the way interest piles up over a period of years, and overreaches the principal, can readily see the importance of taking the necessary precautions to guard against this happening. The simple interest formula can be applied in this situation; however, the principal often grows at a compound rate, which is more complex. About all we can tell from the simple interest calculation is that if interest is 10% and the principal is $100, the interest after one year will be $10. But this doesn't tell us the true picture. For example, if the interest rate is 10% and the principal is $100, the amount after one year will be $110. This is because the interest earnt in the first year is added to the principal to form the basis for calculating the interest for the second year, and so on. Therefore, it is crucial to understand the concept of compound interest and how it affects the growth of capital over time.
