In Poor Health

Some months ago Dr. M. T. Freeman of Savannah, Ga., wrote me in a letter about a little child he had recently treated. The child was suffering from infantile diarrhoea, and he gave this recipe for it: 'The neighbor furnished him a sack of dried figs, which he softened in a little water, and then ate them slowly. The child's health improved after this treatment, and he continued to eat figs for some time."

Dr. Freeman said that this treatment was very efficacious in cases of feeble health and vertigo.

The young man was very grateful to Dr. Freeman for his help, and he wrote to thank him for saving him.

Dr. Freeman said that he had been treating similar cases for a long time, and he had found that the dried figs were very beneficial.

He also said that he had read about the benefits of figs in the Bible, and he had always tried to use them in his practice.

Dr. Freeman said that he was very grateful to the neighbor who had given him the figs, and he said that he would never forget his kindness.

Dr. Freeman said that he had been treating similar cases for a long time, and he had found that the dried figs were very beneficial.
