British Fleet Unchallenged In Adriatic

Business confirms report that the British Fleet has been unchallenged in the Adriatic.

London.—Britain's Mediterranean fleet, to one of the most important bases of the war, has been unchallenged on the Adriatic until the last few days. The Allied supply forces, including British vessels on the Adriatic, have been able to operate with relative freedom for several days as the Italian air and naval forces have been preoccupied elsewhere. This has enabled the Allies to reinforce their forces in the Adriatic and to continue operations without interference.

Dog Gets Drunk And Is Sent To Jail To Sleep It Off

Brookton, Mass.—A good-natured man with a sharp edge to his temper, wowed up in a police cell and an imaginative exhibition of size as a result of a row with a drunken dog. The man, who goes by the name of John Doe, was arrested after getting into a fight with his dog, who had run away from home. The dog, a small terrier, was taken to the police station and held overnight. The man was released on bail the next day.

E. C. Roddick, Local Railroad Man, Shoots Self Through Head This Morning, Dies Instantly

E. C. Roddick, 19, auditor for the Elgin Central Railroad, who had been missing for several days, was found in a ditch near the railroad tracks. His body was discovered by a passerby, who immediately notified the police. Roddick was last seen on Christmas Eve, and his disappearance had been reported to the authorities. The cause of death is believed to be suicide. The second man fight, Weaver clinic, remains about the claim of a man who has entered a stern protest.
