have been cheated out of my rights, but I can at least take the part of other poor, submerged younger brothers.

In the first place, in my indictment of big brothers, I resent their making younger brothers feel small and young. They are forever reminding you of something that occurred before you were born. It seems that their favorite conversation centers about things that you cannot remember. Then they are naturally larger, anyway, and they lose no opportunity to remind you of their superior size and strength. If you cry, they laugh at you and call you a baby. If you get sick, they assume that nothing else could be expected from a mere infant who has not yet lost all of his baby teeth. If you retaliate when Big Brother is sick, he promises you a beating when he gets well; and he usually keeps his promise, or, at least, you get the beating.

And then there are the clothes. Younger brothers, from Abel down, have borne this humiliation. If Abel had been the one to attempt the first murder, it might have seemed justifiable to all succeeding younger brothers. As it was, Cain has never had a real defender. I was never lost as a child; but if I had been, finding me would have been easy. Everybody knew my oldest brother's overcoat, which had served the family down to me; and the next brother's coat, cut down a size or two, was equally familiar. Worst of all I sometimes had to wear out a pair of shoes that my older sister had outgrown. Stylish occasions, when loder people strutted and looked comfortable in their new toggery, were times of wretchedness to me, with my collection of family relics.

The worst humiliation that can come to anyone is to be regarded as So-and-So's little brother. Big Brother, by arriving a scant two years before you, is George Brown or Henry Lewis; you are just George Brown's or Henry Lewis's little brother. And if Big Brother does something good or bad, everybody assumes that you cannot do otherwise. We seem to be unable to get away from the English idea that the oldest brother inherits all that is valuable in the family. I wonder whether Lawrence Washington used to introduce George as his little brother. And do you suppose that the sixteen other Franklins talked patronizingly to Ben merely because he was away down the line.

It is altogether possible that big brothers are not so tyrannical as they used to be. Anyway, this defense of little brothers is a bit delayed, as only two of my brothers are left. But I just had to champion the underdog of all underdogs, the younger brother.

RAILROAD RATE INCREASE VITAL

The American people have never indicated that they favor government ownership of the railroad industry. On various occasions, important groups have shown, to the contrary, that they are heartily opposed to it for many reasons. Not long ago an inclusive poll was taken of Chambers of Commerce and business organizations, and combined opinion was overwhelmingly against socialization of our principal medium of transport.

A new book just published by Lewis C. Sorrell, Professor of Transportation at the University of Chicago, microscopically examines the case for and against government ownership, and comes to the inevitable conclusion that it is unnecessary in this country—and extremely undesirable.

Even so, there is a real danger that government ownership of railroads will be forced on us—because the lines, under private management, have been so burdened with increased costs and stringent regulations that unless corrective steps are immediately taken they will be unable to operate efficiently and economically.

Since 1933, railroad operating costs have risen by about $663,000,000 a year. Pending legislation, such as the 70-car train limit bill, will materially add to the increase if passed. Every branch of railroad labor has been given wage increases. Yet the lines are still operating at 1933 rate levels. The result is that operating profit is negligible—and that there is not enough revenue above the bare costs of operation to provide for necessary expansion and betterment in many instances.

To counteract this, the railroads have applied for a general 15 per cent increase in freight rates. In the light of their increased operating costs, and the general rise in prices, this is a very moderate request. Granting of that increase would not necessarily assure them a fair return on their investment—but it would give them a small profit, and provide the capital necessary for expansion. And it would go a long way toward averting the calamity of government ownership.

GOOD ADVICE TO CONGRESS

A dozen leading economists recently presented to the special session of Congress a four-point formula for ending the slump in business activity.

The gist of it was, according to an Associated Press report, "Do something to encourage business." The four points included: Abolishment of the tax on undistributed profits; revision or abolishment of the tax on capital gains; ending of government competition with business; the bolstering of confidence by definitely indicating an intention to balance the budget as soon as possible and practical.

Among the economists were such recognized authorities as David Friday, Professor Irving Fisher, Colonel Leonard Ayres, B. M. Anderson, and Paul Douglas.

In addition members of the group advocated cooperation between labor and business on wages, prices and employment, and a properly conducted housing drive. All agreed with the statement of Mr. Friday when he said: "There is need of some definite, dramatic action to show that government promises of helping business are more than just a lot of talk."

Congress has been holding open season on business. Industry has been sniped at from all quarters. It has been reviled, denounced and saddled with unprecedented weight of punitive laws. The inevitable results are seen today: Worried investors, discouraged managements, retrenched of capital—all culminating in a major business recession. Continuance of this trend must inevitably turn the recession into a depression.

The four actions the economists list would go a long way toward bringing back lost confidence. They would instantly encourage the spending of money, the building of plants, the expansion of inventories, and the employment of men and women. Congress never got better advice.

PASSING OF THE WOODSHED

The slipper, the shingle and the barrel stave have passed out of the picture in Fulton homes as important instruments in the discipline of children. But there are times when one wonders if it was a good idea to dispense with them. Such punishment tended to be harsh, it is true, but in the hands of a cool deliberate and not unkindly authority, they had their value. The old woodshed played a very valuable part in the life of earlier generations.

Five young boys were recently arrested in a middle western town for wrecking classrooms in a school building. They counted it a great lark and their only comment on arrest was: "Oh, the taxpayers will have to settle for the repairs." This statement may have been in keeping with present-day ideas of political economy, but it is unsound, nevertheless. And some early training in the woodshed may have prevented such youthful depredations.

There is nothing heroic in being laid over Dad's knees and paddled with a slipper or a shingle. But history has proved that there is something effective about it. And such socially dangerous philosophy as that held by those five boys should be whacked out of them and others before they become permanent charges on the taxpayers. Growing up to be a bandit or a hard-boiled type of citizen never had a place in very many youthful minds before the old woodshed passed on.

THE QUAGMIRE

When President Roosevelt called the special session of Congress the country was virtually in a boom stage as compared with today's conditions. Stocks were at high levels. Re-employment was going ahead on a comfortable scale. Though unfavorable signs existed, they were few and apparently insignificant, and almost everything pointed to a highly prosperous winter season.

Now, in two months, the picture has changed completely. Stocks, in spite of occasional flurries, are holding stubbornly at levels close to the October lows. With few exceptions, industrial production continues to sag. Unemployment is increasingly alarmingly. And it is very likely that this winter's relief problem will be as grave as in any year since 1929.

One result of this is a complete change in the attitude of Congress—and, to a lesser degree, a change in the attitude of the Administration. The special session was primarily called for three purposes—the wage and hours law, the farm relief proposal, and the bill to create seven new regional electric authorities similar in nature to the TVA. It was assumed that these matters would absorb the undivided attention of the session, and that nothing else of moment would be brought up on the floor or in committee.

What has happened. The wage and hours law is in a state of chaos, with warring factions seeking to change it one way or another, and with a strong Congressional bloc opposed to the passage of any law of its type. The chances are against its going through in the special session.

The farm bill is in a similar predicament—it seems almost impossible that a law satisfactory to the various opposed factions in House and Senate can be prepared for months.

The seven regional authorities bill is, according to last reports, completely moribund.

Congress is almost wholly occupied with the business recession, and with proposals designed to prevent it from becoming another major, long-lasting depression. Tax reform seems nearer to achievement than at any time in the last four years. There is definite sentiment in favor of a more conciliatory general policy toward industry. There is a growing feeling that we have gone too far with regulation, especially as it affects the security markets and exchanges. There is a movement on foot to encourage business to spend on a big scale—of which the most significant development is the President's announced policy of a more friendly attitude toward the electric utilities and his recent talks with utilities executives.

The principal question now is, can Congress act fast enough and drastically enough to stop the decline? Some recent events have been encouraging, but they by no means assure a change in the downward trend. Whatever happens it seems impossible for any important change to take place before late January—a fact which augurs badly for the Christmas season.

SENSIBLE GIVING

Few things offer more interest at this time of year than a comparison of Christmas merchandise carried in the stores of Fulton today with that which the holiday buyers had set before them a dozen or more years ago. By that is not meant the size of the stocks carried, for naturally they are larger since holiday buying has increased with the years. But make the comparison on the variety and service of gift goods offered now with gift goods of earlier holidays, and you will be letting yourself in for a genuine surprise.

In former years it was considered "good taste" to give articles of wearing apparel to anyone outside the immediate family circle. No man thought of giving a feminine friend something she could wear in comfort and enjoyment, something sensible and serviceable. Such things were all right to give one's sister, but for a sweetheart it had to be a manicure set, a bottle of perfume, a set of fancy hair combs, or something along that line.

Today, happily for all concerned, everybody gives serviceable gifts and everybody expects that kind. So merchants stock that kind instead of the shoddy array of useless stuff that once passed as Christmas gifts. Today gifts of clothing, furniture, electrical devices for the home and the auto—gifts that are useful and that add actual comfort to life—form the bulk of all holiday buying. Today's Christmas gift is a sensible gift and it's purchase is in practically every instance money sensibly invested. There has been a radical change in the type of Christmas merchandise in the past few years, as a visit to the local stores will reveal. And the change has been not only for the better but for a happier Christmas as well.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

They Thought it Was Woolworth's

By IRVIN S. COBB

TO THE most casual eye it was evident that the four individuals who entered the lobby of the burlesque theatre were not city-dwellers. For some minutes they stood in a group near the entrance studying the printed scale of admission tariffs.

Having absorbed the available information touching on prices, they withdrew to a corner for an earnest conference which lasted several minutes.

Presently a member of the quartet, who plainly was one of those determined masterful persons, broke away from the rest and joined the line at the ticket window. A companion, wearing an expression of mounting uneasiness, followed him.

When the self-willed party reached the wicket, he hauled out a two dollar bill and laying it down said to the box-office man in a proud ringing voice:

"I'm handling all the money for my whole crowd. Gimme four of your best fifty-cent seats."

Apparently, this act was a violation of a prior agreement for the friend who had trailed him clutched him by the coat sleeve and whispered something in his ear.

Impatiently the prodigal paymaster shook himself free of the detaining grasp.

"About the thunder do I care?" he exclaimed. "This is only one't in a lifetime!"

Luck Bushart says a willing weeper can always get what she wants but usually isn't satisfied with what she gets.

"A postmaster may be as honest as the day is long," asserts Ernest Lowe, "but you still can't make some people believe that he doesn't read all the postcards."

When the family finally persuades Dad to have his picture made he only hopes that it won't look any funnier than is absolutely necessary.

Wesley Cummins says the reason the average man is usually broke is because he would rather be known as a spendthrift than a tightwad.

Ernest Fall declares that it makes him shudder to think what a "radical" will be like fifty years from now.

Did you ever notice how happy it makes a woman when someone asks her if her husband isn't her father?

As W. E. Flippo sees it, radio religious services will never become popular until some way is invented whereby the women can see each other's hats.

Dave Holloway says the difference between gossip and downright scandal is whether you tell it to someone or someone tells it to you.

"There never was a pretty girl," asserts Raymond Gambill "but who would be twice as pretty if she didn't know she was pretty."

Harry Barry says there are mighty few divorces in homes where there is jam on the piano keys and cookies in the cupboard.

"An old fashioned home," says Bailey Huddleston, "is the one in which parents can still tell their children bedtime stories at night instead of at the breakfast table."

Wild riders of the old west once notched their guns for every man they killed. Nowadays they notch their steering wheels.

Ray Graham says when you see a man standing with wife before a window full of hats you know who's boss at his house.

"In this modern age," asserts Frank Brady, "if you are a pedestrian a car will kill you, and if you own a car you will work yourself to death trying to support it."

Tough beef steak is always best for the exercise of chewing one bite will give you an appetite for the next one.

Wrenn Coulter says a few years ago a man was rated by the amount of liquor he had in his cellar but now it's by the amount of coal.

"You might just as well get this fixed in your mind now," asserts Ward McClellan, "and that is that the only dollar you can spend and expect to see again is the one you spend right here at home."

Harris Russell says every man needs a wife to look after his clothes, but at that a bachelor is always better dressed.

ROTTEN TO THE CORE

That the practice of exempting state and federal employees from state and federal taxes has grown into a national "racket" is becoming more and more apparent is shown by renewed agitation now going on throughout the country. New facts are coming out concerning it, and the public is getting its eyes open. "Why should a man be exempt from state taxes because he holds a state job, or from the federal income tax because he holds a government job?" That is the question taxpayers are commencing to ask, and as the subject becomes more widely discussed the demand for an answer to that question becomes more insistent. Here, as most Fultoniens view it, is something that should be looked into, and all facts in connection with it given the fullest publicity. The laws or the regulations under which a certain set of citizens can escape taxation which other classes of citizens must face, and pay, should be made plain to everyone. For here, as the average taxpayer is commencing to see it is a practice that is rotten to the core.

COLD TYPE

The printed word has an enormous power over the public mind. If people hear by word of mouth some report that seems at first thought unlikely, they are disposed to reject it. But if they see the same report printed in a newspaper they regard it as the truth. Few readers realize, perhaps, just how much time newspaper people spend running down rumors, yet it is because newspapers are careful to get the facts that what they print is acceptable as true. The ability of the printed word to influence the public is demonstrated in the power of advertising. Just as people shape their opinions and actions largely by the events which are recorded by the printed word, so their habit of buying household and personal supplies are shaped largely by the printed word of newspaper advertising. If a business concern uses the printed word to make some misleading offer to the public, the effect of such misuse will plague that business forever. People who bought such misrepresented goods would take them back, and also tell their friends. For that reason advertising is prepared with a regard for truth—and truth always pays. And that is why you can always depend on the business institution that advertises what it has for sale.

USING THE BOYCOTT

Newspaper reports that one of the largest five-and-ten-cent store organizations in the U. S. has announced that it will not in the future sell "Made in Japan" merchandise is causing nation-wide comment. And yet the average citizen will wonder why such a decision wasn't reached years ago by every store in America. Using such a boycott now as a protest against war may or may not be all right. That is open for argument. But boycotting the cheap and usually worthless Japanese junk in an effort to protect American labor and American wages has long been needed. As the average Fultoni citizen who is anxious to see the market for American-made products views it, "Made in Japan" merchandise should have been shut out of this country long before Japan began her cruel and unjustified war on the Chinese.

THE NEWS' WEEKLY SCRAPBOOK

Week's Best Recipe—

Corned Beef Hash—Chop cold cooked corned beef rather fine. Fry an onion in a little butter. When done add beef, salt and pepper to taste, moisten with left-over gravy if you have it. If not, add a little water and a piece of butter. Let cook until one side is brown, turn over and brown other side. Turn out on hot platter. Garnish with parsley. Served with diced beets.

Household Hints—

Oilcloth is a satisfactory covering for the bottom of cupboard drawers. It needs only to be wiped off with a damp cloth to freshen it. . . . A clothespin may be used for removing food which has adhered to pans and is much easier to clean than a brush or pay. . . . Soap the dish cloth before dipping in cleaner when cleaning sooty bottoms of kitchen ware. The soot is easily removed and the dish cloth rinses clean.

The Family Doctor—

Gargling with peroxide is recommended for sore throat. Or use one-half teaspoon soda dissolved in half glass of warm water as a gargle. An aspirin tablet dissolved in water is an effective gargle. Or use salt in vinegar.

The Sewing Room—

To distinguish cotton from linen, place a drop of glycerine on the material. If quickly absorbed and the spot becomes transparent, the material is linen. On cotton the glycerine rolls up into one drop. Another way is by tearing. Linen will make a sharp, shrill sound and tear hard, but the edges will be smooth. Cotton will tear easily, and the edges will curl.

A Beauty Hint—

To keep the hands soft and pretty, rub with cornstarch before doing work in the open air and they will not chap. When sewing, if you are troubled with perspiring hands bathe them in strong alum water or alcohol. Lemon juice is still a favored hand-softener. Rub them with it often.

An Inspiration—

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine."

HOLIDAY MATERIALS MAY SPREAD MOTH

Christmas trees and other evergreen materials such as boughs and roping used for Christmas decoration are now moving out of the New England section which is known to be infested with the gypsy moth. Much of this material will find its way into Kentucky where there is a real danger that the moth, a serious menace to shade and ornamental trees, may become established.

The moth passes the winter in the egg stage on trees and shrubs. Such materials are inspected before they leave the infested area but that is no guarantee that they are free of gypsy moth eggs, since these small egg masses may be overlooked by the inspector.

As a safeguard against the establishment of this pest in the State all evergreen material used in Christmas decorations whose origin is beyond the state boundary line should be burned promptly when removed from the house, says a statement by Prof. W. A. Price, head of the department of entomology at the University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. Do not throw it on the dump or otherwise discard it. If eggs are on it they will hatch next spring and in all probability the moth will have established itself in that area.

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

In one of his frequently quoted statements, Thomas Jefferson said that "agriculture, manufactures and commerce . . . the pillars of our prosperity," thrived best under the individual enterprise of average Americans.

Today Washington appears again to be giving serious thought to that point of view.

Various proposals, now under consideration, plan to unleash the unlimited energy and resources of the American people, which today, as in Jefferson's time, remain our greatest national asset.

The effort behind them is to increase employment—employment which, because it is productive in object and effect, would speed the wheels of recovery by creating new goods and increasing buying power to purchase and consume them.

This it is planned to accomplish by encouraging private enterprise—the sort of enterprise that throughout our history has created not only jobs but a great American nation.

All citizens who realize that recovery rests upon the principle of productive work at fair wages for all who want it, will hope that these measures emerge in a form that is both sound and practical. All will hope that they fulfill the promise of expanded employment opportunities for both the American people and their accumulated savings.

For many months the productive forces of America have been pinned under the thumbs of office-holders. Now, in these proposals, it is suggested that they may be restored to the hands of the people. America should urge that no change of attitude transpires at Washington to rob our people of this promised opportunity for effective use of their strength, their energy and their earnings.

These, too, are Pillars of our Prosperity.

Potatoes must be getting cheaper for several people living in the Fulton territory. It is reported that they are again making their appearance on kerosene cans.

Maybe reckless drivers could be cured by being sentenced to lead the life of a pedestrian for a few months at a stretch.

A recent government survey showed the Texas birth rate decreased from 1934 to 1935 while the death rate increased.

The Big Bend area in Texas claims the biggest tree in America. It is 10 feet in diameter—and petrified.

One way for a woman to prove that she is crazy to get married is to become the blushing bride of a man who has already had four wives.

Some women are creatures of habit. Look at the Chicago beauty show winner who is now asking for her eighth divorce.

Most Fulton women always feel a lot better after a good cry. It not only gets things out of their systems, but out of their husbands, too.

Moscow expects a tremendous building boom in 1936.

A shortage of scrap iron is reported in the Irish Free State.

China and Canada are soon to be connected by radio-telegraph.

Bubonic plague has again broken out in South Africa.

England issued one billion postage stamps to commemorate her recent coronation.

The average Fulton woman may not believe all she hears, but that doesn't keep her from repeating it.

Don't get discouraged because this country no longer has a "Public Enemy No. 1." The parole boards will soon furnish us one.

After all, the best way in the world to cure the itch for money is to scratch for it.

As some husbands around Fulton view it, their wives run everything about the house but the errands.

A child taught good manners at home needs no book of etiquette when it grows up.

The toughest job of a politician is to find some way to correct a mistake without admitting he made one.

The Fulton father who wants to tackle a hard job should try convincing his little boy that the study of algebra is going to be a great help to him when he gets to be a man.

What appears to be needed in the Orient just now is a good reliable Chinese cement.

Just by way of suggestion, do not forget to do your Christmas hinting early.

Fulton old-timers recall that there were not so many books on child-raising in their early days as there are now. But there were more woodsheds.

In this day of frequent divorces there's more courting after marriage than there is before.

Some people's idea of economy is to buy a lot of merchandise they don't have to pay cash for.

The Fulton man with rips in his coat and buttons off his clothes should either get married or get a divorce.

Still another nice thing about the wars in Ethiopia and China is nobody thought to write any dirty songs about them.

Another difficult thing to understand is why a waffle supper will get people into a church faster than a good sermon.

A New York editor says "Worrying won't help you," and that makes it an even break because most of us cannot help worrying.

The best thing that can be said about the wars of 1937 is that they didn't give a few Americans a chance to get rich in the stock market.

Improved roads in China are five times as long as in 1930.

Africa is to have 27 new radio beacons to guide flying boats.

Cuba entertained more than 150,000 tourists during the 1937 season.

WORLD-WIDE TOBACCO AND COMMERCE NEWS

The 3 districts in which the planting of tobacco is authorized in Peru are all in the Northern section of that country, one on the coast and two in the mountains, each producing a different type.

Only a small percentage of the Peruvian population of 6,000,000 is addicted to the use of tobacco, due partly to the low purchasing power of the masses in general.

An estimate of the Bulgarian tobacco crop of 1937 places the acreage from 10 to 20 per cent below the crop of 1936, in which year it was said to have reached an excessive and uncontrolled development.

Buying on the Shantung Flue-Cured leaf tobacco markets gradually opened up during the second week of November, 1937 by both foreign interests and a few smaller Chinese dealers, with prices to farmers averaging around 14 cents Chinese currency, which was the opening price a year ago.

Light colored knolls in dark colored fields are signs of bad farming.

Time to start planning for 1938—Christmas, the New Year and spring is near.

What, no eggs for that Christmas cake? Better see if the hens are getting proper attention.

Sheet erosion is "the thief in the night" that steals the fertile top soil from thousands of Tennessee farms.

A farmer cannot produce a good income by working only 120 days a year no more than his city cousin who works in a factory.

Winter on a good farm is not a period of idleness. The successful farmer makes every week-day count with productive labor.

It is not always the most expensive feed that puts the most pounds on cattle. A straw-alfalfa mixture has been found to be an excellent ration for wintering cattle.

A farm program that conserves the soil and maintains a balanced supply of food and fiber at fair prices to the producer is just as important to the consumer as to the farmer. Think it over.

The place of the terrace in Tennessee Agriculture is the title of the new publication, No. 209, issued by the U. T. Agricultural Extension Service, Knoxville.

It pays to know your cows. A total of 252 dairymen in the state now have 6041 cows in test in 13 Dairy Herd Improvement Associations, an increase of 207 per cent over last year.

LEARN WHY PULLETS FAIL TO LAY WELL

Where hens are not laying satisfactorily, flock owners advised by the Kentucky College of Agriculture in "Poultry Pointers for December" to ask themselves the following questions:

Are there culls or immature pullets in the flock?

Is the ration well-balanced?

Do the birds have access to green feed and to all of the available sunshine?

Do the birds appear drowsy or light in weight?

Do the birds have colds or roup?

Is a wet mash fed at noon?

Is there an abundant supply of fresh water?

BREEDING FLOCK NEEDS PROPER CARE AND FEED

There are two factors to be considered in winter feeding of grain to breeding ewes, states C. C. Flanshew, sheep husbandry, try, U-T. Extension specialist in

One is the cost, and the other is the condition of the ewes as they approach winter. No sheepman who hopes for success with sheep should approach the winter season without a liberal supply of the right sort of feed. He should have green feed or silage, wheat bran, linseed meal or molasses, corn, oats or wheat, or a combination of the three. Bright, rich hay cut early and well cured is also recommended.

A well fed sheep seldom gets sick, Mr. Flanshew says. The growth of the wool and the vitality of the lamb is dependent upon the kind of feed given. A mineral mixture, composed of steak bone meal, pulverized lime, wood and ashes and salt, also does much to alleviate conditions bringing about so many deaths of ewes and lambs just before or at lambing time, Mr. Flanshew states.

One pound of good, rich, well cured hay should be given each ewe a day as soon as the first heavy frost appears. This should be increased to two pounds daily with the arrival of cold weather and as much as four pounds a head when there is a blanket of snow.

A mixture of oats, corn and wheat bran is better than just corn for breeding ewes. The proportion should be one-half corn, a fourth oats, and one fourth wheat bran, or crushed whole wheat if available. From one to two pounds a day is suggested.

HORSES AND MULES HIGH

Horse and mule prices this year have been the highest since 1920, according to the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The supply of work stock is relatively small, (and it is thought that good prices will continue for several years. Tractors and trucks continue to replace horses and mules, but at a slower rate than in the past 15 years. Less than a fourth of the farms have tractors.

The postoffice department estimates its revenue from stamp collectors at -2,500,000 this year.

English Lessons

Words Often Misused

Do not say, "Four and three is seven." Say "Four and three are seven"; there are two subject nouns. "Four plus three is seven" is correct, four being the singular subject.

Do not say, "I became enthused about it." Say "I became enthusiastic about it." Enthused is characterized by some authorities as colloquial, by others as slang.

Do not say, "This is a secret between you and I." "This is a secret between you and me" is correct, both pronouns being objects of the preposition between.

Do not say, "The affect of the news was remarkable." Say "The effect of the news was remarkable." "I was deeply affected by the news."

Do not say "There aren't but ten boys in the room." Say "There are but ten boys in the room." Not but forms a double negative.

Do not say "I am going to try and see you next week." Say "I am going to try to see you next week."

Words Often Mispronounced

Longevity. Pronounced lon-jev-i-ti, o as in on, e as in bed, both l's as in it, accent second syllable and not long-gev-i-ti.

Incognito. Pronounce in-kog-ni-to, both i's as in it, first o as in of, second o as in no, and accent second syllable.

Maraschino. Pronounce mar-aske-no, first a as in at, second a unstressed, e as in me, principal accent on third syllable.

Data. Pronounce da-ta, first a as in day (not as in at), second a as in ask unstressed.

Naphtha. Pronounce naf-tha (not naphtha), first a as in at, second a as in ask unstressed, accent first syllable.

Interested and interesting. The only accent is on the first syllable, not the first and third as so often heard.

Words Often Misspelled

All right; two words, not alright. Truly; not truely. Complexion; not complection. Bookkeeper; observe the two k's. Prescription; not perscription. Height. Not height.

Word Study

"Use a word three times and it is yours." Let us increase our vocabulary by mastering one word every day. Words for this lesson:

MUTABILITY; quality or state of being subject to change. "The mutability of man's laws are unlike the immutable laws of God."

INTREPID; bold; fearless; daring; dauntless. "He deserves a place among the intrepid pioneers of history."

DORMANT; asleep, or as if asleep; hence inactive. "His dormant passions were aroused." "All vegetation was dormant."

PERSPICUITY; clearness of expression or thought. "Perspicuity should be one of the first merits of a writer or speaker."

OBVIOUS; easily discovered, seen, or understood. "My reason for this action is obvious."

EXPEDITE; to hasten the progress of. "We can expedite matters by beginning the work immediately."

THE FARM AND HOME

Fireplaces to be safe require screens that completely cover the opening. A hole an inch across may let through a spark that will result in a destructive fire. Sparks also set clothing afire and result in deaths.

No one can decide at 20 the kind of clothes she looks best in and continue to look well in the same kind at 45. A slim, dark-complexioned girl with black hair and deep sparkly eyes may look well in browns and oranges. At 5 her type is entirely different.

Where there is a windbreak, bees in Kentucky often go through winter without other protection. The College of Agriculture, however, advises some protection, and will furnish directions for making individual hive shields of roofing paper.

When baking with sour milk or sour cream, use the smallest amount of soda that will neutralize the acid. A half of a level teaspoon of soda for each cup of clabbered milk or cream is sufficient. For milk just turning sour, half that much may do.

Mint sauce: Mix half of a cup each of water and vinegar, 1 1-2 tablespoons of sugar and a half of a teaspoon of salt and bring to boiling point. Remove from fire, add 2 tablespoons of freshly chopped mint leaves, and allow the sauce to stand three or four hours.

In piping water to farm homes, in the installation pressure systems, be sure the lines are deep enough in the ground to prevent freezing. This usually means at least 2 feet in the southern part of Kentucky to 3 1-2 feet in the northern part.

A WORD OF WISDOM

We are not trying to tell you your business, or regulate your affairs, but a sensible suggestion is never out of place—and here is a timely and sensible one. Before you are tempted to answer the alluring mail-order ads offering Christmas gifts or holiday goods, wait a little while and see what local merchants will have to offer you. They will no doubt show about the same type of goods, and there's always the chance you will see something here at home you will want more than you'll want the mail-order merchandise after it gets here. It's only home-town loyalty to do this, but for your own satisfaction, and with a view to making your own Christmas a happier one, it's the sensible thing to do. It won't be long now until local merchants will be displaying their holiday wares, and advertising them. So be patient, be loyal to your home-town, and be economical at the same time. Let the mail-order ads go this year and buy all your Christmas merchandise right here at home.

WHEN you have those awful cramps, when your nerves are all on edge—don't take it out on the man you love.

Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man.

A three-quarter wife may be no wife at all if she nags her husband seven days out of every month.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

7 P. M. Friday until 4:30 A. M. Monday, on both the Christmas and New Year week-ends, and obtain the low rates.

Take advantage of this opportunity to make both Christmas day and New Year's day this year a time of greater happiness for your loved ones and friends as well as yourself. With these special low rates in effect you can talk a distance of 100 miles for 40¢; 500 miles $1.10; 1,000 miles $1.85, and greater or less distances at a correspondingly low cost when using station-to-station service. Person-to-Person service is slightly higher.

Which Shall It Be...

Railroads have been paying more for what they have to buy and charging less for what they have to sell.

In order to balance costs and prices of transportation, it is necessary to increase freight rates roundly 15 per cent. When the rates are thus increased, they will still average about 15 per cent less than they were immediately following war-time federal control.

There is only one alternative to increasing the rates. That is to reduce payrolls and purchases, which constitute the expenditures of the railroads.

Nobody wants to see that happen and unemployment increased. Railroads should relieve instead of add to unemployment in their own ranks and—through purchases—in other lines of business.

This statement is made in the confident belief that the American people in their own interest will approve the choice between these two alternatives which the railroads are making.

"HEART OF LAKE STREET"

MRS. MYRICK HONORED

Mrs. Kate Myrick was pleasantly surprised Sunday when a number of friends, neighbors and relatives gathered at her home in honor of her fifty-seventh birthday.

About thirty arrived early in the morning and each one brought a basket of food. At noon a bountiful dinner was served.

Mrs. Myrick was presented many lovely gifts.

He Sure Was Here

Two Little Dolls In Blue

"AREN'T the dolls beautiful?" exclaimed Joan to her mother, as she gazed upon the finished product of the "Two Little Dolls in Blue" which Dorothy May had ordered from Santa Claus.

"They are quite the loveliest I have ever seen," spoke mother. "I do believe that you have put your very heart and soul into their fashioning."

Joan had spent many days and nights, too, stitching a loving holiday thought into each tiny garment. The dainty materials had been transformed into things of beauty. The dresses of pale blue silk with bonnets and slippers to match, had proclaimed them the "Two Little Dolls in Blue!"

"Oh, won't Dot love them!" beamed Joan, as she again eyed the dolls from head to foot with a happy smile of complete satisfaction.

"I dare say this will be her happiest Christmas, one that she will never forget," said mother.

Christmas eve, with its bright lights and cheer, was in full progress and the two little dolls in blue were being fondled by one of the happiest little girls in the world.

Rocking in her own tiny chair Dorothy May began singing a lullaby to the dollies, wholly oblivious of the attendant surroundings. It was such an adorable sight that the others had stopped their celebrations and were beaming upon her with transformed emotion.

The spell was broken when Dorothy May suddenly stopped singing and called out, "What shall I name the 'two little dolls in blue'?"

"Well," said Joan, smiling thoughtfully, "since they are dressed in blue and are two very important little ladies, why not call one Alice Blue and the other Eleanor Blue?" And so the dolls were named.

On Christmas morning in another house around the corner, Bonny Jean awoke with the joy of the holiday and shouted, "Mother, did Santa come and did he bring me a big baby doll with curls and eyes that open and shut?"

"Yes, dearie, Santa came and brought you a very pretty doll."

Then spying it, seated beneath the tree dressed in scarlet finery, Bonny Jean clasped it to her breast. Upon close inspection she soon learned that it was the same sort of doll she had always received, only with new features.

Just as she was about to burst into protest at her bitter disappointment there came a rap upon the door and a kindly neighbor was saying, "Merry Christmas." Then with a happy smile—

"What is the matter, little girl? Hasn't Santa Claus come yet?"

"Oh, yes, he came, but he brought me the same old rag doll again. I thought sure it would be a real one this year, because I'm nine, you see."

"Oh, I am so sorry," said Dorothy May, with true feeling and thinking of the two beautiful dolls which Santa had left for her. Then with a happy Christmas thought, she whispered—something very lovely to her mother.

They all went right over to the big house on the hill nestled under its burden of Christmas snow. Bonny Jean forgot all about the rag doll when she glimpsed the great tree through the holly wreaths in the window. But when she saw the two little dolls in blue sitting beneath it her joy was unbounded. She clasped her hands and danced with glee. "Such darling dolls!" she gasped, breathlessly.

"Their names are Alice Blue and Eleanor Blue," said their little mistress, proudly.

"I want to give you one of them, Bonny Jean; which do you like?"

With unbelievable surprise, her eyes fairly dancing with joy, she clasped the beautiful doll in her arms and asked, "Is it—really—mine—for—keeps?"

"Really and truly for keeps," said Dot.

Dorothy May explained it all to her mother after the happy little girl had left, that somehow she just did not miss Eleanor Blue very much when she saw how happy she had made Bonny Jean.

In her heart she felt that it was truly "more blessed to give than to receive," and hugging the one little doll closely, she whispered, "Merry Christmas, Alice Blue."

Careful preparation of the soil before the seeds are planted saves many hours of labor in the cultivation of the crops later on.

1937 is the 75th anniversary of the founding of the United States Department of Agriculture and the passage of the land grant college act.

Pasture is the ideal use for much sloping land. Treated as a crop, pasture yields an abundance of inexpensive feed and binds the soil against erosion.

Hogs that are fattened quickly to a weight of 180 to 220 pounds produce the best quality of bacon. Heavier hogs contain too much fat to give the desired flavor.

Under good care and treatment it takes about one-half of the feed a cow can consume to maintain her body. If she is given only a half-ration she has nothing left from which to make milk.

It is estimated that land permanently ruined by erosion within the last 100 years in the United States is equal in area to all the farmland in two of the large mid-western agricultural states.

The size of the farm business not only depends upon the number of acres but the kind and amount of crops and livestock produced. Higher yields per acre and higher production per animal are necessary to higher income on most farms.

Water is as necessary to the farmer as soil. Without it no crop will grow, no living thing can survive, yet many farmers are wasting their water resources as they are wasting their soil. Careless farming practices allow water to run rapidly off the land instead of sinking into the earth to nourish the growth of crops and grasses.

A Personal Christmas Present

by Helen Waterman

MRS. GREENE sighed as she rummaged through the old trunk for the Christmas decorations. Sighed, and also felt ashamed. For why should she be lonely, with two fine grown sons, successful enough to satisfy any mother?

But Mrs. Greene missed her tousled-headed lads, and as she fingered the battered drum, the outgrown mittens, the books and souvenirs, she felt a deep pang that no one needed her any longer.

She found the decorations and bustled down. Mary, the housekeeper the boys provided, had finished. There was really nothing left to be done. She thought of other tired Christmas eves, and could stand the oppression of memories no longer. "I'm going out," she said, and with no other explanation set out into the night.

It was crisp and starlit, and she walked far. The light and warmth of a cafe attracted her, and she stopped for tea. Over the rim of her teacup her eyes met those of a small boy just outside the window. He drew back shyly, leaving a moist spot where his nose had touched the pane. He looked very hungry, not just the healthy hunger which her sons had brought home from school, but as though he were really in need. Mrs. Greene smiled and beckoned. "Come in," she invited. The boy shook his head, started to go, but the temptation of warmth and food was too much.

"That's better," Mrs. Greene approved, when he was seated opposite her, with a great bowl of soup. "I just needed someone to talk to." And before long she had heard the boy's whole story. Having no folks, he lived with an uncle, but he wanted to get out on his own. There

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dunn returned last week end to their home on Second street after a honeymoon to California and the many interesting points of the west.

Sharing Christmas

by Jocile Webb Pearson

I AM a happy little tree. I stand beside the front entrance of a white cottage on a quiet street. Each Christmas time I bloom out in beautiful colored lights, and all who pass share my beauty and catch something of the joy of Christmas.

But I was not always happy like this. Once I lived in a great forest, surrounded by trees so tall I could only catch a glimpse of the blue sky above me, and I felt very small and lonely. I, too, wanted to be tall; to look out on the big world like the others and feel the sun shining through my branches. I would stretch out my limbs as far as I could, and send my roots deeper into the earth, but my progress was so slow I grew discouraged.

One day I saw a man and a boy coming through the forest. The man carried something over his shoulder and they seemed to be looking for something. Then the boy saw me and cried: "Look, father, there is just the tree we want." He ran over to me and fairly hugged me in his eagerness. The man looked me over. "Fine," he said. But when he began digging with the thing he had carried on his shoulder I began to tremble. I felt my roots snap one by one and soon I lay a tumbled heap on the ground. Life seemed over for me.

Next I was tied to a funny looking thing on wheels, that spluttered and growled when the man and boy climbed in and we started off down a twisty little road that wound through the forest, then out on a big shining highway until we came to a wide driveway that led through a sloping lawn to a white cottage. Here I was untied and put into a large earthen jar filled with sand and carried into the house, and set in a corner of a big room beside a sunny window. Oh, the joy of having the sun on my branches. I began to feel less scared and to look about me.

In a big mirror opposite I could watch the man as he fastened me upright. Then he put a string of lights from my top to my toe, whistling softly as he worked. Then I heard a door open and a rush of feet—a little boy and a girl dashed into the room crying: "Mamma, come quick, and see our Christmas tree." They clapped their hands and danced about me. Soon the mother came with a box filled with shining lovely things and my plain green dress was covered with sparkling jewels. I hardly dared look in the mirror for I remembered I was only a humble tree after all, and what I saw could not be me at all; but the great silver star on my topmost branch made me feel very happy. I seemed to draw courage from just looking at it.

After a time I was left to myself. I was glad, as I needed to rest up a bit and get used to my strange surroundings. It grew dark outside and snow was falling; but inside my star shone and a quiet peace came over me.

Then once more the doors opened and a merry group of people came in. This time there were Father and Grandfather and Grandmother, too; and Mother leading the little boy and girl. Everyone was saying how lovely I was; but I did not want them to look at me. I wanted them to see two little faces outside pressed against the window pane. The boy saw them first. "Look, Daddy, Mamma!" he shouted and pointed to the window. "There are two children out there. Bring them in, Daddy; give them some of our Christmas." And the little girl clapped her hands and cried: "Oh, do, Daddy, it's cold out there!"

When they were brought in looking rather scared, but glad, I was so happy I almost shook my bangles off. Then Mother made music on a big box with shining keys and everyone sang Christmas carols. Then Father told the old story of the Shepherds and the Star that led to the Christ Child. Then a jolly man with a red coat and a pack on his back gave everyone presents, including the little strangers. There were candies and nuts, plenty for all, and such a bubble of happy voices. I felt the thrill of it myself and the big star glowed in sympathy.
