CHRISTMAS REVERIES

(By Mrs. Addie Nolen)

As the Yuletide approaches, memory turns back the leaves of our yesterdays, and again, we see the stockings of five little girls and one little boy hanging on the mantelpiece in my mother's bedroom. One little girl and the little boy were doubly orphaned, but they were quickly adopted into our family circle, as if they had always belonged.

Christmas morning, when we were awakened to see what "Santa" had brought us, we grabbed our stockings, sat on the floor in front of the fire and emptied the contents for mother to see. The stockings were usually filled with candies, nuts, etc., and in each was some little gift for which we had expressed a desire. One Christmas, I found a pair of gloves in my stocking and I wondered how Santa knew I craved a pair just like them and I thought it lovely of him to be considerate.

Father owned two farms, one in Kentucky and other in Tennessee, and he always had a bountiful supply of apples, walnuts and hickory nuts brought from the farm and stored for winter use. Mother added to the collection each Christmas a bushel of oranges and we reveled in the fruits, nuts and turkey dinners with all the cakes, pies and everything an old-fashioned Christmas dinner meant. Sometime Santa left several packages of fire crackers that the other children enjoyed shooting. I never did and I am still not crazy about the little pests.

After we quit hanging up our stockings, a dear little neighbor boy for several years hung his on the mantelpiece where our's used to hang. His mother said his Santa at our home cost her a pair of new stockings each year, as his old ones had holes, or had been darned. Christmas morning, as soon as the little fellow saw the smoke from our chimney, he came for his stocking. He never failed to sit on the rug, pour the contents out to show us what Santa had brought him.

One year, he expressed a desire for a bandanna handkerchief and when he found one in his stocking, he exclaimed "Oh a danbanna handkerchief--just what I had written for." There was nothing to worry about if he did get the dan before the ban and his English was not entirely correct. He was happy and so were we.

Today, children require expensive presents and a lot of them. I can but wonder if they get any more genuine pleasure out of Christmas than we got out of the simple inexpensive way we celebrated it.

Several years ago, I was invited to a Christmas dinner at a friend's home. The family tree was in the living room bulging with lovely presents. There was a little girl about twelve years of age in the family and I counted forty-five presents with her name on them and said "You should be a happy girl to have so many beautiful presents." She replied, "I am not happy. I wanted a diamond ring and didn't get it." If Santa had put brass rings in our stockings, we would have thought it lovely in him, but our way of celebrating Christmas is ancient history and doesn't fit in with the times.

This year, our Christmas is different from any we have ever known. It has been nearly a year since a real tragedy happened to us. My sister fell and was so severely injured that she is still compelled to use two crutches. For many months, her suffering was terrible, but during the days and weeks, which at times seemed endless, there were many friends whose lovely and untiring attention made us feel that after all, life was worth the living. Since we have been "shut-ins" we were compelled to have dealings with a number of business men, with one exception, all have been kind and considerate and have helped us arrange so that our added burdens were bearable. At times, I have wondered if our anxiety for a speedy recovery for my sister has been trying to Dr. Glynn Bushart's patience if so, he has never made us feel uncomfortable about it. He has always responded when we called, and left with us a bottle of encouragement when he left.

Eden Gets Foreign Post In Cabinet

"Man Of Munich" Will Succeed Lord Lothian Of Britain

London, --Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, erstwhile appeaser and "Man Of Munich," Monday became Britain's Ambassador to the United States in a move that restored dapper Anthony Eden as Foreign Secretary.

Eden, leaving his post as War Minister, returns to the same post which he quit in February of 1938 in protest against the appeasement policies and coddling of the dictators under Lord Halifax, then Prime Minister.

Eden Popular In Russia
The appointments, announced from No. 10 Downing Street shortly after midnight by King George VI's "gracious pleasure," were threefold in their purpose:

1. Filling the Washington ambassadorship suddenly left vacant by the death of Lord Lothian.

We are also indebted to Dr. Nolen Hughes for his interest in our behalf, and we are wishing them a Happy Christmas and a Prosperous New Year.

We have been physically unable to do any Christmas shopping, not even to select Christmas cards, but each day, our mail box is flooded with beautiful cards wishing us a Happy Yuletide and blessings throughout the entire New Year.

Many are from friends dear to us in our home town and many are from far distant states, friends we knew and loved in the days of "Auld Lang Syne." Now, I am wishing I could wave a magic wand and bring rich blessings to each and every one of them, but as that is impossible, I can wish that the Christ who came so many years ago to bring peace and good will to earth will bless protect and guide them through the coming New Year.

Several days ago, one of the most charming and delightful friends I ever had passed away in Shawnee, Oklahoma. When Mrs. Redfearn was teacher of the Woman's Bible Class in the Methodist Church on East State Line Street, I was her assistant for a number of years. I have often thought that her life was a splendid example of the life Hegman thought one should live.

"I shall pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that I can do or any kindness that I can show to any human being, let me do it now. Let me not defer it, or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

To Mrs. Redfearn's host of friends, the world doesn't seem quite the same since she left us, but her beautiful life stands on--Impassable monument to her memory.

HER's will be a glorified Christmas.

Springfield, Ill. -- Marriage is not sufficient grounds for deferred classification--the registrant must show there is a dependent--State Draft Director Paul G. Armstrong said today in a statement emphasizing that no local draft board classification is permanent.

"The deferment of any registrant," he said, "is subject to termination whenever the basis for such deferment ceases to exist. Every registrant must notify his board of any change which requires his reclassification."

"Also the local board will reclassify any registrant whenever it receives new information warranting such action. Reclassification also may occur as a result of changes in the rules and regulations of the Selective Service Act." Armstrong's statement was intended, he said, to correct a general misunderstanding on the part of registrants concerning their classification. He said a great many believe that if they are married, they will be automatically deferred.

Hunt Intensified For Slayer Of Georgia Officer

Decatur, Tenn. --Search for a fugitive motorist who Friday night killed Corp. W. F. Black of the Georgia State Highway Patrol when stopped for reckless driving centered in this mountainous area Sunday.

Georgia and Tennessee patrolmen set bloodhounds on a new trail after a farmer reported that a man answering description of the one sought passed through his yard about 3 a. m.

Saturday night a man, his left arm in a sling, exchanged shots with patrolmen near here after abandoning an automobile stolen earlier near the Chattanooga airport.

Capt. D. F. Simmons of the Georgia Highway Patrol said that the suspect was thought to be Charles Butler, alias Charles Coates, an escaped Missouri convict.

Mrs. Major Has Poem Published

Julia Mayflower Major, 208 Cedar street, is one of the authors whose poems are included in Poets of America, 1940, Democracy Speaks, a 700 page volume just published. More than 12,000 poems living in every part of the United States and Canada competed for a place in this volume; only a small percentage of these were found to write poetry of sufficient merit to be accorded a place in the book. The volume contains the work of little-known authors as well as that of writers who have been published in many magazines and books.

Marriage Held Not Sufficient Excuse For Draft Deferment

Washington, --A. F. Hinrichs of the Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated Thursday that the aircraft industry would need to expand its labor force by 252,000 workers by next August to produce the aircraft already contracted for under the defense program.

Hinrichs' estimates were presented at a meeting of war, Navy and defense commission officials. He figured the program would require an expanded working force of 203,600 employees.

Says 550,000 Needed
Hinrichs rounded out the picture of the labor supply problem facing the Government and the aircraft industry by estimating that 550,000 workers probably would be needed by next fall.

He said the development of the labor force would have to be a gradual process, probably through the moving up of semi-skilled workers into skilled occupations and the replacement of the semi-skilled force from other sources.

Synthetic Glycerine Produced Cheaply From Petroleum

New Orleans, --Glycerine, important raw material for the explosive nitroglycerine, can be made from petroleum on a practical commercial basis, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers was told at its recent meeting here.

Dr. E. C. Williams, vice president and director of research for Shell Development Company Emeryville, Calif., said that his company already was operating a semi-commercial plant for producing synthetic glycerine from petroleum.

Seen in the new process was the assurance of an ample supply of the material at a reasonable price, and possibilities of discovery of further uses of glycerine as a raw material.

In peace-time its largest use is the manufacture of alkylid resins, for varnishes and lacquers, but

Child Hopes Santa Will Tell Mother To Return Home

Pueblo, Col. -- Five-year-old Delores Harris hopes Santa Claus will bring her a priceless gift--her mother.

Since Mrs. Vera Harris left Pueblo three years ago, Delores has been living with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Smith.

The Smiths, who heard from their daughter only once, had feared she was dead.

But an Associated Press story from Reno about a divorce suit--Vera Mae Harris of Pueblo vs. Dallas Harris--gave them new hope.

The story said the plaintiff charged three years' separation, and mentioned one child--Delores Harris, 5.

Delores and her grandparents are waiting for Mrs. Harris' Reno attorney to contact his client.

2 Men Get Life For Hurling Man From Freight Car

Whitley City, Ky. --Life imprisonment was imposed on two Negroes tried a second time by a Circuit Court jury on a charge of throwing a white man to his death from a moving freight car.

The Negroes, Lee Clemons Lett and Hoyt Butler, both of Pittsburgh, were convicted and sentenced to death at their first trial last year, but won a new trial. The second verdict was returned Wednesday.

They, together with two other Negroes, were charged with throwing three white men from a moving freight train in September, 1939. Two of the men were killed.

Butler and Lett were tried for murder in the death of William Tittle, 42, of Cincinnati.

The two other Negroes were convicted of murder and sentenced to fifty-year terms.

The charges against Stabler were not disclosed.

Stabler, born in Stuttgart, Germany, was reported as having criticized the British blockade which he was quoted recently as saying, interfered with a tobacco business he conducted as a sideline.

Authoritative British sources declared Stabler had taken pictures en route.

Few Granted Executive Pardons Continue In Crime

Washington, --The Justice Department reported Sunday that of 1,555 beneficiaries of executive clemency in the first six years and three months of the Roosevelt Administration only 87 of 5.59 per cent had subsequent criminal records.

The report, requested by President Roosevelt and made public by the White House, showed the largest percentage of later law infractions was among the group whose original sentences were wholly or partially commuted. Of the 219 recipients of this type of clemency, 32 or 14.61 per cent, had later conflicts with the law.

New Airport Ends Dangers Of Flights Across Alleghenies

Phillipsburg, Penn. --"The Graveyard of the Alleghenies" is no more! The fog-swept, treacherous stretch of mountain region in Central Pennsylvania which all airmen dreaded has been practically nullified.

A great new airport, with all the equipment and techniques of modern aviation, fills the void in which aviators once plummeted to their death.

At Phillipsburg, in the heart of the still-wild Alleghenies, just a short distance from the spot where several pilots met death when the Army flew the airmail in the early 1930's, now stands the Black Macchannon Airport, constructed at a cost of half million dollars.

Dedication of the new airport was hailed by officials of the Pennsylvania Aeronautics Division as marking "the passing of the era when the Allegheny Mountains were known as the graveyard of the airlines."

Fitzgerald, "Flapper" Era Novelist, Dies

Story Of Youth After War Called Social Document

Hollywood, --F. Scott Fitzgerald, novelist, short story writer and scenarist, died at his Hollywood home Saturday. He was 44.

Fitzgerald, author of "This Side of Paradise," came to Hollywood in 1937. He adopted his "The Great Gatsby" for the screen, did the scenario for Erich Remarque's "Three Comrades" and other film work.

He suffered a heart attack three weeks ago.

Quit College For Army
"This Side of Paradise" appeared in 1920 when Fitzgerald was 24, a year after he left the U. S. Army. He had quit Princeton University in his senior year to go into service as a second lieutenant in the Forty-fifth Infantry.

The hero, Amory Blaine, of "This Side of Paradise," was somewhat a composite of "all the sad young men" of the unsettled post-war "flapper" era and the novel became a sort of social document, in critical estimation.

The term "All the Sad Young Men" was employed six years later as the title of a Fitzgerald short story collection.

Was In "Who's Who" At 26
Acclaimed for his first novel, Fitzgerald soon wrote "Flappers and Philosophers." Then came "The Beautiful and Damned" in 1922.

At 26, Fitzgerald was in "Who's Who," listed as a Socialist in politics. A critic at that time described his works as documentary "in their vivid presentations of adolescent life, its turbulent spirit, swift tempo, charged atmosphere, excesses and boldness, as well as its uncertain psychology and gropings to know itself in new and unadjusted conditions."

Fitzgerald married Zelda Sayre, daughter of an Alabama Supreme Court justice, in 1920. They have one daughter, Frances Scott Fitzgerald.

GOLD AND DICTATORS

Despite the loud talk by which Herr Hitler continues to picture a "new order," in the economic scheme of which gold will play no part almost every day brings new proof that Uncle Sam's "buried treasure" at Fort Knox, Kentucky, is losing neither its intrinsic nor monetary value as a consequence of totalitarian conversation. "Our capacity to work is our gold," Der Fuehrer reiterated in a speech to Nazi workers recently.

A staff writer for the Science Monitor had already anticipated the outburst of the German war lord with evidence that the United States is fast debunking all efforts of the Axis partners to disparage gold, which they are frantically attempting to prove can no longer win wars.

The developments of the past few days, even, have supplied striking examples that gold is rally as efficacious as of yore when it comes to international "horse-trading."

First came the announcement from President Roosevelt that the United States would lend $100,000,000 to China. A little later there followed word from Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau that Argentina was to receive a loan of $50,000,000 with indications that the Export-Import Bank might add a like sum. Finally there came word from London of a new Anglo-Turkish trade pact in which any Turkish shortage of money seems certain to be remedied by London.

In each case it is clear that the extension of credits has had or is expected to have a marked effect upon world conditions. There is a measure of belief in Washington that the $100,000,000 loan to China contributed to the recent Russian warning to Japan that Moscow's pro-Chinese policy would continue in force. Not only will the loan enable the Chinese to increase their purchase of vitally-needed war materials but it is also expected to encourage a still greater measure of resistance among the Chinese.

The loan to Argentina is seen as primarily an anti-German move in that it is a definite indication of the United States' ability and determination to go to considerable lengths to bolster the warshocked economies of American neighbors. This should serve as a very tangible offset to the blandishments of Nazi salesmen in Latin America and might result in greater regard for the workings of democracy among the peoples of the various American nations.

Even before the outbreak of the war, British credits are seen as having kept Turkey on the pro-allied side of the fence. This is considered one very definite case where British financial power has so far triumphed over all vieded and unveiled threats from Berlin.

Money alone cannot win a war, but so long as Britain maintains control of the seas its wealth and such credits as it may eventually obtain from the United States can buy the raw materials without which no war can be fought.

The Monitor staff writer concludes that there is accumulating evidence that the United States government is now fully conscious of the important help which its gold strength can render, not only in adding to our own prestige, but in contributing to the British war effort.

The Messenger is pleased to note that even those who were previously very dubious concerning the wisdom of our gold-purchasing policy, are now coming to realize that the yellow metal is likely to continue to be one of the chief monetary standards in the centuries that lie ahead, even as it has during the centuries of the past.—MAYFIELD MESSENGER.

CANDOR WORKS IN THE ORIENT

To the extent that history on legend, Henry Ford may be right. At any rate, Ambassador Joseph C. Grew gets along extraordinarily well at Tokio by disregarding the cherished theory of "oriental" predilection for subtlety and indirection.

We don't have to "read between the lines" or draw inferences to extract the meaning of the exchange between Ambassador Grew and Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka at the American Japanese Society's farewell banquet to Admiral Nomura. The Foreign Minister expressed the opinion that "the fate of China, a vital issue affecting the very existence of" the Japanese Empire, "is largely a question of sentiment in America."

The Ambassador was forthrightly impelled to "relieve this misapprehension," which he did with a clear statement of America's recognition of "right" and "obligations" as well as our perception of "facts and actions" in their interpretative relation to "expressed intention."

Admiral Nomura was being dined on the eve of his departure for Washington to assume the post of Ambassador to the United States. It was an occasion dedicated to "hands across the sea" and the "cementing of an old friendship"; but, thanks to his chief, the new Ambassador left "with a bug in his ear."

Ordinarily, our own Ambassador might be packing up, too, for the same destination after so frank an utterance. But the very candor implies congeniality. Few countries are on such understanding terms as Japan and the United States. Neither wants trouble with the other and neither takes pains to conceal the fact, nor does either doubt the outcome of a war in the Pacific. The Foreign Minister was sounding out our Ambassador again to ascertain if there was any relenting in our attitude. He was not deceived.

TOBACCO YIELDS WELL IN ADAIR

One of the best tobacco yields reported this season is 1,306 pounds from slightly less than two-thirds of an acre on the farm of John Dunbar in Adair county. The land was rich, and 20 per cent superphosphate was applied at the rate of 500 pounds to the acre, and complete fertilizer used along the rows. Mr. Dunbar sold the tobacco in the patch for $324.

B. H. Bradshaw, also of Adair county, grew 1,892 pounds of tobacco on an acre and two-tenths. This land was well manured and 300 pounds of 4-10-6 fertilizer used along the rows. Both men grew Kentucky No. 16 burley tobacco.

BUFFET SUPPER HONORS BRIDE-ELECT

Miss Kathryn Taylor was hostess to a delightfully planned buffet supper and bridge party complementing Miss Jane Lewis, whose marriage to Louis Haynes, Jr., December 26, will be one of the outstanding events of the holiday season, Saturday evening at 8:30 at her home on Cleveland avenue.

The living room and dining room were attractively decorated for the occasion, carrying out the Yuletide motif and the dining table held a miniature bride surrounded by lighted candles as a centerpiece. Card tables were set up for the guests in the living room and each held a lighted white taper surrounded by cedar, and places were denoted by attractive pink place cards. A corsage of pink roses marked the place of the honoree.

A delectable two course menu was served, after which the guests enjoyed games of bridge. Miss Helen King was high scorer for the evening and the honoree also received a lovely gift from the hostess.

Covers were laid for the following, the honoree, Mrs. J. O. Lewis, mother of the bride, Mrs. Lynn Taylor, Miss Eleanor Ruth Jones, Miss Ruby Boyd Alexander, Miss Helen King, Miss Almida Huddleston, Miss Ann Godfrey, Miss Martha Moore, Miss Ruth Graham, Miss
