Whiskey or no Whiskey: Which?

Perhaps people wonder what became of me, but the whiskey business is still as big as ever. It is a very, very big business, and there are many wealthy and influential men who benefit from it.

The real issue is not whether we should have saloons, but whether we should have the option law. The option law is a terrible evil that is doing great harm to society.

I am glad to say that the concept of a general option has been widely accepted. It is a principle that will certainly prove fatal to the saloons power today. Does it make sense to have saloons in our cities, or should we have a general option to ban them?

There are many who believe that the option law is a necessary evil, and that it is better to have some kind of control over the saloons than to have no control at all. But I believe that the option law is a mistake, and that it will only lead to more problems.

In the long run, I think it will be better to have no option law at all, and to enforce the laws against saloons in a more strict manner. This will be a difficult task, but it is necessary for the welfare of our society.

In conclusion, I would like to say that the option law is a mistake, and that it will only lead to more problems. We must work to enforce the laws against saloons in a more strict manner, and to eliminate them as a threat to our society.

A Wise Appeal

I have been receiving letters on this subject, and I am in favor of the option law. I think it is a good thing for society that we have the option of having saloons or not.

I believe that the option law is the right decision for the country, and that it is in the best interest of the people. I will continue to support the option law, and I hope that others will do the same.
