The question of when to wash a car can be a bit of a mystery. When is the best time to wash a car, and how often should it be done? Many drivers may not know the answer to these questions. However, there are some general guidelines that can help you determine when it's time to wash your car. Generally, you should wash your car every one to two weeks when you live in a dry climate, or more frequently when you live in a humid climate. It's also a good idea to wash your car after a long trip or after driving in the rain, dirt, or salt. In addition, you should wash your car when the exterior surface has accumulated dirt, dust, or debris that can cause damage to the paint. It's important to note that washing your car too often can also be harmful. Overwashing your car can strip away the protective coating on the exterior and leave the paint vulnerable to damage. Therefore, it's important to find a balance that works for your car and your lifestyle.

A HANDICAPPED MINORITY

To be the college professors and some parents talk. America is breeding and creating a vast lot of softies to cope with a tough world. They should talk—and be heard by their fruits. But let them, if it helps any (as it probably does).

Two of them to occupy that uncomfortable piece of furniture known as the judgment seat have reported from far-separated points of the United States. One is a Harvard professor, the other speaks from the chair of a chair in the Colorado State College of Education, from where they all sit the audience in melancholy.

The "youth of today" as it passes under their tired and heavy gaze is glib, cynical, fat, lazy, and conspicuously wanting in moral character. Their youthful hands are weak in vain for a man who does not shun hard work.

This discovery is an evidential news value. It.bites no dog. It has been made from generation to generation, fromsemester to semester. Badoglio had to go.

No one should be blamed, but the men found inside colleges should be considered. A numerous majority are of the underprivileged and the handicapped. An unkind earlier life has deprived them the interest in literature and the sciences. The liability of the observer to discern the healthy trees in the brown and ragged forest.

GERMAN AID FORESEEN IN ITALIAN SHAVE-UP

The "resignation" of Gen. Pietro Badoglio as Chief of the Italian General Staff was inevitable as the result of the continued reverses of Italy's armies in Albania. Rome is to be the goal. Somebody had to bear the blame for the failure, planning and execution of the campaign of invasion. As Italy's foremost military strategist was in charge of operations the onus naturally fell on his head, but the onus had to go.

There is more to the shake-up than the mere shifting of the blame from the inept admiral to the field to the capable commander at headquarters. The hero of the Italian campaign is applauded by a veteran of the World War who for more than twenty years has been an industrialist and not a soldier. The chief recommendation of Gen. Ago Cavallero has been that he is strongly pro-Nazi and opposed to the invasion of Berlin. The shake-up therefore indicates
