KENTUCKY TRADE IS MAKING PROGRESS

General trade conditions, as reflected in the report of the Department of Commerce's New Trade Section, remained somewhat quiet throughout the month of January.

The retail trade of the state was reported to have shown a moderate increase. Although the increase was not as pronounced as in previous months, it was still a welcome indication of a steady improvement in the retail trade picture.

In the wholesale trade sector, there was a noticeable drop in prices. This was attributed to the decrease in raw material costs which had been brought about by improved crop conditions.

The transportation industry continued to be in a period of readjustment. However, there were indications of a gradual improvement in the movement of goods.

The manufacturers in the state were generally operating at a higher level of production compared to the previous month. This was partly due to the increased demand for goods.

The situation in the farm area was relatively stable. There was a slight increase in the value of farm products, which was reflected in the rise in the prices of agricultural commodities.

In conclusion, the trade conditions in Kentucky during January showed a steady improvement, with the wholesale trade showing a decrease in prices, the retail trade increasing moderately, and the transportation and manufacturing industries maintaining a higher level of activity compared to the previous month.

It seems that the above people of the world are becoming more and more dependent on each other. The earth is a planet without a place to go, and we, the human race, are forced to get along with each other.

FARMERS RECEIVE POULTRY DIVIDENDS

For the past five years the hatchery here has been doing its best to get this type of business going. The hatchery has been very successful in this line, and this year it is reported that the hatches will be even greater. The hatchery is able to offer a large variety of hatches, and the farmers are able to choose the one that best suits their needs.
