THE LISTENING POST

Some prankster, and I have no idea who it might have been, sent me an odd piece of advertising a few days ago. Going to the postoffice I found a long envelope addressed to me in person and wondered what it might contain. I opened it up and found it to be an advertising folder. It appeared to be a brand new folder, although the type styles seemed a bit old fashioned. I looked at the thing without my glasses at first and failed to read just what it was. Then I donned my trusty glasses and was startled to read the heading.

For the heading ran like this: "Plants Where the Star Car is Being Manufactured." Inside the folder were pictures of the huge automobile plants of the Durant Motor Company, located in Elizabeth City, New Jersey, Lansing, Michigan and Oakland, California. Three huge plants, located at strategic points of the country, bearing the name of a man who made huge fortunes in the automobile industry and lost them, and a man whose name is almost forgotten today. On the back page of the folder appears pictures and prices of the various models which were being manufactured.

There is the five passenger touring car, priced at $348, but if a buyer wanted a starter and demountable rims he must pay $443. There is the runabout, priced at $319, but again the starter and demountable rims come extra. There is the coupe, with a price tag of $580, including the starter and rims. The sedan sells for $645, also including the extras and the station wagon, which looks very much like a delivery truck, is priced at $610.

No date appears on the folder, but it can't be many years ago that these cars were being manufactured and sold. Today no trace of such cars can be found, except that now and then we see an old Star car bumping along some road, and wonder what sort of old car it is. Durant has been largely forgotten for many years. Yet about 1928 I bought one of those Star touring cars and drove it for several years. In fact, I believe I sold it to Ira Little in a trade for a Plymouth sedan in 1929. I still remember how sad Ira looked when I drove that old Star into his place. He had already made the trade, sight unseen, and the new Plymouth was ready for delivery. I started down to take the Star to him and get the new one, and the old car was knocking and pounding so badly that I stopped at a filling station on the way and put in a couple of quarts of oil. I figured that this might make the car run a bit better, and when I drove into the Read and Little place I was like a pillar of smoke. That fresh oil was booming out the exhaust, the pistons were slapping, the car was chattering, and for some reason Ira took a notion he was being swindled. "My Lord," he said bitterly, "what is this I have traded for?"

I did not remain to comfort Ira. I turned over the car to him, got in the new car and left the place and without a backward look. Yet a few days later I saw a price tag on that old Star which was more than one hundred dollars higher than Ira had paid. That was eleven years ago, and I guess these days dealers don't try to get more for trade-ins than they pay. Or do they, Ira?

Another curious memory of the Star is the place where I bought it. Down there where the Irby Fashion Shop now is, where

Sites For Bomber Assembly Plants Are Approved

Factories' Capacity Is About 2,400 Medium Size Planes Per Year

Washington.—A plan to gear the motor car industry to mass production of bombing planes advanced a step today with the approval of sites for assembly plants at Kansas City, Mo., and Omaha, Neb.

Operated by aircraft companies which will use parts largely fabricated in automobile factories, the two plants together are to have capacity to turn out some 2,400 medium two-motored bombers a year.

Two additional plants also are contemplated elsewhere west of the Mississippi to produce large, four-motored bombers at the rate of 1,200 annually.

Supplemental Plants Under revised plans of the War Department and defense commission, these will supplement the output of conventional aircraft plants which are expanding toward a scheduled production rate of 36,000 military planes of all types by early 1942.

However, probably 15 months will be required, according to officials estimates, to start mass production under the scheme to employ facilities of the motor car industry. At the same time it was reported authoritatively that an original plan submitted to automobile manufacturers to produce parts for 12,000 bombers has been scaled down because of limitations which some officials consider unsurmountable at this time.

Cotton Growers Vote On Quotas

Four thousand cotton growers of Kentucky, principally in Fulton, Hickman, Graves, Carlisle, Marshall and Calloway counties, are eligible to vote in today's referendum on cotton marketing quotas for 1941.

The 1941 quota-proposal must be approved by two-thirds of those voting to become effective. The Agricultural Adjustment Act provides specifically that cotton loans as made this year, cannot be continued unless the quota plan is approved.

This voting is being conducted at the Fulton City Hall.

Jury Probing Campaign Costs Hears Democratic Treasurer

Washington.—Beginning a broad investigation of campaign spending by both major parties, a Federal grand jury heard details of Democratic expenditures Thursday from Party Treasurer Oliver Quayle, Jr., and then listed to testimony by John W. Hanes and Lewis W. Douglas, former New Deal officials who supported Wendell L. Willkie.

Although scheduled for testimony, Chairman Edward J. Flynn of the Democratic National Committee and Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of the Republican National Committee did not appear. Both have been away from Washington, and have not yet been served with subpoenas.

Longish Probe Possible Maurice Milligan, former Kansas City District Attorney and a Special Assistant Attorney General, is in charge of the inquiry. It is designed to ascertain whether party violated provisions of the

Ship Joins Fleet Every 12 Days, Navy Reports

Old Equipment, Some 'Bottle Necks' Delay Peak Of Efficiency

Washington.—The Navy has speeded its construction program to the point where a new ship is joining the fleet every 12 days, it was disclosed today but Navy yards still are short of peak efficiency because of much obsolete equipment and some "bottle necks" in work.

These reports of the ship building program came from the national defense commission at Rear Admiral S. M. Robinson, chief of the bureau of ships, simultaneously with authoritative words in other quarters that costs of construction at naval shore stations and Army posts were running sharply in excess of the original estimate of $2,000,000,000.

Competitive Bids Blamed Completion among contractors for skilled workmen was said to be one reason why costs were exceeding estimates.

In order to secure certain types of craftsmen, contractors on some army jobs, informed sources said, have been forced to let the men work on Saturdays and Sundays at double time rates—and to take Mondays and Tuesday off to keep within a 40-hour week.

Neither Army nor Navy officials would discuss the probable extent of the cost increase but it was learned the Navy already is preparing to ask Congress for additional funds because of it. Congressional sources said the cost increase might run 20 to 25 per cent.

Wages Hike Costs Officials said advances in wage scales throughout the country and higher material prices were the chief factors responsible for the climbing costs but that payment of overtime to expedite the work also was a factor.

Most contractors can pass the higher costs on to the Army and Navy because the contracts were negotiated on a "cost-plus-fixed-fee" basis.

State's Warrented Debt To Fall To 20-Year Low At Month's End

Frankfort, Ky.—Treasurer Ernest E. Shannon announced today the state would pay off $5,659,600 of its outstanding warrants on December 31, reducing the warrant debt total to its lowest point in more than 20 years.

The payment will leave in outstanding warrants $4,097,400 at two per cent and $45,878.72 in those previously called and no longer bearing interest. The two per cent interest will bear two and a half per cent interest after December 31.

Shannon recently predicted all the warrants would be called for payment before Gov. Keen Johnson leaves office in 1943, and today he indicated another payment on the debt would be made before the end next June 30 of the current fiscal year.

On June 30, 1920, the treasurer's records show, the state warrants

Mrs. R. M. Redfearn Dies After Long Period Of Illness

Mrs. R. M. Redfearn, widow of the late R. M. Redfearn, well known druggist in Fulton for many years, died at a Shawnee, Oklahoma, hospital yesterday afternoon, following a long illness. Mrs. Redfearn, who lived in Fulton for many years, had been living in the Oklahoma city for the past few years, and was in Fulton on a last visit only a few weeks ago. She had been ill for some time, and underwent an operation in Shawnee Thursday morning.

Funeral services are being held in Shawnee today and the body will be brought back to Fulton, Tenn., tomorrow for burial. Surviving are a sister, Mrs. Tom Irby, and a brother, John Stuart of Shawnee. Nieces and nephews are Mrs. Curtis Ledford, Floyd and Rochelle Irby, Miss Phyllis Stuart, Arrington Stuart and Jack Stuart, all of Shawnee.

Mrs. Redfearn was born in Whiteville, Tenn., and was a teacher in Bolivar for a number of years. There she was married to the late R. M. Redfearn and the couple came to Fulton when Mr. Redfearn entered the drug business here. After coming to Fulton she interested herself in all the activities of the community and for years was one of the outstanding workers in church and community affairs. Gifted to an unusual degree in speaking and writing, she was a teacher for the Woman's Bible Class of the First Methodist Church for several years, and likewise took an active part in the various women's organizations. Her manner was gracious, her mind was keen and of these talents she gave unsparingly during the long years of her residence in Fulton.

When Mrs. Redfearn left Fulton to make her home in the West it brought much sorrow to hundreds of friends, and these friends grieved even more when the news came of her illness. Her death adds to this abiding sorrow, for in the many years spent in Fulton Mrs. Redfearn proved herself a gracious lady, a steadfast friend and a lover of all humanity. In her passing a really great life comes to a close.

5 Detroit Brothers Form Engine Crew On Navy Vessel

Detroit.—It is improbable that any man has given more sons to the Navy than has Clarence Bondine, Sr., of Detroit.

His oldest son, Fred, 30, joined up twelve years ago and since then has brought in his four brothers until the complete Bondine contingent in the Navy lists Fred, Ralph, Nelson, Clarence, Jr., and Cliff.

The brothers comprise the full engine crew of the U. S. S. Duquesne and range in rank from chief machinist mate to third-class fireman.

The boys' mother died twelve years ago.

2 Billion Dollar Stabilization Fund "Secret Weapon"

Washington.—Officials pictured the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund today as America's "secret weapon against totalitarian economic penetration."

They described the fund in such language to explain why within the last week it had advanced credits of $50,000,000 each to China and Argentina. Additional transactions of like character could be expected, they indicated, particularly with Latin American countries.

The value of the fund as a secret economic weapon was, in their opinion, ample answer to criticisms such as the one made yesterday by Senator Taft (R-O.) charging these credits were violating the purposes of the fund.

Strengthen Relations These officials took the view that credits such as those given China and Argentina would not only strengthen American business relations with these countries but also lessen the chance of economic, if not military, aggression by unfriendly nations.

China has been resisting a Japanese military invasion for years, they pointed out, and Germans with Nazi sympathies have been reported active in Argentina and other Latin American republics.

Class Organizes "Union" Strikes Against Exams

New Brunswick, N. J.—Prof. Walter B. Peabody of Rutgers University jokingly told a labor relations class which complained of too much homework that it should organize a union.

Yesterday the professor announced the class period would be devoted to a quiz. The class staged a wholesale walkout, leaving the puzzled professor with a handful of blank papers.

The students had quietly organized their union. One of its "working conditions" was that exams must be announced in advance.

G. C. Buchanan Injured In Wreck

G. C. Buchanan, carpenter of Fulton, was painfully but not seriously, injured in a car wreck at 6:20 this morning when the car in which he was riding struck a bridge abutment on the Fulton-Union City highway. Mr. G. Guill, also a carpenter, was driving the car and the two men were enroute to Louisiana to be employed.

Mr. Guill said that lights from an approaching car blinded him as he neared the bridge, causing him to strike the abutment. The car was badly damaged.

Mr. Buchanan was brought back to Fulton for medical aid. He sustained mouth and head injuries, while Mr. Guill was only slightly injured.

British Ship Seeks Port For Repairs

Armed Merchant Boat Uruguay Bound After Chasing Away Raider

Montevideo, Uruguay.—The 20-122-ton British armed merchant cruiser Carnarvon Castle, steaming here to repair the damage done her in a south Atlantic sea battle with a masked German raider, broke her radio silence briefly tonight to report that the Nazis' superior speed had enabled her to escape after "a stern chase."

The message added that the action had been at long range and that the Britisher had expended "considerable ammunition." Then the wireless fell silent without having mentioned the extent of the vessel's damage of casualties.

Studying reports of the action, a naval expert here suggested that the German commander probably was following instructions in fleeing the British, remarking:

Seek Small Prey "The mission of these raiders is not to give battle to enemy warships but to prey on lightly armed merchantmen."

British officials here began arranging at once to provide quick repairs on the Carnarvon Castle upon her arrival, which now is expected to be tomorrow.

It was believed that the German was one of a group of vessels especially equipped before the war began to hound British shipping. These are powered heavily, armed with the most modern of 6.9 inch cannon and are understood to be able to outrun anything save the regular warship.

The Uruguayan government has given the Carnarvon Castle permission to anchor here, it was learned on good authority, and the news that she was putting in indicated to some naval men that and other British ship perhaps had taken up where she left off in the chase of the Nazi vessel.

Ridgely Boy Hurt In Wreck

Kenneth Murphy, a farmer of Ridgely, Tenn., was injured in a car wreck yesterday morning about eleven o'clock, the accident occurring four miles out from Fulton on the Water Valley highway.

Mr. Murphy, accompanied by Tom Barton of Ridgely, who was driver of the car, and Jim Inman, of near Fulton, were driving an A-Model Ford, headed toward Water Valley. When they made a left turn off of the highway a car driven by a Mr. Pierson, a salesman for Perry-Mid Roofing Company of Jackson, Tenn., struck them.

Mr. Murphy was brought to the Fulton Hospital where his injuries are said to not be serious.

Lack Of Specialized Education Called Hindrance Of Defense

Atlanta.—Lack of specialized education and training for "things the world is willing to pay for" is hampering the national defense program and increasing the Federal relief program, U. S. Education Commissioner John W. Studebaker says.

Here to explain the Government's vocational educational plan at the convention of the Georgia Association of School Administration, the educator declared: "Need for a system of education for skilled jobs is obvious. The shortage of skilled workers is hampering the defense program. A workman cannot be trained in a day. Proper training

Phillips And Morgenthau Talk Finance

Providing Balance Sheet On State Of British Resources

Washington.—Frederick Phillips, undersecretary of the British Treasury, said today after a conference with Secretary Morgenthau that he was giving the United States "a balance sheet on the state of our resources and cost of supplies in the United States."

The British representative conferred with the Treasury Department chief for more than an hour.

Sir Frederick said, however, that he talked only facts with Morgenthau and "we didn't discuss any question of policy."

He indicated there were many questions yet to be discussed and that he was preparing several studies over the week end before returning to talk to Morgenthau again on Monday.

Not At Loan Stage Before entering the Treasury, Sir Frederick told newsmen who asked about loans that he was "not up to that stage now."

He said afterward he had not been asked yet to talk with any administrative or legislative leaders of the government besides the Treasury.

Asked about suggestions that the British might sell some of their West Indian islands to the United States to get more cash for war purchases, Sir Frederick said promptly, "That's outside of my scope. I deal only in financial matters."

The Phillips visit was the climax today of a controversy stirred up recently upon the return to the United States of Lord Lothian, British ambassador, when Lothian said that Britain was nearing the end of its financial resources for purchases in this country, and might soon need financial, as well as material, help.

Before the discussions at the Treasury began, Senator Nye (R-N. D.), announced that he and a group of colleagues were ready to battle to the bitter end against any attempt to extend financial aid to the British.

"Actual Entry Into War" Nye told newsmen that this opposition bloc would base its fight on the contention that loans to Britain "mean actual entry into war." He predicted that a proposal for loans would be accompanied by one for "American naval convoy of British supplies."

DAMNING WITH FAINT PRAISE

It appears that a shakeup is due in the national defense program, and preliminary signs indicate that William S. Knudsen, who now heads the commission now, entrusted with this job, may not be retained. Advice from Washington tend to prove that he has been tried and found wanting. According to a well known formula, Knudsen is being damned with faint praise, and when this happens it usually means that such a man will soon be thrown out of the picture.

Even Knudsen's friends in the Administration are now said to be remarking that he is "just a production expert; that he cannot delegate or organize; that he is unhappy away from an assembly line and is no administrator." These things are all true, but the meat of the matter is that Knudsen is no politician. He does not know how to do things in the political way. The political way is to take plenty of time, even more than plenty, to do a job; never offend any friends of the Administration; use all money which may be necessary, perhaps more; be certain that a friend of the Administration gets all the fat contracts, and above all things, never do anything directly and without lost motion. Naturally, in following the political pattern, little will ever be accomplished, but nobody will have their feelings hurt.

Mr. Knudsen probably knows little about the political pattern. His working life has been spent in manufacturing things by the shortest and most economical pattern. He has had nobody's feelings to consider, and his only concern has been to get the job done and make the best product possible at the lowest possible price. He does not know how to forget quality, but he does know how to ignore and forget all sorts of red tape. It is doubtful if he ever had any experience with bureaucracy, and if such ever showed up in his previous jobs he knew how to handle it. The way to handle it is to ignore it and treat it as though it never existed.

Mr. Knudsen could do a job for the nation if given the opportunity. His past record proves that certainly. It is extremely doubtful that he can do this job under existing conditions. He has waited too long to learn the political pattern, and it is likely that many times he has been appalled at the restrictions fastened upon him in Washington. Doubtless he took the job of defense commissioner with high hopes of doing something worth while, and as the weeks and months passed along and the paralyzing hand of bureaucracy fastened itself upon his efforts he probably became extremely discouraged.

"Unhappy away from an assembly line!" That is certainly a damning indictment to bring against a man who hoped to set up an assembly line for the government which might result in real production of defense items. Knudsen knew he had the talents for this work. He knew that the job could be done if earnest efforts should be permitted. He knew that the job had to be done, but conditions have baffled him. Now he appears on the way out. With divided authority, with jealousy and strife running wild in Washington,

BRITAIN SCOTCHES PEACE FEELERS

Britain scotches the peace talk that has been going the rounds with a smashing vote in the house of Commons—341 to 4—against a leftist motion to seek a basis on which to end the war. Hitler's diplomatic moves to call a halt on hostilities now that most of Europe is under his heel and now that he and his Axis partner are facing serious difficulties, are thus brought to an abrupt halt.

The House of Commons' action was most timely. The approach of Christmas was giving the peace movement real impetus. According to rumors, Premier Salazar, of Portugal, would approach England on the question of an armistice and Foreign Minister Saracoglu, of Turkey, would broach the matter to Greece. The Pope and President Roosevelt would be brought into the picture, if possible. The immediate cause of the diplomatic activity was to extricate Italy from what threatens to be a military debacle in Albania.

But Nazi peace feelers have been out almost continuously since the conquest of Poland. There was a three months' interval between the invasion of Norway and the fall of France, but they were put forward again. When Britain refused to take notice of the overtures, the Luftwaffe was launched. On the eve of the Presidential election, following the September and October air raids, the movement was again detected. Now a whirl in the dovecote can be heard again but it signifies nothing, except that Hitler needs another victory to give his war-weary people—this time a peace dictated on his own terms.

The proposal of the Vatican for a Christmas truce has been definitely rejected by Prime Minister Churchill. The suggestion of peace—a peace that could only mean slavery—is supported only by the Left wing Laborites who made it.—Courier-Journal.

Knudsen was whipped before he ever started.

Yet it is likely that what Knudsen has tried to do will finally be done. Some day the nation will grow desperate over the situation and enough red tape will be cut to allow the work to really start and then the work that Knudsen did will be remembered. It is no failure that should be charged up to Knudsen that the job has been a failure to date. Rather it is a failure of the system that prevails in Washington. It well illustrates the difference between the totalitarian states and the democracies. We want no dictators, but somewhere there must be a happy medium, and until we find that happy medium we are not going to get this defense job done.

Woman's Club In Regular Meeting At Club Home Yesterday Afternoon

The Fulton Woman's Club met Friday afternoon in the club home on Walnut street. For the occasion the club auditorium was beautifully decorated with poinsettias, holly, red candles and greenery.

Members of the hospitality committee were hostesses for the afternoon with Mesdames Leon Browder, Ward Bushart, Maxwell McDade and Lawrence Holland acting hostesses. Mrs. G. M. Frey and Miss Mary Moss Hales served as pages and Mrs. L. O. Bradford presided at the register.

The business session was presided over by the president, Mrs. Mansfield Martin, assisted by Mrs. Aaron Butts, secretary. Several visitors and former members were welcomed and the following new members were announced: Mesdames Sterling Bennett, R. E. Sanford, Will Holman, James Wallace Gordon, and Lucian Strow. The club voted to postpone the January meeting until the second Friday in the month. A substantial profit was reported from the Thanksgiving party recently held.

At the conclusion of the business

the meeting was turned over to Mrs. Warren Graham who announced the program. Mrs. C. E. Kelsor of Union City, who previously had been announced as the December guest speaker, was unable to attend on account of illness and Miss Mary Royster very graciously filled her place. In her most charming and interesting manner, she gave a brilliant review of Audubon's America by Donald Culross Peattie. The Woman's Club is always proud to present local talent and on this occasion the club was unusually fortunate in its selection.

The second portion of the program was under the direction of Mrs. M. W. Haws. Several musical selections in keeping with the Christmas season were enjoyed. The first number was a vocal solo, "A Star Was His Cradle," by Del Riego, sung by Miss June Dixon with Mrs. Steve Wiley as accompanist. "Christmas Eve," and "Sleep Holy Babe," was sung by a ladies' chorus directed by Mrs. Haws. The chorus was composed of Mesdames Eldridge Grymes, Charles Gregory, R. S. Williams, J. T. Fowlkes, Walter Voelpel, T. A. Parham and Misses June Dixon, Elizabeth Butt and Catherine Williamson with Mrs. Glynn Bushart as accompanist.

During the social hour refreshments were served from a table banked with Christmas greenery and centered by a huge crystal punch bowl which was flanked by tall red tapers.

Approximately ninety members and visitors were in attendance at this meeting, many of whom lingered to chat in the cozy club rooms which were so pleasantly reminded of the approaching holiday season.

MRS. HAROLD THOMAS ENTERTAINS LAST NIGHT AT CONTRACT PARTY

Entertaining at another delightful contract party, Mrs. Harold Thomas was hostess to twelve friends last evening at her home on West street. The three tables were attractively arranged for the games amid decorations of red and green in keeping with the Christmas holidays. Snow white cloths were used on the tables, the centerpiece of each being a red carnation corsage. At the conclusion of the games, the high scorer at each table was presented that corsage.

High score for the three tables of players was held by Mrs. William Seath and her prize was a double deck of cards. Mrs. Johnny Cook made second high score and received a kitchen novelty. Floral prints were presented to Mrs. Harry Brady, who held low score. Winning the corsages were Mrs. Harold Jones, Mrs. Felix Segui and Mrs. Roger E. Mulford.

Mrs. Thomas served a beautiful plate consisting of a salad, Christmas tree and star sandwiches, suggestive of Christmas.

Guests besides those mentioned were Mrs. H. H. Buge, Mrs. Paul Boyd, Mrs. Howard Edwards, Mrs. Homer Wilson, Mrs. Paul Workman and Miss Margaret King.
