BOY SCOUTS: Have a giant "scout circus" scheduled here for June that will present a big street parade and a three-hour spectacle in the evening which will enter around 1000 scouts and draw several times that in spectators.

These are some of the major projects on foot; there are many others which are a creditable reflection on the energy and the aggressive programs of Fulton community life. The NEWS takes its hat off to all of them and hopes that it can help pitch in and make 1949 a banner year.

A. G. Baldridge, who was blown-out in 1947 and burned-out in 1948, has come back with a beauty of a new store, opening next Wednesday at the same old stand. The News, along with every other firm in Fulton, salutes the Baldridge determination and faith in Fulton.

Sympathies of local citizens this week are extended to Mrs. Opal Browder, whose home at the corner of West Street and State Line was gutted by fire last Tuesday. Losses included a number of valuable antiques and "Pedro," a pet Mexican dog. Mr. and Mrs. Guy Phipps, whose apartment was also located in the house, suffered a total loss of all effects in the disaster.

We have been pleased to note that the energy of life is flowing strongly in the blood of Fulton this year, as evidenced by the activities of its clubs and organizations . . . and we would like to take this opportunity to name some of the splendid contributions that are being made:

LIONS CLUB: Just finished a well-attended community-mintel; is making plans for its annual Ladies' Night banquet March 22 at the Strata Club.

ROTARY CLUB: Has led the whole Purchase Area in attendance during the current Club year, and is currently sixth out of 48 in its half of the State; is planning a big banquet in observance of its Silver anniversary on March 8; is currently sponsoring a vocational guidance lecture series at the Fulton High school.

Y.M.C.B.: Now engaged in intensive preparations for a giant County Fair in the late Summer, complete with horse racing, stock exhibits, a carnival and other attractions.

V.F.W.: Hard at work on another big "Army Day" parade for April 6, complete with bands, floats, foot troops and other attractions that will attempt to surpass last year's giant spectacle. (The Veterans are engaging two airplanes to distribute publicity on the event to all cities and communities in this area.)

AMERICAN LEGION: Will again stage its highly-successful horse show in the late summer.

I.C. SERVICE CLUB: Although a newcomer to local organizations, this Club is gathering steam right along and is soon expected to take place among the others in sponsoring community events.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE: With a new set of officers and plans for an aggressive membership campaign, the C. of C. has had for the past year an office open six days and a secretary on hand, and has begun to resume its position as co-ordinator, promoter and voice of local merchants and firms.

Time and tide wait for no man, 'tis written, yet there are times when man neither waits for time nor tide. In this instance the figurative "man" is woman . . . two of 'em in fact . . . who are not waiting for time, tide, or world events to guide them in their lives, but rather live in a faith in God that's unequalled in the annals of the holiest temples of the Lord. The women are the Lacewell sisters, Mattie L. and Mary, whose cozy little cottage, with green trimmings, and a lawn that slopes down into a little brook are watching the world go by with ever dimming eyes, and faded hearing that shut out the rumblings of this hectic world.

Mattie L. and Mary are spinsters. They live alone in a secluded patch of woods with a wide field of pasture that separates them from the gravel road of Route 2 and the world beyond. And what's more they like it,

In this ageless cottage where joughis bloom where objects of Civil War vintage are just as practical to them as tomorrow's popular science, the days and weeks and months and years move in a pattern that differs not one moment from the days when their parents were alive and the topic of the evening was the siege by the Yankees.

Built in 1869, the cottage is the successor to a log cabin that John and Mary Lacewell built in that spot soon after they were married. Mary, the youngest, age 70, was born in that house. Mattie, 77, was born on the old homeplace not more than one-half mile from where the present dwelling is located.

On a Saturday afternoon, when the first sweet breaths of Spring were in the air, A News reporter drove out along the gravel road of Route 2 in search of this interesting pair, referred to us by Robert Lamb the postman on

NO TRICKS IN PARISIAN LAUNDRY'S PLANT ITS ALL DONE WITH SUDS AND EFFICIENCY

When its washing day at the Parisian Laundry, which is every day, it is not only the time when tattle-tale gray is Public Enemy One, but also when modern laundry methods and machinery has a field day. Latest addition to the Parisian Laundry and completed in a whirlwind of time is the 110-horse power boiler that has been installed at the rear of the plant. If you see smoke-rings competing with clouds near the creek on Fourth street you will know they are the contented belchings of that new boiler, which is one of the latest developments in laundry steam generators.

All added recently, which makes the owners happy to know that not one piece of outdated machinery remains in the shop are: A six-operation shirt ironer all with compressed air; nine new piece-work ironers, also with compressed air; a washer and extractor, the newest machinery innovation of the American Laundry Co.; and dry cleaning equipment that makes for shining, odorless dry cleaning.

Mr. and Mrs. Presley Campbell, and their son Johnny, operate the laundry, which has routes extending in every direction of the city. Miss Kathleen Rust, is office assistant while Charles Walker is in charge of the dry

During his tenure as pastor many improvements have been made on the church buildings and an incalculable amount of work has been done in the mission field. Mr. Houser will remain in the city until a successor can be named.

Riceville Constable Post Might Be Filled; Vacant Three Years

Interesting developments in the attempt to secure police protection for Riceville and Highlands, unincorporated suburbs of Fulton have unfolded during the past week. Chief among them is the fact that for three years the office of constable of the First Magisterial District has remained vacant because Homer J. Roberts, Judge of the County Court has not been able to find a successor to Walter Ferguson who passed away more than three years ago. This situation was pointed out by county law enforcement officers who said that the office of constable had not been filled since the death of Mr. Ferguson, who died September 9, 1945.

In a telephonic conversation with Judge Roberts he told the News that the office had not been filled because there had been no applications for the post. A check of the News' files fails to reveal any indication that applicants were wanted. In his conversation with a News reporter Judge Roberts further revealed that any qualified applicant referred to him and prepared to make bond would be appointed on the spot. Although a qualified applicant called on Judge Roberts yesterday morning he was told that there would be a lapse of several days before he could make bond.

Attempts to secure a peace officer for the immediate unincorporated areas around the city were made after a delegation called on the News editors to assist them in their efforts. Up until four months ago a city police officer was deputized by Sheriff Wynn to patrol the area. However the policeman was discharged by the Sheriff with the statement that he would place a full-time man in the position at once. That was four months ago and the death of Mr. Ferguson occurred three years and five months ago.

SCHOOL STUDENTS TO HEAR FIRST HAND ACCOUNTS OF BUSINESS FROM ROTARIANS

For the next two weeks, commencing Monday, the Fulton Rotary Club will furnish speakers each day at the Vocational Guidance class at the Fulton High school, the Club voted Tuesday at its meeting.

Under consideration for some time as a part of the "Vocational Service" and "Youth Service" programs of the local Club, the two-week period was crystallized by Clyde Williams, Jr., vice-president and head of the Aims and Objects committee.

The programs, each of one-hour length, will be held before the entire Student Body at 1:40 p.m. each afternoon. Mrs. M.W. Haws is the school instructor in charge of the sessions.

The following subjects and speakers have been listed by Mr. Williams for the schedule:

choice of careers after they leave school; and to show them that there are excellent opportunities right here at home to pursue successful careers.

Time and the Lacewell Sisters . . . A Saga of Living

that they bought from Sears.

They've kept abreast of several wars through the papers that reach them and fear that the country is headed for another world conflict. In their little castle, where visitors are royal guests the Lacewell sisters are true characters of the old school. As the car drove away from that mansion of age, with the News reporter, one of our dearest friends and our bouncing little boy, none of us could keep from looking back at the figures who smiled and waved at us as though another chapter of a full life was closing for them.

As the door closed on them it was not hard to visualize the two sisters returning to their comfortable rockers and chatting of what a wonderful world this is, and how God has made a place for them in this world and the next.

Speaking is a little difficult for the sisters. What with the impediment in their hearing, there is also an impediment in their speech, but they miss not a trick if words are clearly enunciated. In their rockers, smiling benignly on their visitors the sisters told of their life in the cottage. Days are not long at all, that route. For nearly thirty years he has known the Lacewell sisters and for all of that time he has kept a watchful eye over "the girls." Moreover, the Lacewell sisters have kept an eye on him, too, as a gentleman of the highest quality.

Situated almost half mile from the road the home affords an easy view of the main road; it was probably this reason the identity of the house could be made for as the car approached, the stooped figure of Mary could be seen scanning the horizon for the on-coming visitors.

On a Saturday afternoon, when the first sweet breaths of Spring were in the air, A News reporter drove out along the gravel road of Route 2 in search of this interesting pair, referred to us by Robert Lamb the postman on

John Bull, M. D.

For the last eight months in England, the Colonel's lady and Judy O'Grady have been sisters in a way Kipling did not think of. Since the National Health Service Act went into effect in July 1948, all their medical needs are taken care of by the state, and the cost is taken out of their (and their husbands') incomes.

If the two are sick, they both queue up to receive treatment; their physician is paid by the state. If they need a prescription filled, they take it to a state-owned pharmacy. Medical equipment is supplied by a state factory. Hospitalization, convalescence and home nursing, as required, are also at the charge of the government.

How do Judy and the Colonel's lady—and their doctor—like this system of socialized medicine? and how is it working out?

The first question is easy to answer: The patients—practically all of them—like the system very much; most of their doctors are at least resigned to it. The second question is tougher. NHS (National Health Service) currently is hobbled by an inexperienced bureaucracy, unforeseen high costs and critical shortages. Most observers agree it will take more time before its inherent advantages and defects become clear.

The doctors were particularly bitter about the system of payment ($1,210 a year plus $3 a patient, or no fixed salary and $3.60 a patient), the risk of becoming, eventually, full-time salaried civil servants, and the ban on sale of practices. To mollify them, Minister of Health Aneurin Bevan agreed to a provision which forbids him to put them all on the state payroll. But the ban on sale of practices still stands, and, in addition, doctors now are forbidden to build a practice in regions where it is thought sufficient medical care already is furnished.

During its first months, NHS seemed likely to break down under the weight of its popularity. Health Minister Bevan was forced to admit that he had seriously underestimated its cost, which may total $1 billion the first year but will presumably cost much less later on. Recently, he appealed to the population to curb their sudden enthusiasm for examinations, drugs, spectacles, teeth fillings, wigs and what-not. Examples:

The government had estimated that its dental service would cost 7,150,000 pounds for the first nine months. It has run way over this.

The government had expected to issue about 3 million pairs of glasses per year; the present demand indicates that 7 million is closer to the right figure.

One result has been a disproportion in doctors' earnings. Those in populous districts can, under NHS, make up to $14,400 a year; those in under-populated country districts find it tough going. Some dentists have been earning between $16,000 and $40,000 per year and fear the government will either reduce their rate of pay for individual patients or put them on salaries.

Because of the rush of patients and shortage of doctors, the government has been forced to set up priorities. Children, pregnant mothers and the gravely sick get attention first. At present it may take months to get a dental appointment, or a hospital bed if the case is not urgent; nine or ten weeks to get a pair of spectacles.

Opponents of NHS argue that the standard of medical care, with more patients than doctors can handle, is being lowered; and that the system eventually will break down under its own financial weight.

What happens to Britain's NHS—and to the health of the British people under it—is being closely watched in the U.S. by people on both sides of the government-paid-medicine fence. Its example will be a powerful argument for or against existing plans to set up a national health insurance program here.

The News is vigorously opposed to compulsory National Health Insurance as proposed by Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator, for the reasons mentioned above. Is it any need to bring the unhealthy medical plan of Great Britain to a robust and stimulating America?

see the movie version of Garland Roak's best seller, "Wake of the Red Witch," the book that sold a million copies. It is a great sea adventure with its setting in the South Seas and said to be the lustiest sea yarn since "Mutiny on the Bounty." It stars John Wayne and Gail Russell.

One thing we're looking forward to is to own an electric blanket that will heat enough on the top side to prepare breakfast in bed.

In the February 20, 1925 copy of The Fulton Advertiser edited by Mr. R. S. Williams we found the following editorial: "We Tip Our Hats to the Boy Scouts." The writer often wonders if the people of Fulton realize what the Boy Scouts stand for in a community, and if when they pass one on the streets, let their hearts go out to them in the feeling that "there goes one of our coming citizens who is being trained to do the work of the community in an earnest and competent manner."

If you are ever lucky enough to be in North Africa and visit Casablanca, there is no reason why you should get lost because at every street corner you may find, framed under a glass, a map of the city. You need only swing the rotary metal pointer to find out exactly how to get back to your hotel.

Tip to a Hollywood Scout: Most any day, around Garland McEymann's grocery, you can see a little freckle-faced boy with the smile of a cherub, who could put Butch Jenkins (of Hollywood fame) in the shade. He is none other than four year old Barry Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Walker. Two of his constant companions are little Kaye Morris and Mike Callahan. A few days ago Kaye walked calmly into the Walker's living room with an all-day sucker in one hand, sat down on the couch, and in a quiet, undisturbed manner said, "Mrs. Walker, I think Barry's in a little trouble. He's hanging by his head over in the Sevier boy's hide-out." Mrs. Walker rushed over to the Sevier's just after Mr. Pierce had taken him down. Barry was in much better condition than his mother. The thing which had kept him 'hanging by the head' was the oversized football helmet he was wearing. A few days later Barry came home and said, "Mother, I think Mrs. James Warren is going to call you in a few minutes." "Why?" said his mother. "Well, I think me and Hal (Warren) just set their house on fire. We built a fire in the basement." (Confidentially, the lovely, brick Warren home is still standing.) The thing that Alice and I are happy about is that little Barry can hop, skip or jump just like any other boy even though he was a polio victim and has only had a brace off of one of his little legs for about six months.

When I started farming in Henderson County thirteen years ago I took five memberships in the Farm Bureau. Now I take twenty memberships. And I'm not doing it to gain political prestige. Nor am I trying to appear generous. I am merely meeting what I consider an honest obligation to my community, to the state of Kentucky and to my country as a whole.

The position of the Farm Bureau Federation today is set forth in the following paragraphs given this column by J.E. Stanford, Executive Secretary for the organization in Kentucky.

"The Farm Bureau was born out of the depression," says Mr. Stanford. "It was created to stem the forces of depression. It succeeded. Among the many other things it helped to write the PARITY formula into law. Agriculture's share of the national income began to rise. By 1947 agriculture's gross national income rose to 30 billion dollars, of which the parity formula is due its share of credit.

"Agriculture's current economic and financial position is again endangered. The 30 billion dollars represent a gross and not a net return to the 19 percent of the people who live on farms. It is also well to not that farm people, the 19 percent of the country's total population, receive only 10 percent of the national income.

"Today, a widespread campaign is to hammer farm prices down again, through critical comments on food prices, farm incomes and price support programs which have recently occupied a large portion of the time of many editorial writers, commentators and columnists.

"The year 1947 was, on the average, the best year from the standing of net income that farmers have ever enjoyed. And yet in this best year there is a wide gap between farm and non-farm incomes. In 1949 net farm incomes will be lower than in 1947 and 1948, still further widening the gap. In other words, farm prices and farm incomes are not out of line with the general level of prices and the general level of income. Hampering farm prices down is the first step toward ruinous deflation—ruinous for farmers, industrialists, business men, wage earners. The Farm Bureau recognizes that the hue and cry that farm prices are responsible for high living costs is pure propaganda; and the proof of it is the wide spread between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays."

Write Patricia Latane to Solve Your Problems

Dear Miss Latane:

I have written you before and you gave me such good advice. I am writing you again. My baby was born and I went to work and just as you told me my husband wants to come back home now. What must I do? Would you let him come back home if you were me? He said he still loves me and doesn't know why he did like he did. M.B.

My Dear M.B.

You can do what you wish but you are a fool if you take him back. I told you as soon as the baby was born and you were able to go back to work and make him a living he would come wagging his tail home. He doesn't love anyone but himself, and I can't see how anyone could be fool enough to think about taking him back. If he cared for you as he told you he did don't you know he would have been with you when you went to the hospital. Don't you know he would have stayed with you and tried to make you a living in place of leaving you and running after another woman. He could have gotten a job doing something. It might have been as a hard laborer but if his love was the kind of love you should have it would have stuck when the going got tough. It wouldn't have been running after another woman. And while you are doing alright for yourself stay that way. Let him go somewhere else. Let someone else make him a living. Find someone who will make you one. Bid him a nice farewell.

Dear Miss Latane:

I am a woman 49 years old and have three children. I have been going with a man for about 7 or 8 months and he wants me to marry him. What should I do? My children don't like him. Would they get along if we were married. Would we be happy? Z.C.

My Dear Z.C.

How do you expect your children and this man to get along after your married when they don't now. You would be so miserable that it would be terrible if you should marry this man. Why are you writing me asking me about it, for you know as well as I do, you aren't going to marry this man. Because if you do, your children are gone. They will never speak to you again, so all I can say is forget him.

Dear Miss Latane:

I am a young woman. I am only 23 years old and have a little girl 4, and my husband has got where he comes in late at night and has lipstick on him. I ask him about it and he tells me yes, he has been out with his sweetheart, so what can I do. S.M.W.

My Dear S.M.W.

Go get yourself fixed up. Buy a new dress. Dress yourself up then ask him to take you out. Make love to him. If this doesn't help take a little vacation. Go somewhere and stay about 2 weeks and when you come back be sure you look your best when he sees you. Everything will be alright then.

You may write to Patricia Latane at the Fulton County News. She does not give counsel in private.

It Looks Like War Between Clements and Gregory

The News prints herewith the following article which appeared in a recent issue of the Courier-Journal. We are proud to have the First District's own Noble Gregory of such calibre as to have state and National attention focused on his outstanding record.

Washington—There is prew for 1950 the hottest Democratic senatorial primary Kentucky has had since the Barkley-Chandler campaign of 1938.

If political events shape up in the next year and a half the way they are headed now, the opposing candidates will be Governor Earle C. Clements and U. S. Representative Noble J. Gregory of Mayfield. They will be fighting for the nomination to take the place now held by Senator Garrett L. Withers, whom Clements appointed to fill out the two years which remain of Alben W. Barkley's term.

Whichever one wins the Democratic primary will, in all probability, have to face in November John S. Cooper, who ran 10,000 votes ahead of Thomas E. Dewey while losing to Virgil Chapman last fall.

If Gregory and Clements enter the lists against each other, as now seems inevitable, the Governor will have on his side his own state administration machines. But Gregory will have the support of at least two of the most effective district machines among the seven congressional districts represented by Democrats.

Powerful Force

Chief of these two is in Gregory's own first district. That area of West Kentucky is overwhelmingly Democratic, and hence has an important voice in Democratic primaries. The other district Democratic machine upon which Gregory can count for support is at the other end of the state, in the Eighth District of Representative Joe B. Bates. It stretches out from Ashland into the mountains in one direction and down into the Bluegrass in another. It has been a formidable political organization since the days when it kept in Congress Fred M. Vinson, who now is Chief Justice of the United States. Bates is grimly determined to throw the full force of that organization behind Gregory if he and Clements go into the fight.

What the other five Democratic Congressmen will do is not yet clearly defined. But what is clear is that the political alliance which Clements carefully put together between himself and the Kentucky Democrats in the House of Representatives has fallen apart a little over one year after Clements moved into the Executive Mansion at Frankfort.

Governor Clements

Representative Gregory

The alliance had been dropping a bolt here and a screw there over the last several months, but its complete demolition came about when Clements last month appointed Withers to the Senate.

Not Consulted

Gregory had some expectations that the Senate appointment would go to him. Both Representative Bates and Representative Frank L. Chelf, Lebanon, had visited the Governor at Frankfort to urge him to give the seat to Gregory.

There are two reasons why Clements did not do so. The first one was that he feared Gregory would not be willing to step aside for Clements in 1950. The second was that Gregory has a conservative voting record in the House. If Clements sent him to the Senate, after putting Chapman there, he would have given Kentucky two members of that chamber whose votes frequently would be at variance with the wishes of the Truman-Barkley administration.

As political realists, neither Gregory nor other Democratic congressmen would have quarreled with Clements' reasoning on the Senate appointment. What angered some of them was that he consulted no member of the House about filling the vacancy created by Barkley's elevation to the Vice Presidency. To the Congressmen, this was the final straw in their growing irritation over a string of State appointments Clements had made without consulting them.

Keck Was Surprise

Now of course, the Governor of Kentucky is under no obligation—legal, moral, or political—to get from members of Congress their approval of his appointments. But the House members though the terms of their alliance which helped put Clements in Frankfort, called for him to clear with each Democratic congressman the name of a person selected from the representatives' districts for office in the state.

What a congressman dreads more than anything else is to have a state administration which might be inclined to give support to his opponent in a congressional primary. That was why they were attracted to the Clements alliance. As they understood it, the Governor, for example, would not appoint John E. Keck to be State Highway Commissioner unless Keck were a friend of a congressman from that district and unless the congressman had first been consulted about Keck.

But Bates, in whose district lived Keck, knew nothing about the Keck appointment until Clements announced it.

It so happens that Keck is a friend of Bates, and Keck and the Mobley family, near Sandy Hook, into which Keck married, are among Bates' strongest supporters. But what is worrying Bates is why was he not consulted before his good friend was given this important job—one of the most strategic political jobs in the state administration.

It has puzzled him particularly because the Keck appointment was the fifth occasion on which Clements had selected a Bates supporter from the Eighth District for an important office without consulting Bates.

It began to look to Bates and to some other Democratic congressmen as though Clements was "building around" them in their own districts. Not that he was appointing their enemies to office, but was taking their friends and causing those friends to owe their first political loyalty to the Governor rather than to the congressmen.

Underwood Grumbles

Gregory and Chelf as well as Bates have been fretting for some weeks about the "building around" that Clements has been doing in their districts. Tom Underwood, Lexington, has been growling to friends that, although he was Clements' campaign manager, he has no voice in appointments made from his Sixth District. Even John A. Whitaker, whom Clements hand-picked to take the Second District congressional seat when the Governor vacated it, has been doing a certain amount of grumbling.

It is a tribute to Clements' capacity as a political maneuverer that his alliance with the congressmen ever came into existence in the first place. His Democratic Kentucky colleagues regarded him with suspicion when he joined them in Congress in January, 1945. They had heard of his talents of seizing political power when he was a member of the State Senate, and they feared he was out to make himself political boss of Kentucky. Gradually, however, they succumbed to the idea that it would not be too bad to have a party boss if he were on their side.

First to join up with Clements was Chapman. His election to the Senate in 1946 was to be the first fruit of the new alliance. However, certain events transpired which caused Chapman to drop out of the 1946 race.

The Battle Starts

By the time the gubernatorial primary came around in 1947, Clements had the support of all the Democratic congressmen in one degree or another. Chapman was actively in the field for Clements and made the important contribution of lining up strong support in the Sixth District. Chelf tried to stay outwardly neutral but was jockeyed into making an appearance at the Clements campaign opening in Glasgow.

The congressman who really stuck his neck out on behalf of Clements was Gregory. Running against Clements was Harry Lee Waterfield, from Gregory's own district. Although Gregory and Waterfield were old opponents, many of Gregory's supporters felt he should have, for reasons of local loyalty, got behind Waterfield.

The pulling and hauling in preparation for the 1950 primary is already under way. While Clements "builds around" the congressmen, Bates and Gregory are stiffening their own forces in Kentucky.

The men who will be caught in the middle if the Clements-Gregory race comes off are Chelf and Underwood. Clements and Chelf entered Congress on the same day and worked closely together, but Chelf has also been closely associated with Gregory. Underwood not only was Clements' campaign manager in 1947, but also now represents the district which Chapman served so long. Chapman, whose election to the Senate last November is apparently to be the last performance of the alliance, might be expected to continue his working arrangement with Clements. On the other hand, since he is a long-time friend of Gregory's, Chapman might consider he and Clements are even, each having helped the other to an election victory.

Complicating the congressmen's decision in choosing sides is the fact that Kentucky will elect only eight members of the House in 1952, instead of the present nine, due to the state's decrease in population. Which means that unless one of the present congressmen goes to the Senate or to the Governor's chair, someone will be squeezed out in 1952.

An Open Letter...

To The Mayor, Hon. T. T. Boaz, The City Council, and The Citizens of The City of Fulton and Surrounding Territory.

I. What The Sheriff Told Us.

We, the undersigned ministers of Fulton, Kentucky, were told by the Sheriff of Fulton County that he ordered a certain establishment in Riceville to discontinue gambling.

The Sheriff further informed us that his right to close this place was challenged on the ground that similar establishments are allowed to operate in the City of Fulton without interference from law enforcement agencies.

Whereupon, the Sheriff informed us, he visited certain places in the City of Fulton and warned that all gambling must stop.

II. Was The Sheriff's Action Justified?

It is possible that the Sheriff's action was justified. We have been hearing from various sources that there are certain places in Fulton where gambling goes on, and that it is countenanced by those in authority as a matter of "policy."

For some time we have desired to make a public protest against this condition, which, judging from the number of complaints and the character of the complainants, does exist. When it became necessary for the Sheriff to take the above mentioned action, we decided that the time had come when we might opportunely speak.

III. A Bill of (Hearsay) Particulars.

1. We have been "told" that card games for gambling purposes have been stopped in two places;
2. That slot machines have been removed from three places;
3. That slot machines have been removed from three places in the "Bottoms"
4. And, we have been "told" that the above has taken place since the Sheriff's visit to our city.

IV. We Respectfully Request, That,

In view of the Sheriff's visit to our City to warn certain places to stop gambling; in view of the fact that this talk of gambling has assumed the proportions of a public scandal; and, in view of the rumor that since the Sheriff's visit the "lid" is on gambling in Fulton at the present time, we respectfully urge the City Authorities to investigate the truth of these rumors, and ascertain whether or not the Sheriff's visit was justified, and if so, we urge the authorities to rigidly enforce the laws against gambling. We stand together with all responsible citizens of Fulton for religious, clean, and law-abiding community.

Silhouettes of folks we've met

When the doors open on the handsomely decorated, brilliantly lighted and modernly equipped new "dime store" on Lake street next Wednesday morning, Fulton citizens will not only see the latest development in variety store arrangements, and what's more the prettiest store of its kind in all Kentucky, but they will be reminded of 39 years of progress in the growth and development of the variety store business and the business acumen of Albert Gordon Baldridge. Baldridge's Dime Store is an institution in Fulton County. It is a clearing house for all chance meetings and even planned appointments for the hundreds of patrons who crowd its aisles from day to day, and the even larger number who browse the store on Saturday and who would just as soon ignore the visit of a world-wide personage than to forego the pleasure of a leisurely stroll through Baldridge's.

That leisurely stroll will turn into a great adventure on opening day and the subsequent days to follow, for Mr. Baldridge, with the efficient aid of the ladies in his family, Annie Laurie, the missus, and Rachel Hunter, the daughter have explored the markets of the Nation to bring the newest, brightest and gayest trinkets and gadgets to the labyrinth of shelves and cubicles that fill the new store.

Everybody knows Mr. Baldridge. From the curbstone in front of the building to the widest reaches of the Purchase District the name of Baldridge is legion. Not too long ago we took a jaunt along Route Two to interview two lovely ladies in that area. Their visits to the city were sparsely separated they said, like two or three years apart, but when we asked them the first thing they did when they came to town they said: "We go right to Mr. Baldridge's store."

Albert Gordon Baldridge was born in Weakley County three miles east of Martin, the son of William and Anna Johnson Baldridge, both deceased. He was one of eleven children, nine of whom survive. As a child he went to the Ralston, Tenn., grammar school and later attended the McFerran Preparatory School in Martin. Not choosing to pursue a higher education, at the age of 18 he set out on his own and decided to learn the merchant business from the bottom up. From Halls, Tenn., to Dyersburg, to other little Tennessee towns he secured jobs as a clerk in dry goods stores and when he thought that his mind had acquired a well-rounded knowledge of this business he secured a job with a large St. Louis neck tie firm as a travelling salesman. Mr. Baldridge was one of the category of humanity to whom punsters directed their more ludicrous remarks. He was a "drummer."

In his travels he came to Fulton quite often and saw in the city a good opening for what in those days was known as a "racket" store. On August 2, 1910 he opened up Baldridge's Variety Store on Lake street in the vicinity of the Owl Drug Company. The building was owned by a Mr. Parsons. In the Spring of the next year this young businessman's fancy turned to love, for at a church social in the Palestine Community he met the charming Annie Laurie Jonakin. It didn't take them too long to know what they meant to each other Cayce P.T.A. was held Thursday night February 17 with a pot luck supper in the basement. Miss Shuff was in charge of the program. Bro. L. E. Shaffer gave the devotional. The freshman home economics class gave a short skit called, "Grocery Store Gossip." The play was on nutrition. Mrs. Jessie McNeil presented a number of piano solos.

Cecil Jackson and Harold Henderson have been chosen to go to Murray for the weekend as guests of the college.

A good number of seniors are planning to attend the banquet to be held at Hickman Wednesday night. The banquet is sponsored by the Murray Alumni.

PILOT OAK

Mrs. B. G. Lowry, Cor.

B. H. Lowry is now driving a new 1949 Chevrolet pickup truck. Mrs. Evelyn Melton, Mrs. Mary Nell Gossum and Mrs. Allene Lowry shopped in Fulton Friday afternoon.

Richard Lowry has purchased a Chevrolet car.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Gossum, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lowry and Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Lowry visited in Cairo, Ill., Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Yates, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Puckett and Sue were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Lowry.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Olive were in Fulton Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Collins spent Thursday with Mrs. Cordie Rhodes.

Mr. and Mrs. B. G. Lowry, Jimmie Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Carr and Randall were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lowry Friday evening.

Mrs. John Massimo and children have returned to their home in Detroit, Mich. after visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Caldwell.

Mrs. Tie Finley is on the sick list.

for within a year they were married.

Wider interest became evident in the variety store business, so Mr. Baldridge moved the store up the street a little to a building now occupied by the A & P Tea Company. Some time later the store was moved again to its present location and in 1946 the building was purchased by the Baldridges from the heirs of the Jonakin Estate.

Mr. Baldridge is deeply interested in his business and his avid hobby is fishing, though like most busy men he is unable to pursue the pastime as much as he would like.

He is deeply devoted to his church and was Chairman of the Board of Stewards when the new Methodist church was conceived. The first check toward the building fund was written and received in the handsome Baldridge home. He has been superintendent of the Methodist Sunday School and organized the Mormon B. Daniels Bible Class for young men. Though intended for the young men, many of the original class still attend the class. Mr. Baldridge has been president of the Chamber of Commerce, as well as president of the Lion's Club.

A stickler for good business practices he believes in the adage that the customer is always right. He demands upfailing courtesy from his employees to his customers and has often discharged an employee for failure to comply with this ruling.

What Mr. Baldridge and his dime store means to Fulton can be summed up simply by an event that occurred when the store burned last summer. Hordes of children gathered at the scene and watched sadly the thousands of items being consumed in the enveloping flames. One youngster spied Mrs. Baldridge getting into her car and with a rush of enthusiasm he sidled up to the door and with tears in his eyes said:

"I just can't tell you how sorry I am."

Back on Lake street after an absence of several months at which time the store was housed in the old Presbyterian Church building on Commercial avenue, Baldridge's Dime Store will soon be back on Lake street and everybody is happy about the whole thing.

HAVE YOU?

Have you this day greeted those you have met with a smile, one that shows you are glad to have met them?

Have you found time to thank those who have willingly helped you.

If before Judging anyone have you looked first through the windows of your own self.

Have you given your own house a good cleaning before finding cob-webs in the corner of your neighbors houses.

Could it be possible.

Have you a plot of ground where every fault of others you find you take at once and hurry.

Have you tried hard enough to find something good in every person.

When you are angry about something or at someone have you the good judgment to look at it from more than one side?

Have you ever looked in a mirror and asked yourself.

Do I see myself as others see me?

If we could I am sure most of us would be surprised.

FARM BUREAU IN SUPPORT OF TVA

Because of its importance to agriculture and the strong belief Farm Bureau members have evidenced in the proposal, J. E. Stanford, Louisville, executive secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation, has issued the following prepared statement:

"The Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation has received several inquiries recently in regard to its position on the appropriation bill now in Congress providing for construction by TVA of a steam generating plant in New Johnsonville, Tenn. When this measure was before the 80th Congress our organization vigorously supported it. We see no reason for changing our position. To the contrary, we see every good reason for supporting it even more stoutly than before."

"It is realized that there cannot be a full utilization of the power potential at Kentucky Dam unless the proposed New Johnsonville steam plant is constructed. This is tremendously important to the further industrial and agricultural development of the Kentucky Dam area, as it is our understanding that TVA has allocated all the electricity that can be produced at Kentucky Dam under present conditions."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Christ Jesus" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 27, 1949.

The Golden Text is: "There shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a Branch shall grow out of his roots." (Isa. 11:1).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. . . I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture." (John 10:7,9).

All are welcome to our services.

A Hundred Shows A Thousand Head

In 1948, Kroger representatives attended more than 100 4-H and F. F. A. Shows and Sales, and purchased more than 1000 head of livestock. We believe in and support these sales to encourage the farm boys and girls who will become tomorrow's food producers.

Fulton's own Marshall and Post No. 7 of the American Legion has received recognition in this month's issue of the American Legion magazine.

It seems that our recent about Chaplain Robert J. and his cheer-up and get visits to local hospital patients was sent in to the magazine. They promptly pointed out the splendid project of the Fulton Post to the rest of their legion readers around the country. We again add our congratulations to the Legionnaires for their splendid Chaplain for good work and for its national recognition.

If Army Day is filling News columns these days, exactly what is intended. Another feature of this early celebration is the announcement made today that Zeke M. that impressario of song forming on Station WENK been engaged to do a broadcast from Fulton on April 6, 11:30 pm to 12:30 pm. At 10:00 clock a.m. on the same day will perform on the bands on Lake Street and well in vance of the actual day he "plug" the Army Day celebration. That's publicity in its best form and our hats are off to the boys for doing a well-organized job.

Interested conservationists again reminded of the meeting the Woman's Club on Monday featuring the celebrated E. Larsen, who will give an enthusiastic talk on conservation at the club at 7:45 p.m. A special invitation is issued to conservation groups to attend the meeting.

Girl Scouts will help their scouts in staging the gantic Scout Circus planned June. At a meeting of the scout mothers Louis Weeks Elbert Johns presented the plan and was accepted by the leadership.

When this paper reaches Norman Terrys they will have about 72 hours before their anxious moments will be over, for that time the Gerrishes and their interesting children will arrive in New Orleans after spending two and one-half years in Japan. Mrs. Gerrish is the former Charlotte Terry and Norman says that he is mighty anxious to see them it is Mr. Terry who is counting every second until that time.

Welcome home Charlotte, Richard, and Susan, Dexter and Terry.

The members of the Seventh-day Adventist Church here have received word from the past Elder Loyd C. Strickland who is in Nashville attending the Ministerial Convention for Kentucky and Tennessee, that he has received his new RCA "400" sound projector, and that he had cured the film "The Birth of a New World." This picture is color and is a sound film.

You have a cordial invitation to see this film at the Seventh-day Adventist Church, 111 Jefferson street, Fulton, Saturday evening March 5 at 7:30.

With the Fulton Rotary Club celebrating its silver anniversary next week, perhaps you have wondered how the organization ever happened to select name "Rotary."

It seems that the first Rotary Club in the world was organized in Chicago by a young lawyer named Paul Harris, who gathered together in a spirit of friendship a group of men, each of whom was engaged in a different form of service to the public. At first the members of the new club did not meet at luncheon, but met in rotation at the various places of business of the members, hence the name "Rotary."

The Club's basic ideal was "service" . . . thoughtfulness and helpfulness to others, and this thought still is its guiding motive.
