Budget plan disappointing to Murray State

By KRISTIN TAYLOR Staff Writer

Murray State's interim President Dr. Kern Alexander called the governor's proposed budget for the coming two years a "disaster" for Murray State and even for higher education in at least one regard.

biggest disappointment, Alexander said, was in the 1.5 percent increase in higher education funding. "That won't even cover our utilities and health care, much less pay for salaries, he said in a telephone interview from

All of MSU's fellow regional universities were in the plan. Western Kentucky University would receive $24.2 million for an academic-athletic complex, $6.7 million for renovation of its science campus and $4.3 million for the Materials Characterization Center. Eastern Kentucky University would receive $10 million for a new student housing project and $5.1 million for its dairy research project while the governor recommended Morehead State University get $15 million to build the Center for Health, Education and Research. Kentucky State University would renovate Hathaway Hall with $4.7 million.

The state's largest universities — the University of Kentucky and University of Louisville - both would receive funding for a couple of projects in the governor's proposal. UK was slated for $75.9 million for construction of a biological/pharmaceutical complex and $130 million for a new hospital patient bed tower. UofL would receive $66 million for a new health sciences research facility and $11.5 million for the Center for Predictive Medicine.

Meanwhile, the 16-college Kentucky Community and Technical College System has three projects in the governor's budget: the $26.6 million Advanced Manufacturing Technology at Gateway Community and Technical College in northern Kentucky; the $15.5 million Emerging Tech Center at West Kentucky Community and

The Murray Independent Board of Education has approved three construction projects at Murray Middle and Murray High schools while also giving preliminary approval for a $9.3 million draft budget for the 2006-2007 school year.

Following an update concerning ongoing and planned construction at Murray Middle School by Terry Blake, of RBS Design Group, board members approved the construction of a new concession stand/restroom area to be located at Ty Holland Stadium.

The one-story, 1,380-squarefoot, all-masonry building will house a modern concession stand along with two toilet facilities and some storage space at a cost of approximately $225,000. It will also feature a six-foot overhang over the concession stands to protect students, parents, and visitors from the weather.

The board also extended Blake's contract for further design work for the renovation of the Arts Building. The building, previously slated for destruction, will be renovated for use by the school's athletics department and will house a weight room, dressing rooms, and other facilities and would save the district money on construction of a new building for

PADUCAH, Ky. — Craig Stephen Powell, 37, of Benton, Ky., was found not guilty only by reason of insanity yesterday by a federal judge in United States District Court in Paducah of two counts of making bomb threats and eight counts of mailing threatening communications, according to a release from the Department of Justice.

The verdict of not guilty only by reason of insanity was returned following a bench trial before the U.S. District Judge Edward H. Johnstone. Powell had previously waived his right to have a jury determine his guilt.

Powell was tried for mailing threatening letters to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Marshall County Sheriff, The Paducah Sun and WPSD-TV between May and June 2005. Powell was also tried for calling in a bomb threat to Murray State University on June 15, 2005, and for calling in a bomb threat to Paducah Bank on June 16, 2005.

The Austin Building will be destroyed as planned.

Also, board members gave approval for the construction of a new concession stand/restroom building at Murray High School's Mallory France Soccer Complex as part of an agreement between the district and the Murray Booster Club.

Dale Reid, director of operations for the district, said club members have agreed to pay half the cost of the construction up to $75,000. The estimated cost of the building was set at $95,000 to $100,000. The district will pay a maximum of $50,000; however Reid pointed out that the cost will likely be much lower than projected because much of the construction will be done by the district's maintenance depart-

In other action, the board approved a $9.3 million budget for the 2006-2007 school year that Superintendent Bob Rogers said was about $1 million less than last year. However Rogers pointed out that the budget is dependent on actions by the state General Assembly that is now meeting in Frankfort.

"Some in the legislature have made a lot of promises and the governor has made some promises, but we'll have to wait and see what they do before we can be definite," Rogers said. "We'll have to wait and see what kind of a budget is passed or if we even have a

Rogers said the district's actual working revenue would still be "about the same" as last year and the budget would most likely not force cuts of any kind because expenditures would also be down by about $1 million as a result of the district's non-resident contract agreement with the Calloway County school district last year. More details concerning the budget are planned for presentation to the board during their February meeting.

In other business, the board:

■ Approved "any and all" non-resident contracts with Marshall, Graves and Paducah Independent school districts involving approximately between 35 to 45 students depending on the sit-

■ Approved a Murray Middle School open house set for 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. on February 26.

Evidence at trial showed that in May 2005, Powell began mailing threatening letters addressed to the FBI, The Paducah Sun and the Marshall County Sheriff's Office. The letters were very graphic and referred to the three as "the unholy trinity" - the FBI was referred to as "the machine," the sheriff's office was referred to as "the patsy" and the editor of The Paducah Sun was referred to as "the joker."

Over the course of about three weeks, Powell mailed more than 20 letters and also began mailing the same type letters to WPSD-TV.

On June 11, 2005, Powell left a box outside the Paducah Bank building address to the FBI, and inside was a jar of urine, a jar of ashes and chicken feathers and bones. On June 15, 2005, State University Murray received a telephone call wherein the caller stated that he had placed a bomb in Pogue Library, which had to be evacuated. On June 16, 2005, the Paducah Bank received a bomb threat with the caller stating he had put a bomb in the building.

Murray State University Police traced the call and as a result went with Marshall County deputies to talk to Powell at his residence in Benton. When the police and sheriff's deputies arrived they asked Powell if he knew why they were there, and he responded, "I guess it has something to do with all the threatening letters I've been sending."

A search warrant was obtained for his house, and inside deputies found various bones, feathers and "creatures" made from bones hanging from the ceiling. Officers also found a sawed-off shotgun and tablets of paper Powell was using for his drawings/letters, the typewriter and Powell's journal.

Powell stated that he sent the letters because he thought the FBI was following him in Wal-Mart and that the sheriff was involved. He thought The Paducah Sun could help him by exposing what the FBI was doing. Powell also admitted to the bomb threats and stated he made them to "quiet the voices" in his head. Powell further admitted to buying the shotgun a month before and sawing off the barrel. Powell's journal entries revealed that he had not been taking his medication and that he was lying to his psychiatrists because he believed they were conspiring with the FBI against him.

Medical records were also entered into evidence at trail demonstrating that Powell, while competent to stand trial, was insane at the time he committed the offenses. Based on the evidence presented, Judge Johnstone found that although Powell committed the crimes, he was not guilty by reason of insanity. Following the trial, Powell was committed to a federal medical center for further mental evaluation.

The case was investigated by the FBI, the Marshall County Sheriff's Office, the Paducah Police Department and Murray State University Police.

Scandals are bleeding GOP

Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is the ugliest of them all? The most recent Fox News poll indicates that Americans current spate of scandals than the Democrats. Indeed, the building sense of popular anger against the GOP resembles nothing more than the last con-

the bouncedcheck congressional bank affair of 1991 — in its political impact. But that scandal paved the way for Newt Gingrich's takeover of Congress three years later. This scandal may undo the Republicans.

Generic cynicism about Washington is nothing new. Fox News poll respondents said that they felt that "most elected officials in Washington make policy decisions or take actions as a direct result of money they receive from major campaign contributors" by 65-21. Nothing new there. Because distrust of Congress is usually visited equally on both parties, it normally has no political impact.

But this scandal is different. With Republicans so completely in control of the government, this scandal is theirs. Asked which political party in Washington" is "more corrupt," respondents to the Jan. 11 survey said the Republicans are by 33-15. (Forty percent said both were equally dishonest). Independents, the vital element in any potential Republican majority, rate the GOP as the more corrupt by 23-5.

The scandal also seems to be spawning a reaction quite different from the usual cynicism in that it appears to be visited on each district's local representative. While voters typically deridé Congress as a whole, they usually speak highly of their own members. But not this time. Asked if "your own congressional representative has ever taken money or things of value in return for voting a certain way," voters said yes by 42-33, with Democrats and Republicans equally likely to think so.

Because this scandal is both partisan and local it will have a searing political impact. Nor should the recipients of Abramoff's dubious generosity dismiss their acceptance of his donations by saying it doesn't matter because everybody took his money.

Those who did get contributions from him are in for an Election Day surprise. Forty-four percent of the Fox News survey respondents said that if "an elected official from your state took a campaign contribution from Jack Abramoff or organizations that he represented" it would be a "major" factor in deciding whether to vote for him in the next election. Even 31 percent of Republicans felt

Washington scandals come and go. But, about every decade or so, they metastasize into massive national affairs that embrace an entire political party. Republicans were victimized in 1974 by Nixon's misconduct. Democrats kept Congress in 1992 after the 1991 check-bouncing scandal, but they did so because so many of their old bulls retired. In their places, Bill Clinton's election swept into office young saplings who succumbed to the partisan wave of 1994, a wave kindled equally by disgust with Clinton and with the Democratic permanent Congressional majority.

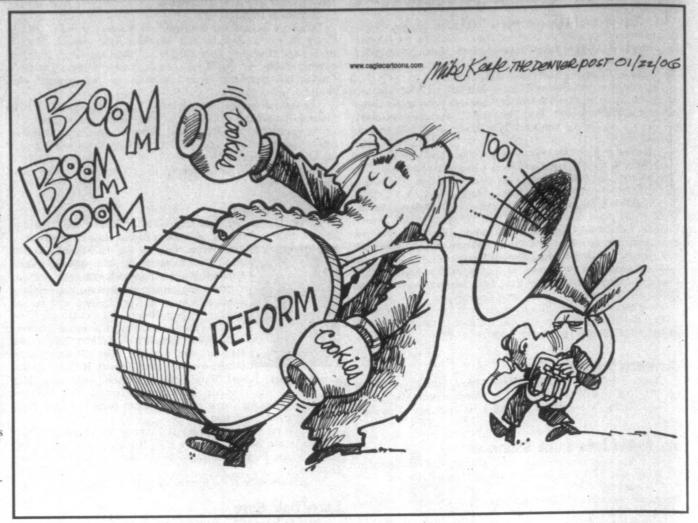

The 2006 elections look to be another of these decadal bloodlettings, victimizing, this time, the Republicans.

What can the GOP do to prevent it? It has to start by not coddling its members who are in the cross hairs of this scandal. But shedding individuals will not buy the party a pass from what voters see as an epidemic of scandal. Only real reform will suffice.

Obviously, Congress needs to ban lobbyist-sponsored travel. It was voter anger over taxpayer-paid junketing that spawned these free trips, as legislators looked to lobbyists rather than Uncle Sam to subsidize their vacations. But now the voters are as angry about lobbyist-paid trips as they were over funding the travel themselves. The trips have to go.

But the more serious reform would be to ban earmarking on appropriation bills. Voters have long since understood that it is a fiction that a legislator is fighting for a specific earmark to help the district. They know he is really doing it to get campaign contributions. Once the Supreme Court took away the president's ability to use the line-item veto on spending bills a key provision of the Contract with America that was enacted with Clinton's approval — the natural next step has been to ban earmarking. The practice invites the kind of corruption that is crippling Republican chances in the next election, and it deserves to be

Will the scandals translate into the loss of Congress by the Republicans in 2006? The generic 13-point Democratic lead in Congressional ballot would suggest that it might. Can popular revulsion overcome even Tom DeLay's gerrymandering? You bet it can!

Tough Talking Clinton

■ Hillary turns up heat, anti-Bush rhetoric

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - Hillary Rodham Clinton has come out swinging.

Up until recently, the New York senator has been under fire from the liberal wing of the Democratic Party for refusing to join the call for an immediate withdrawal from Iraq and for her finely modulated criticism of President Bush. But there is a new tough-talking Clinton these days.

At a Harlem church on Martin Luther King Day, she said that Bush's presidency would "go down in history as one of the worst" and that the GOP-controlled House "has been run like a plantation.

In a post-New Year's Day thank-you note to donors, Clinton assured them she would fight for "an end to cronyism, incompetence and cover-ups.

And during a foreign policy address Wednesday at Princeton University, she accused the Bush administration of "downplaying" the threat posed by Iran and its nuclear program.

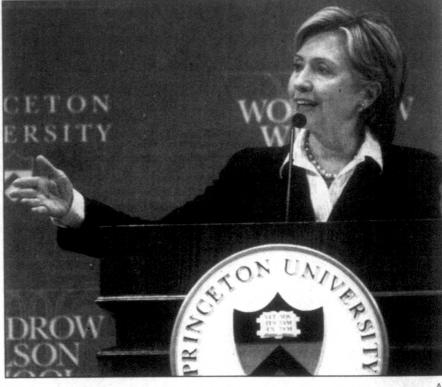

The Harlem speech drew a rebuke from the White House, where spokesman Scott McClellan declared her remarks "out of bounds." On her way home from Africa, first lady Laura Bush called her predecessor's plantation remark "ridiculous." Evenformer Clinton White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers called Clinton's choice of words "unfortunate."

Clinton's language is not much sharper than what other Democrats are saying as the midterm elections approach. But her words are amplified because of her status as the Democrats' leading contender for the 2008 presidential nomination. One Democratic strategist suggested she is probably trying to show she is tough enough to move to the other end of Pennsylvania

"Presidents of the United States don't allow themselves to be pushed around," said Hank Sheinkopf, a New York-based

A potential Republican challenger to her Senate re-election bid this year, former Yonkers Mayor John Spencer, said there is also another agenda at work, given the powerful influence of liberals in the Democratic presidential nominating

"She's trying to appease the far left, keeping an eye on her national ambitions," Spencer said, adding that she is also working hard to portray herself as a moderate for the New York Senate race and for a possible national election. "It's Clintonesque trying to be all things to all people.

U.S. Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-N.Y., delivers a policy address titled Challenges for U.S. Foreign Policy in the Middle East, Wednesday at Princeton University in Princeton, N.J. Clinton, a potential candidate for president in 2008, offered her views on how the United States should deal with tensions in the Middle East to an audience from the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton.

Clinton campaign adviser Ann Lewis said any change in tone "reflects the change in current events," starting with the muchcriticized federal response to the Hurricane Katrina disaster and including the indictment of Tom DeLay, the Jack Abramoff lobbying scandal and the exposure of the administration's electronic eavesdropping

A Clinton fundraising letter from October was tame in comparison to her recent writings. The harshest language: "I can't remember a time when our government has been more out of touch with the concerns of most Americans.'

Sheinkopf, who worked on Bill Clinton's 1996 re-election campaign but is not part of the senator's political team, said talking tough is important for Democratic presidential candidates in general, and for Sen. Clinton in particular.

"We live in a very dangerous world. The president has to be able to deal with that, and that means being tough when you have to be," he said. But he added: "The problem here is, as a woman, she can't be shrill. If she's shrill, she loses the whole impact of it. So, being firm is what she's doing, and that works for her."

Republicans, though, see her stingers as a return to the politics of her husband and

"It's more of the scare tactics, negative attacks that we've become accustomed to from the Clinton campaigns over the years," said Ryan Moses, executive director of New York's Republican Party.

Spencer said: "She's kind of morphed into Al Gore - ranting and raving." He called on her to apologize on the Senate floor for her "plantation" remark, calling it "race baiting."

Spencer particularly bristled at Clinton and her fellow Democrats' claims that Republicans have brought a "culture of corruption" to Washington.

"She got a track record there that hopefully people won't forget," he said, noting the scandals that plagued the Clintons when they ran the White House.

Polls have Clinton far ahead of any potential GOP competition for re-election. The initial choice of top New York Republicans, prosecutor Jeanine Pirro, abandoned her campaign last month after failing to raise much money or generate real interest.

OUR READERS WRITE

To the Editor, Your "MEET THE BABIES OF 2005!" was in your newspaper on Monday. We very much enjoy seeing all the dear little faces. One is cuter than the other and so many of us look at the pages again and again. We need to see those as they are lighting up our dreary January days. I'll soon be sending the pages out to some of our loved ones who also get plenty of smiles in these dreary January days by enjoying those bright babies' faces.

Interesting that on this coming Sunday, the 33rd Anniversary of the Roe versus Wade Supreme Court decision that allows abortion will be, well, observed, not celebrated. We give thanks for those babies on these many pages in your newspaper. We thank their parents for bringing the sweet little ones into the world.

Challenges of Life

We grow stronger when we are challenged, when things are difficult, and when we do not simply surrender to demanding situations. When we are faced with family or financial problems, illness, work assignments or any condition that requires us to buckle down and face reality, we not only become stronger, we can also grow in our trust in God. Our Father in Heaven knows all about each of us; the Bible even tells us that He counts the hairs on our heads (Matthew 10:30). We should never doubt that God is aware of all the daily issues with which we are faced. Just as any father is pleased to see his children rise to any occasion, our Lord also is pleased whenever we rise and face difficult situations. Heroes and heroines are those who stand up to the challenges of life, and they do not give up or take the easy way out. Even when we may feel that we have failed in our various endeavors, if we accept our challenges and do our very best, we should know that God is pleased with us. Knowing, loving and trusting God is our ultimate challenge in this world, and when we do His will, we are successful.

But He knoweth the way that I take: when He hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold.

Missionary's martyrdom ultimately saved assailants' tribe

By RICHARD N. OSTLING AP Religion Writer NEW YORK (AP) — Fa

from home, five American missionaries died in brutal fashion: speared and hacked to death by tribesman in the dense jungles of

Ecuador. That nightmare moment 50 years ago this month evolved into a remarkable example of reconciliation, and one of the most influential incidents in 20th century Protestant mission

Now the saga is being retold in "End of the Spear," a moving feature film about redemption in the jungle with a bigger budget ($17 million) and broader release (in 1,200 commercial cinemas this weekend) than many films of this genre.

In January 1956, Bush pilot Nate Saint and American col-leagues Jim Elliot, Pete Fleming, Ed McCully and Roger Youderian had teamed up in a high-risk attempt to contact, befriend and evangelize the violent Waodani people (also called Waorani or Auca). The five carried guns but didn't defend themselves when attacked.

Their martyrdom became world-famous through a Life magazine feature by photojournalist Cornell Capa and subsequent books by Elliot's widow, Élisabeth, who quickly matched her husband's heroism.

She and Saint's sister, Rachel, somehow managed to settle peacefully among the Waodani and brought them Christianity. Their example of responding to bloodshed with improbable another sequel, one of the killers, Mincaye, became a virtual substitute father to Nate's son, Steve Saint. The two friends are currently touring U.S. churches to tell their story and promote the "Spear" movie along with Saint's new book of the same ous" elders felt, "Let's not let the foreigners come to our The elders accused the mis-

Mincaye said his heart "was dark" until he learned about Jesus.

Waengongi (the Creator) used his son's blood like soap. He cleaned it and I saw a new trail. Then I saw it's enough," he said, referring to tribal killings. The violence had to stop. Waengongi said, 'Come follow my trail, living well."

Besides slaying outsiders, the Waodani killed each other at the highest rate of any known University group, Connecticut anthropology professor James Boster said. Before the missionaries came, they had dwindled to 600 and "were at the brink of cultural extinction,' because such a small group can't sustain itself as a social unit, he

In a 2003 academic paper, Boster said the Waodani were desperate to halt the cycles of violence and had tried gift-giving, exchange of wives, fleeing and attempts to exterminate all enemies. Before Christianity, nothing worked.

Less hostile toward missions than are some anthropologists who see evangelization as cultural imperialism - Boster said that "of all the ways in which native people confront the larger society, often the most benevolent and caring face of the other culture is by missionar-

Challenges of Life

We grow stronger when we are challenged, when things are difficult, and when we do not simply surrender to demanding situations. When we are faced with family or financial problems, illness, work assignments or any condition that requires us to buckle down and face reality, we not only become stronger, we can also grow in our trust in God. Our Father in Heaven knows all about each of us; the Bible even tells us that He counts the hairs on our heads (Matthew 10:30). We should never doubt that God is aware of all the daily issues with which we are faced. Just as any father is pleased to see his children rise to any occasion, our Lord also is pleased whenever we rise and face difficult situations. Heroes and heroines are those who stand up to the challenges of life, and they do not give up or take the easy way out. Even when we may feel that we have failed in our various endeavors, if we accept our challenges and do our very best, we should know that God is pleased with us. Knowing, loving and trusting God is our ultimate challenge in this world, and when we do His will, we are successful.

But He knoweth the way that I take: when He hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold.

Missionary's martyrdom ultimately saved assailants' tribe

By RICHARD N. OSTLING
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Far

from home, five American missionaries died in brutal fashion: speared and hacked to death by tribesman in the dense jungles of Ecuador.

That nightmare moment 50 years ago this month evolved into a remarkable example of reconciliation, and one of the most influential incidents in 20th century Protestant mission

Now the saga is being retold in "End of the Spear," a moving feature film about redemption in the jungle with a bigger budget ($17 million) and broader release (in 1,200 commercial cinemas this weekend) than many films of this genre. In January 1956, Bush pilot Nate Saint and American col-leagues Jim Elliot, Pete Fleming, Ed McCully and Roger Youderian had teamed up in a high-risk attempt to contact, befriend and evangelize the violent Waodani people (also called Waorani or Auca). The five carried guns but didn't defend themselves when attacked.

Their martyrdom became world-famous through a Life magazine feature by photojournalist Cornell Capa and subsequent books by Elliot's widow, Elisabeth, who quickly matched her husband's heroism.

She and Saint's sister, Rachel, somehow managed to settle peacefully among the Waodani and brought them Christianity. Their example of responding to bloodshed with

In an interview (with Saint as his late 70s, said his band killed

Mincaye said his heart "was dark" until he learned about Jesus.

'Waengongi (the Creator) used his son's blood like soap. He cleaned it and I saw a new trail. Then I saw it's enough," he said, referring to tribal killings. The violence had to stop. Waengongi said, 'Come follow my trail, living well."

Besides slaying outsiders, the Waodani killed each other at the highest rate of any known University group, Connecticut anthropology professor James Boster said. Before the missionaries came, they had dwindled to 600 and "were at the brink of cultural extinction,' because such a small group can't sustain itself as a social unit, he

Fire erupts in W. Va. mine

2 miners are missing

By The Associated Press

MELVILLE, W.Va. (AP) - Rescue teams today searched for two miners who were unable to escape after a fire broke out in an underground coal mine. Nineteen miners were able to flee the blaze, state officials said.

The fire started Thursday evening on a conveyor belt at the Alma No. 1 Mine operated by Massey Energy subsidiary Aracoma Coal, about 60 miles southwest of Charleston, officials said.

Twelve miners had gone into the mine to start their shift when a carbon monoxide monitor sounded an alarm around 5:36 p.m., said Doug Conaway, director of the state Office of Miners' Health Safety and Training. The monitor was located about 10,000 feet inside the mine and about 900 feet underground, he said.

The miners encountered smoke, put on breathing gear and rushed out of the mine, he said, but two were separated from the group. Nine others in another part of the mine also escaped.

The fire came less than three weeks after an explosion at the International Coal Group's Sago Mine in Upshur County killed 12 miners. The disaster's sole survivor, Randal McCloy Jr., 26, remained hospitalized in a light coma Friday.

Gov. Joe Manchin arrived at the scene, and miners' families gathered to wait at the Brightstar Freewill Baptist Church, about a mile away. Four rescue teams were searching the mine, two were on standby and others were traveling to the mine.

There are six miles of tunnels in the section where the fire occurred, according to a map. By 6:30 a.m. Friday, two rescue teams had moved past the fire, which was smoldering, and were trying to reach the mine car the miners took to get into the section.

Air samples from an existing hole near the fire showed elevated levels of carbon monoxide, although not as severe as levels at the Sago mine. At one point, rescue teams were in the mine without breathing gear, Conaway said.

"We're very hopeful," Manchin said. "It's a different scenario. Sago is very fresh in everybody's mind but this is a different sce-

Haskell Sheppard, 29, works the overnight shift as a repairman on the main conveyor belt that brings the coal out. He said the line where the fire broke out had problems in the past, but nothing as serious as this time. Officials did not know how the fire started.

Things are bound to tear up every once in a while," he said. According to the Mine Safety and Health Administration's Web site, the Alma mine received 95 citations from MSHA inspectors during 2005. The most recent were issued on Dec. 20, when the mine was cited with seven violations ranging from controlling coal dust and other combustible materials to its ventilation plan.

The mine was assessed $28,268 in penalties last year and it has paid nearly $13,000.

It has not had a fatal accident since 1995. The mine had a betterthan-average accident rate between 2001 and 2004, but it increased last year when 16 workers and one contractor were injured.

Aracoma coal miner Billy Mayhorn is greeted by his wife, Sharon, late Thursday in Melville, W.Va. Mayhorn was one of 19 miners who escaped after a fire broke out on a conveyor belt at the Alma No. 1 Mine. Two miners are still unaccounted for.

Mincaye, a member of the Waodani tribe in Ecuador, participated in the murders 50 years ago of five missionaries including Saint's father, Nate. Saint and Mincaye were in New York as part of a nationwide Church tour promoting a new movie based on the incident, "End of the Spear."

Catherine Peeke lived among the Waodoni from 1960 to 1992 for Wycliffe Bible Translators, preparing a New Testament (they call it "God's markings") in their tongue. She said the population rebounded not only through ending warfare but because missions provided basic medical care and school compounds where men were able to find wives.

Also, Peeke said, Christian teaching caused the tribe to stop infanticide of children who were twins, born out of wedlock, had deformities or were sacrificed after their fathers were killed.

Steve Saint got involved after his aunt Rachel died in 1994. When he attended her burial in Ecuador, the Waodani insisted that he leave his business career and take his aunt's place as their helper in dealing with the outside world. Saint now divides his time between the jungle and Dunnellon, Fla., where his nonprofit Indigenous People's Technology and Education Center (I-TEC) devises inventions to aid jungle living and provide tribal employment.

Saint said he initially declined to assist the "Spear" movie because the Waodani Christians said they opposed the project. But the Waodani changed their minds when he told them about the 1999 Columbine High School massacre. They wanted to help Americans overcome violence like they had, Saint said.

The film depicts events from the Waodani viewpoint, using a largely indigenous cast in Panama. Saint was the stunt pilot, duplicating his father's exploits. The team produced a related video documentary, "Beyond the Gates of Splendor."

Adams answers coach's call; Lady Lakers roll by Henry County

By SCOTT NANNEY

Sports Editor Rachel Adams took her head

coach's advice to heart on Thursday night.

Seeking a more aggressive approach from his 6-foot sophomore center, Calloway County head coach Scott Sivills challenged Adams to go to the basket strong against a smaller Henry County, Tenn., squad.

Adams responded with a career night, scoring 31 points on 10-of-14 shooting from the floor while knocking down 11 free throws to lead the Lady Lakers to a 79-65 triumph over the Lady Patriots from Paris,

"(Sivills) has been telling me to post up, call for the ball and look to score, especially in this game because they don't have a lot of size," said Adams, who joins 6-2 freshman forward Kayla Cunningham in the CCHS post to form one of the First Region's most imposing frontcourts. "I think I'm getting better at wanting the ball and being more aggressive."

"I think the more she's playing, she's understanding the role that she has on this team," he explained. "She's showing that she can be successful making offensive moves and getting offensive rebounds. ... The scary thing is that she's young and she's still learning how to play. If she keeps it up, she could be an All-Purchase player by her senior year."

Adams ignited the Calloway offense from the opening tip, scoring four of her team's first seven points as the Lady Lakers started the game on a 7-1 run. Adams finished the first quarter with nine points, but CCHS needed a steal and a layup by Chelsea Morris at the first-quarter buzzer to grab a 17-15 lead heading into the second period of play.

Calloway gained a little breathing room in the second stanza, as Adams went to work in the low post again, drawing fouls on the overmatched Lady Patriots.

The Murray State Thoroughbreds were picked to finish fourth in the 10-team Ohio Valley Conference in a preseason baseball poll, as voted on by league coaches.

Murray State (28-31, 15-12 OVC last season) finished tied for fourth last season, just a half-game behind Morehead State.

Cronin worried about Racers, not UTM

MSU coach continues to seek answers for inconsistent ball club

By SCOTT NANNEY Sports Editor

Mick Cronin admitted earlier this week that he didn't know much about Saturday night's opponent - Ohio Valley Conference rival Tennessee-

The intangibles of the Skyhawks, however, are irrelevant, says the third-year Murray State head coach as he continues to seek answers for an inconsistent Racer ball club that suffered an inexplicable loss at league bottom-feeder Eastern Illinois on Monday night.

"Our opponent is ourselves right now," noted a somber Cronin during his weekly press conference on Tuesday, a day after the Racers (10-5, 7-2 OVC) squandered their lone grip on first place in the conference standings with a 59-54 loss to the Panthers.

'We're not improving. We've been out-rebounded over the last six games. Our field-goal percentage defense is higher over the last six games than it has been all season. You're supposed to get better at execution, not worse," he added.

After overcoming an early conference loss at Samford, the Racers (10-5, 7-2 OVC) appeared to be on a roll with a five-game winning streak entering this week's play. But inconsistencies Murray's popped up again on Monday at EIU, where the Racers shot just 36.4 percent - including a paltry 7-of-31 shooting from 3-point range - and were outrebounded 32-30, including 12-7 on the offensive glass.

Forward Shawn Witherspoon had 14 points to lead the Racers, while guard Trey Pearson tossed in 13. However, the 6foot-2 junior continued to struggle with his shot, hitting only 4-of-10 attempts from the floor.

He was not alone. Fellow guard Darnell Hopkins knocked down just 2-of-6 shots and freshman Tyler Justin Orr hit on only 2-of-10

"We have to develop some consistency; that's our issue," Cronin claimed. "Numerous individuals on our team have inconsistent practice habits, therefore they have inconsistent games, inconsistent effort and inconsistent attention to detail

"We have one guy that's pretty much been a consistent player all year, and that's Shawn Witherspoon. ... It's tough from a coaching standpoint because you don't know who you can count on in certain situations."

If it's any consolation, the Racers can take solace in the fact that the Skyhawks have been perhaps even more inconsistent.

Martin (7-9, 4-6) began the season by winning five of its first seven games, but have since lost seven of its last nine, including a 96-88 defeat Thursday night at Austin Peay.

The Skyhawks' top two scorers - senior swingman Jared Newson (16.9 ppg.) and senior guard Jeremy Kelly (15.4) have been among the league's Top 10 scorers all season. But both have turned in Holloway was 0-of-4. Forward uneven efforts of late. UTM is also struggling on the defensive end, allowing its opponents an average of 75.5 points per game and a field-goal percentage of 46 per outing.

"We're struggling with consistency, too," noted UTM head coach Bret Campbell when asked about Murray State's recent struggles. "We're not shooting the ball well, and I'm still not pleased with where we are defensively. We need to do a better job of limiting other teams' field-goal percentages. ... We really haven't put a solid 40 minutes together here lately."

History wouldn't appear to be in the Skyhawks' favor on Saturday, when the two squads meet for a 6 p.m. contest at Martin's Elam Center, where the Racers have won 15 of the 17 previous meetings between the two programs. Murray, which has never lost to UTM at home, owns a 26-6 advantage in the all-time series.

"The rivalry here is because of the proximity of the two schools," noted Campbell. "We haven't made it much of a rivalry on the floor, but we need to step up and start doing

Guard keys late run as Virginia stuns No. 24 UNC

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) -His demanding nature and penchant for in-your-face rebukes haven't always made Virginia coach Dave Leitao the most popular guy around.

But the results his team is suddenly seeing sure aren't hurting.

Virginia won its second consecutive Atlantic Coast Conference game Thursday night, playing stout defense and getting key second-half contributions from several unexpected sources in a 72-68 victory against No. 24 North Carolina. The smiles said it all in the postgame locker room.

"We're buying into what he's saying," Sean Singletary said. "He's been preaching to us since he first stepped foot in Charlottesville. It feels like everybody is really responding to what he's saying. When it comes game time, it's really showing."

Singletary normally is the one who takes charge for Virginia in the waning moments of close games, but with the star point guard battling exhaustion and myriad nicks, J.R. Reynolds, Laurynas Mikalauskas and Jason Cain stepped in to make big plays.

"Good things are happening," Reynolds said after scoring 10 of his 16 points in the last 11 minutes when the surprising Cavaliers used a 26-10 run over 9 minutes to go ahead for good and then held on to beat the equally youthful Tar

"It's a learning process, and we're getting better each day," Reynolds said.

The victory, coming on the heels of a 54-49 victory at Virginia Tech on Sunday, can only help as Leitao tries to reinforce his message to the Cavaliers (9-6, 3-2).

"I can talk until I'm blue in the face, but these proving points happen, fortunately or unfortunately, when you win or lose games," he said.

"As long as they do the things in practice and conduct themselves in a manner that prepares them to win, then this becomes the ultimate in proving what you're doing is right, what I'm saying is right and what we're going to be about is right." In the only other game involving a Top 25 team, it was No. 10 Washington 69, Oregon State 65.

"In years past, we've been a defensive team and not an offensive team," said Sivills. "But now it seems like we're beginning to click a little bit on the offensive end."

Former Racer, NBA star Jones gets degree from Murray State

Ronald "Popeye" Jones helped put Murray State basketball on the map.

After the 1990-91 season, he left MSU as the Racers' all-time leading rebounder and third-leading scorer, and the winner of four straight Ohio Valley Conference championships. But nothing he achieved on the court compares to earning his degree in December from MSU.

Jones, speaking from his home in Denver, Colo., hopes more former MSU student-athletes will complete their degrees.

Jones played again with Dallas in 2003-04, and his last season was with Golden State in 2004-05, when he played only five games due to injury.

Deadline for registration is Thursday, Jan. 26. Call the Red Cross at 753-1421 or the Humane Society at 759-1884 for more information.

The American Red Cross and Humane Society of Calloway County will sponsor a four-hour pet first aid course to teach cat and dog owners the skills to provide immediate care prior to taking an injured animal to a veterinarian, as well as skills to monitor their animal's health after treatment

Pet first aid will be January 28 from 12:30-4:30 p.m. at the Calloway County Public Library. The $30 class fee includes a pet first aid handbook, supplies and certificate of completion.

Pre-registration is required by Thursday at the Calloway County Chapter of the American Red Cross in the Weaks Community Center. Make checks payable to American Red Cross and mail to or bring to the office at 607 Poplar St., weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

All participants need to bring stuffed animal, preferably a dog or cat, for demonstration purposes.

The goal of pet first aid is to protect both the pet and the owner from further harm, injury or suffering during emergencies by teaching prompt, effective actions that will safeguard the life of the injured pet.

"We can dial 911 for people.

We can dial 911 for people. This class substitutes as 911 for pets.

> - Kathy Hodge Executive Director of the Humane Society of Calloway County

This class substitutes as 911 for pets," said Kathy Hodge, executive director of the Humane Society.

Pet first aid teaches cat and dog owners how to respond to a wide range of animal emergencies, from dressing a wound to performing CPR to preparing pets for natural disasters. Pet lovers also learn how to monitor their furry companion's wellbeing by learning the animal's normal temperature, blood pressure and other health parame-

"It's a good idea for any pet owner to take a pet first aid class, so they will have some confidence if something happens to their pet. It gives them peace of mind," Hodge said.

The course, taught by Red Cross first aid instructor Shawn Maxwell, will include use of an instructional video and opportunities to practice first aid and CPR skills. The handbook used is titled "Pet First Aid for Cats and Dogs" and was developed by the American Red Cross and the Humane Society of the United States.

In addition to Maxwell's certification as a pet first aid instructor, she has an extensive background in the animal welfare field. A volunteer and board member of the Humane Society of Calloway County for many years, Maxwell was animal shelter director from 1985-1995 and was instrumental in obtaining shelter accreditation status from Humane American Association. In addition, she has served on the Murray State University Animal Health Technology Advisory Board, and she is owner of TENDERS pet-sitting and house-sitting service. Call the Red Cross at 753-1421 or the Humane Society at 759-1884 for more information.

U.S. threat level

WASHINGTON (AP) -Rejecting a suggestion by Osama bin Laden of a negotiated truce in the war on terror, Vice President Dick Cheney said there was only one way to deal with terrorists. "I think you have to destroy them," Cheney said.

The vague offer of a truce - coupled with a threat of another attack on the U.S. was made in an audiotape released by the Arab television network Al-Jazeera. It brought new attention to the al-Qaida leader after a yearlong lull in his public statements.

U.S. security officials said Thursday there were currently no plans to raise the nation's security threat level because of the new tane.

Counterterror officials said they have seen no specific or credible intelligence to indicate an upcoming al-Qaida attack. Nor have they noticed an uptick in terrorist communications "chatter" - although that can dramatically increase or decrease immediately before an attack.

On the tape, bin Laden warned that his fighters are preparing new attacks in the United States but offered the American people a "long-term truce" without specifying the conditions.

But Cheney, in a television interview, rejected that suggestion, saying "We don't negoti-

The FBI has asked the 103 joint terrorism task forces and intelligence units at its 56 field offices to re-examine its cases and investigative leads in light of the bin Laden tape. "Do you see something in your area of operation that might be assessed as more significant than it was the day before?" said an FBI official on condition of anonymity because he was discussing an internal FBI communication.

The national terror threat level currently stands at yellow, the middle of five grades, signifying an elevated risk of attack.

The government has raised the alert level to orange, signaling a high threat risk, seven times since the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

Some say Okla. City bombing witness' release too soon

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -With the scheduled release today of the star witness in the Oklahoma City bombing trials, some say Michael Fortier's prison sentence for not telling authorities about the deadly plot was not long enough.

Fortier, 37, has served about 85 percent of a 12-year sentence in federal prison. He received a plea deal in which he agreed to testify in the trials of bombing coconspirators Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols.

Officials have declined to say exactly when and where Fortier will be released. Originally of Kingman, Ariz., Fortier will reunite with his wife, Lori, and their two children, said his attorney, Michael McGuire.

Stephen Jones, who represented McVeigh at his federal bombing trial, said Fortier's sentence seems out of line with the harsher sentences much received by McVeigh and Nichols: McVeigh was convicted on federal murder charges and executed on June 11, 2001. Nichols was convicted of state and federal bombing charges and is serving multiple life prison sentences.

"His own testimony establishes his own culpability and his wife's culpability," Jones

At state and federal bombing trials, Fortier testified he received stolen weapons that were sold to finance the bombing, shared money from their sale with McVeigh, handled blasting caps and other explosives and had the same anti-government literature that McVeigh gave Nichols.

Fortier also accompanied McVeigh on a trip where they cased the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building four months before it was bombed on April 19, 1995, killing 168 people and injuring more than 500 others.

Lori Fortier, who was granted immunity and never served prison time, also testified at McVeigh's trial that she laminated a fake driver's license for McVeigh with the name of one of the many aliases he used, Robert Kling.

"I think the investigation was flawed. One of them got away and the other received a much lighter sentence," Jones said.

Brian Hermanson, who defended Nichols at his 2004 murder trial in Oklahoma, said the government's allegations against Fortier and Nichols were not very different.

Yet, Nichols was tried on charges that could have led to the death penalty and Fortier was allowed to plead to lesser charges.

"It does seem sort of unusual," he said.

Soul singer Wilson Pickett dies of heart attack at age 64

NEW YORK (AP) - Wilson Pickett, the soul singer with the raspy voice and passionate behind "Mustang Sally" and "In the

died after a heart attack in a Reston, Va., hospital, said Chris, Tuthill of management

Pickett company Talent Source, which represented him. The singer lived in Ashburn, Va.

"He did his part. It was a great ride, a great trip, I loved him and I'm sure he was wellloved," Michael Wilson Pickett, the singer's son, told WRC-TV in Washington.

Known as "Wicked Pickett," he became a star with such 1960s hits as "In the Midnight Hour," which made the top 25 on the Billboard pop charts in 1965 and "Mustang Sally," which did the same the follow-

The Alabama-born Pickett got his start singing gospel music in church. After moving to Detroit as a teen, he joined the Falcons, which scored the hit "

Found a Love" with Pickett as lead singer in 1962.

Pickett went solo a year later and would soon find his greatest

In 1965, he linked with soul producer Jerry Wexler at Stax Records in Memphis and recorded one of his greatest hits, "In the Midnight Hour," for Atlantic Records.

A string of hits followed, including "634-5789," "Funky Broadway" and "Mustang Sally." His sensuous brand of soul contrasted sharply with the songs put out by his Detroit Motown counterparts at Records.

In a statement, Aretha Franklin said Pickett was one of the greatest soul singers of all

"He will absolutely be missed," she said. "I am thankful that I got the chance to speak to him not too long ago."

Roger Friedman, a journalist and friend who featured Pickett in his 2002 documentary on soul music greats, "Only the Strong Survive," said Pickett was 'Atlantic's answer to James

As Pickett entered a new decade, he had less success on the charts but still scored a few more hits, including "Don't Let The Green Grass Fool You.

"Like all these great legends of R&B, when disco came in, it really impacted their careers. said. Friedman Americans don't realize is they have all continued to be incredibly popular in Europe - every summer, touring Europe to incredible crowds."

Still, Pickett suffered through some tough times. In 1991, he was arrested for allegedly yelling death threats while driving a car over the mayor's front lawn in Englewood, N.J., and less than a year later was charged with assaulting his girl-

In 1993, he was convicted of drunken driving and sentenced to a year in jail and five years' probation after hitting an 86year-old man with his car. In 1987, he was given two years' probation and fined $1,000 for carrying a loaded shotgun in his

Besides his induction into the Hall of Fame in 1991, Pickett was given the Pioneer award by Rhythm and Blues Foundation two years later.

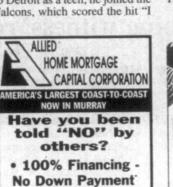

"If I wasn't in show business I don't know what I would have been - a wanderer or something, you know?" he said in a 2001 interview. "But God blessed me with the talent and the chance. I knocked on enough doors and this is what I can give myself credit for.'

Clarkson to let songs be sung on 'Idol' show

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) Former "American Idol" winner Kelly Clarkson, subject to a scolding from Simon Cowell for not letting her songs be used by new contestants on the show, has agreed to do so.

Clarkson's Sony BMG record label said Clarkson's management was negotiating with the show over which songs will be used. A day earlier, he said Clarkson was not allowing any of her songs to be licensed for other purposes.

That was also a day after "American Idol" judge Cowell sharply criticized her. "I think that by ignoring the show you're ignoring the audience who put you there," Cowell said.

BIRTHDAY HAPPY for Saturday, Jan. 21, 2006:

You always want to take the high road and not react to different situations. Understanding leads you down a new path. You are able to relate to people, friends and loved ones as you haven't in many years. As a result, you discover how open you can be as you present a compassionate port in the storm. By breaking old thought patterns you will be able to realize much more of what you want. If you are single, friends will be instrumental in meeting new people, and possibly meeting "the one" late fall 2006. If you are attached, your relationship will become an even happier one, especially if you travel and socialize more together. LIBRA sees beyond the obvian affair before we got together. He was going to leave his wife and live with her before we met, but when push came to shove, he stayed with his wife and just used mine for sex.

One of the messages dis-cussed a planned meeting that did not take place -- only because he got stuck at work. She e-mailed him and told him he could stop by the house any night after 10 and have sex for an hour or two because our 5vear-old son and I were sleeping in other bedrooms!

She insists that "nothing happened," which I have trouble believing. We have been seeing a therapist who believes my wife, and says that since "nothing happened" it wasn't an affair. I disagree. Am I wrong? -

- FURIOUS IN NEW JERSEY DEAR FURIOUS: You now have two problems. You have a therapist who is siding with your wife, and an advice columnist who sees it your way. No, I do not think you are wrong. And unless your wife can come up with a satisfactory explanation for inviting her old lover over for sex under the same roof as her child and her husband, I'd say your marriage is O.V.E.R.

DEAR ABBY: I have one sister. Our mother is deceased. When our father passes away, he will leave a sizable estate to my sister and me, consisting of two homes and various businesses.

Because my sister lives 300 miles away, I will likely be the one taking care of Dad's affairs after his death. This will involve a great deal of time, going through both houses, some cleaning, and too many phone calls to count, etc.

Would it be fair to keep track of the time my husband and I devote to this, charge an hourly fee, and deduct it from my sister's share of our father's estate? Let's face it, fair is fair. --DREADING WHAT'S AHEAD

DEAR DREADING: It seems fair to me. However, if your father has his faculties, this is something that should be discussed while he's still living so it can be noted in his will. If he's too ill to talk, then speak to the lawyer who drew up the will. You may be surprised to learn that what you have in mind is usual and customary. The lawyer can explain it to you.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend, "Craig," whom I have known almost a year. We have become closer than friends in a lot of ways -- except the one way that counts, if you know what I mean.

Craig likes to tease me about sex, but says it will never happen because he doesn't want to ruin the friendship. Do you think it's fair for him to arouse me and then just run out the door?

Craig says he doesn't want me, but when I go out on dates with other people he gets mad. How should I handle this? --IRRITATED IN GEORGIA

DEAR IRRITATED: The key phrase in your letter is "he says he doesn't want me." Craig may enjoy teasing you (a power play), or he might be gay (unavailable for romance). In either case, the result will be frustration for you if you allow the relationship to continue as it is. I say, move on.

I have had a nuclear stress test and an EKG, and I have seen a cardiologist. He is suggesting an angiogram, since they could find no reason for this happening. Judging from the stress test and EKG, I am fine.

Have you ever heard of pain in the jaw caused by indigestion? The pain does go away after I take the Phazyme and burp, but it is a worry to me.

DEAR READER: You appear to have been tested thoroughly for heart problems that can cause chest pain and indigestion. You checked out normal, so you must now focus your attention on noncardiac problems, especially those arising from your gastrointestinal

From your brief description, I suspect that you have acid follow up with your physician.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have silicone breast implants. The capsule around the implants hardened, and my doctor had to perform a closed capsulotomy. Is this condition going to cause health problems in the

DEAR READER: From your brief description, I conclude that your surgeon had to modify the covering that kept your breast implants in place. In my experience, this is an unusual solution to the problem of malfunctioning implants, A more customary approach would be to remove the silicone entirely and replace the prostheses with saline breast implants.

Although several studies have failed to demonstrate an unequivocal relation between silicone breast implants and autoimmune diseases, such as lupus and scleroderma, many women believe that they have suffered irreparable damage from leaking breast prostheses, causing arthritis, fatigue and a host of other symptoms.

Therefore, I urge you to obtain a second opinion from another surgeon, who might recommend another operation to remove the silicone and substitute a less toxic substance.

AAQ * * * 1. This is one of those hands where you're certain to make the contract regardless of how the missing cards are divided - provided you play correctly. Obviously, there's no problem if the diamonds are divided 2-1: You simply cash the A-Q-9 of diamonds and then overtake the eight with dummy's king. That gives you nine tricks, easy as pie what you will do if the opposing diamonds are divided 3-0 cent probability. In that case, with one opponent holding the J-10-6, you won't be able to run six diamond tricks unless you can find a way of untangling the blockage in the suit.

This can easily be done by ducking the king of clubs and the next club if North continues the suit. Whether the defenders play a third club or not, sooner or later you can dispose of your nine of diamonds on dummy's ace of clubs and thus run the entire

Note that North cannot defeat you by shifting to a heart at trick two. In by shifting to a near at trick two. In that case, you win the hear, lead the seven of clubs and play low from dummy. Regardless of how the oppo-nents continue, you cannot be prevented from eventually discarding the diamond nine on the club ace to make the contract.

2. Win the diamond lead with the jack, draw trumps, cash three more diamond tricks, discarding a spade, then play the ace and another spade toward dummy's remaining Q-7. If North has the king of spades, dummy's queen becomes your 12th trick. If South has the king of spades. you still have the club finesse to fall

It is important to first test your luck in spades rather than clubs, because by doing so you give yourself an extra chance to make the slam if North was dealt the king of spades. If you tried the club finesse first and lost the queen to the king, you would still have to lose a trick to the king of spades. By tackling spades first, you give yourself two chances to make the contract instead of just one.

Man crushed by car wasn't noticed for three hours

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — A man who was crushed to death while unloading cars from his tractor-trailer in Paducah went unnoticed on a roadside for at least three hours.

Douglas Hovis, 45, of Ennis, Texas, died Wednesday after being caught between a car and the bottom level of his semitruck, McCracken County Coroner Dan Sims said. Hovis' cause of death was mechanical asphyxiation, Sims said.

Hovis was discovered by a passer-by who stopped to ask about a car that had been unloaded.

Terry Carman of Paducah told police he saw a man's legs sticking out and thought the man was working on a car on the lower level of the trailer. When he approached the man to ask about the car, Carman said he saw that the man had been crushed and summoned authorities.

Action threatened if plant pensions aren't protected

PADUCAH, Ky. (AP) — A Kentucky congressman is considering congressional action and a union said it may sue if the U.S. Department of Energy doesn't do more to protect the pensions of former workers at the Paducah Gaseous Diffusion Plant who might get cleanup jobs.

U.S. Rep. Ed Whitfield said Thursday that Congress's intention was "quite clear" when it passed a law directing the Energy Department to maintain longtime pension and health care transfer policies.

So far, the department has refused to extend those benefits to the new cleanup contractor, Paducah Remediation Services.

If the Energy Department doesn't extend the benefits, nuclear plant unions in Paducah and Piketon, Ohio, may sue to enforce the law, said Rob Ervin, president of the United Steelworkers Local 5-550. Another option would be for Congress to reinforce language passed in the Energy Conference Report last fall, Whitfield said.

Ervin was one of six witnesses before the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations hearing Thursday in the Paducah City Commission chambers.

It was the first field hearing of the subcommittee chaired by Whitfield, a Republican from Hopkinsville.

In April, Paducah Remediation Services will replace longtime contractor Bechtel Jacobs, which along with subcontractor Weskem employs 159 people.

The 1,100-job plant is expected to close in 2010.

Expanded gambling foes speak out

By BRUCE SCHREINER Associated Press Writer

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) — Opposition to expanded gambling grew Thursday when a group claiming it has business ties argued that casinos would hurt Kentucky businesses.

The new group called "Say No to Casinos" said the gambling centers would divert huge sums of money that otherwise would be spent at an array of businesses. Group spokesman John-Mark Hack said casino gaming would carry social costs as well — increased crime and bankruptcies and greater reliance on public assistance.

A handful of bills aimed at giving Kentuckians more gambling options have been introduced in the General Assembly, and horse interests are crafting their own version.

Rep. Denver Butler, who is sponsoring a proposal to put casino gambling before voters as a proposed constitutional amendment, said House sentiment appears mixed.

"I'd be afraid to even guess at it right now," said Butler, D-Louisville. "Some of them are scared to death of it and some of them say, 'Let's go with it."

Supporters say that expanded gambling would generate hundreds of millions in tax dollars that would benefit education, Medicaid and other social services.

Hack said the new group speaking out against casinos consists of Kentuckians from various business sectors including equine, banking and real estate.

Hack said the group would shed light in coming weeks on the "harsh reality in store for Kentucky businesses and our economy" if casino gambling is

Jim Navolio, executive director of the Kentucky Equine Education Project, which is preparing a version of expanded gambling legislation, said Hack's comments amounted to a "disinformation" campaign. He said casinos would enhance other businesses.

Navolio said opponents want to defend a status quo in which Indiana and Illinois siphon millions of dollars from Kentuckians who gamble on the two states' riverboats.

The anti-casino group was joined by several lawmakers opposed to casino gaming.

"This would be a regressive tax, it predominantly would prey on the lower income," said Rep. Brad Montell, R-Shelbyville.

Kent Ostrander, executive director of the Family Foundation in Lexington, said defeating expanded gambling was his group's top priority.

Ostrander said the business community that has supported expanded gambling "has been duped." Casinos would result in "money being sucked out of the economy, and there'll be less disposable income that can be spent," he said.

Butler said Kentuckians already are spending huge sums on riverboat casinos perched just off the state's northern border.

"It's just keeping what we're sending over to Indiana and Illinois," he said.

Handling Bullies in a Biblical Way

Question: What does the Bible say regarding Christian believers dealing with those who boss or bully them or others? I know about turning the "other cheek", but sometimes I run out of cheeks to turn! I'm no bruiser, but I don't want to be perceived as a wimp either.

Answer: The Bible clearly teaches that revengeful retaliation is inappropriate and wrong To return evil for evil may be effective sometimes, but it tends to result in an endless cycle of hostility. On the other hand, to passively accept and submit to bullying often leads to stress, bitterness and depression as well as a break down of mental and physical health. Jesus acknowledged that he was sending his disciples out into a harsh and cruel world where they would be "like sheep among wolves." Thus, he told them, "Be as shrewd as snakes and as innocent as doves" (Matthew 10:16). Shrewdness involves the exercise of intelligent and reasonable wisdom. I believe it is possible to see this illustrated in the teachings of

In the Sermon on the Mount Jesus said, "You have heard that it was said, 'Eye for eye, and tooth for tooth.' But I tell you, Do not resist an evil person. If someone strikes you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if someone wants to sue you and take your tunic, let him have your cloak as well. If someone forces you to go one mile, go with him two miles. Give to the one who asks you, and do not turn away from the one who wants to borrow from you" (Matthew 5:38-

). When Jesus said, "Do not word that means not to oppose or stand against with hostility as one army stands against another. He went on to illustrate how this can be done. He said, "If someone strikes you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also." A right-handed person would have to use the back of his hand to strike someone's right cheek. This was not a blow of force, but a form of insult and humiliation by a person in power toward one considered powerless such as a slave, woman or child. By exposing the other or left cheek, one is calling for an open blow of the fist. To strike a person in this way would acknowledge the target as an equal. This would have been unthinkable.

Jesus also said, "If someone wants to sue you and take your tunic, let him have your cloak as well." This pictures a poor man in a court of law being sued for payment of a loan. For the poor man to give up not just one, but both of his garments, would leave him standing naked. This would have been shameful for the one who was the cause if his nakedness. This, too, was unthinkable.

In a third illustration, Jesus said, "Whoever shall force you to go one mile, go with him two." By law the Roman soldier could force a person in an occupied country to carry his backpack for up to a mile.

According to theologian Walter Wink, the solder would have been punished if he asked for his load to be carried further. The offer to take his load another mile would cause him to hesitate to ask for the first mile, lest he be punished for going further.

In each of these cases, the action taken is neither revengeful retaliation nor passive submission to unjust mistreatment.
The action proposed would have brought the target of unjust attacks into a position where the power is balanced.
By this shrewd action an end to unjust mistreatment is possible.

While the specific of this may not address your specific problem with a bully, I believe the principle should be helpful. A friend shares an experience that provides a modern illustration of this kind of shrewdness. As a young boy he dealt with a bully who took away his drink during school recess. The next day in clear sight of the bully he spit into his drink. The bully

Typically, bullies become very predictable in their attacks. The field of psychology teaches that there is preemptive power in predicting behavior before it happens. When you see it coming, you might tell the bully, "You're going to get angry and attack me. You're going to tell me what to do and how to do.

And you are going to intimidate and humiliate me. But I can take it. Go ahead and do your thing." I guarantee you that done in the right way, this will balance the power and stop the bully in his/her tracks.

In applying this principle we need to constantly check our attitudes so as not to be guilty of trying to take revenge. I believe there is also power in obeying Jesus command to love our enemies.

Perhaps some of our readers can suggest other creative ways to balance the power without revenge or passively accepting mistreatment. I would be glad to share what to do and how to do it with all of our readers.
