Another Raid on the Mountaineers.

Last Friday night Deputy Collectors T. W. Buckner, T. H. Moore, G. W. Gosman and Deputy Marshall John R. Rife made a raid on the "mountain stills" in Grayson county, which furnished the plot for the recent thrilling adventure of Deputy Collector Moore, a full account of which appeared in the New Era at the time.

The officers above mentioned had been informed that the "boys" who were so fond of manufacturing "mountain dew," had moved their stills to a more secluded spot, and having located the same, they made a bold sneak on it and captured three of the illicit distillers. The three were marched into Letchfield Saturday and an examining trial was held which resulted in the "free sons of the soil" being held over until October, when they will be given a final hearing.

Killing in Todd.

Last Saturday night about three miles from Trenton, Henry Perkins, colored, shot and killed a colored man named Cross. Perkins killed another negro at Trenton about 2 years ago by the name of Waller. No one saw the difficulty on Saturday night, and we were unable to obtain the full particulars of the killing. Cross was shot in the forehead and evidently his death was instantaneous.

It is thought now that Perkins is hiding in this city and the officers are making a thorough search for him. It is rumored that he only shows himself at night and it is highly probable that he will be captured if he remains here.

For Violating the Revenue Law.

Deputy Marshall John Rife, of Greenville, arrested John Rife for violating the revenue laws of the country last Thursday, unloading day. Rife was carried before U. S. Commissioner Judge J. I. Tander, who after hearing the evidence in full, released the accused. Rife was charged with retaining liquor without license.

Rev. T. J. Duncan, pastor of the Methodist church at Pulaski, Tenn., was delivering a lecture on Prohibition at Springfield, Tenn., last Thursday when two dynamite cartridges were exploded in the rear of the building. The house was considerably damaged and the ground torn up for some distance around but nobody was hurt. The soundless who did the work have not been discovered.

Mr. W. E. Fullmer, while attempting to shoot some birds, with a pistol in the country last Friday, accidentally shot himself. The ball entered his right leg at the calf and ranged upward, lodging it is thought, near the knee. The wound is quite serious one but not necessarily dangerous.

We are in receipt of the card of the First National Bank, of Nashville, Man. of which J. F. Board is President and B. W. Wesley Asst. Cashier. The two gentlemen are well known here.

Crofton Items.

Industry is a virtue that those who do not even practice it themselves acknowledge, when practiced by others. Lessons of that virtue might be profitably taken from animals and even insects who practice it from instinct. These little insects seem sometimes to have reason enough to try to impart lessons in this virtue to men, who sadly need it. The honey bee sometimes gives a few practical lessons in industry assailing the most prominent organs of a slug, and he, in turn, who is thus taught, begins to feel that he, too, has a duty to perform. He does not even practice it himself, but he is taught to do so by the example of the bee. He is taught to do so by the example of the bee. He is taught to do so by the example of the bee.

The old saying that "where there is a will there is a way" falls to some times materialize. A young gentleman stepped into a store here yesterday and concluded to size up the available pool the same. After vainly running the beam from one end to the other and seeing that it failed to give him any definite satisfaction he turned to a clerk and began to abuse the accuracy of the scales, when the clerk suggested to him he had better get both feet on the platform at once, when the young man discovered to his disgust that he had been trying to weigh himself with one foot on the scales and the other on the floor. He had the will but failed in the weight.

Dr. Deans' Sermons.

Dr. Deans was greeted with an immense crowd at the cemetery Sunday. His sermon from Rev. 5, 9, was an exhaustive and brilliant defense of Christianity from a scientific standpoint. His sermon at night at the opera house was also listened to by a crowded house of our best people.

His assurance on the cross.

The text was in the 30th verse of the 11th chapter of St. John: "and I was written in letters, and Greek and Latin." The sermon began by saying that the Cross of Jesus Christ was the central figure in the history of humanity and in the biography of God. From Eden up to Calvary the history of man is a history of sin and of the struggle for redemption. The purpose of God in creating man was to bring him to the knowledge of God and to the life of holiness. All that God did before sent him to Calvary was to prepare him for the sacrifice of himself.

It is interesting, even this apparently small matter of the emblem on the Cross. When a man was led out to be crucified it was the custom for heralds to carry his accusers before him, with them on a tablet whitened with gypsum. This was the tablet over the head of the convict on the cross. As to the matter of this supererogation, but all were intended as a reproach: Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews, the Son of David, the Son of Man, the Son of God. Perhaps it meant that this poor fellow was good enough king for those Jews. (Or Plato might have said something like this.) "They said they would have no king but Caesar." I cradled Jesus, he then king he is a dead king, and the nails by which I fasten him to the cross bind them to their rejection of all kings but Caesar. In any sense it was intended for a reproach of Jesus of the Jews; but it was a testimony to Christ's innocence. When one says that Jesus was against another and the accusation turns out to be crime it is great proof of innocence. Jesus' government had tried Jesus and this was all that could be made out against him. It really set forth his holiness. He was the kingliest man the Jewish nation had ever produced.

The Doctor here stated and analyzed the testimony of three had men as to Jesus, namely, Barabbas, Calapher and Pilate. He then took up the language in which the subscription on the cross was written, and said that the very circumstances suggested several very great lessons.

First, that the way of the cross was prepared by the death of Jesus. The life was the religious civilization. The life was not a poetic, not a philosophic, nor a conquering people. They had produced some poets whose productions would live forever, and some philosophers whose writings would be read for centuries, and some warriors whose names were rolled in blood, but the life of Jesus was the death of Jesus. The life of Jesus was the death of Jesus. The life of Jesus was the death of Jesus.

The second lesson was that the religion of the crucified Jesus supplied the lack of humanity as represented by these three civilizations. The Jew was locked up in a rigid system. The Greek infused humanity into religion and taught man potentially in lessons when properly and systematically administered. So of the last, who never fails to stimulate him with an energy and a desire to use no time in making his acquaintance with an ability that would do credit to the most ambitious laborer. Lessons so inculcated may be of no practical benefit to the man directly receiving them, but they are of lasting benefit to perpetuate the reputation of the bee and the ant as the representatives of the great industrial league.

The McElroy Case.

The Journal speaks for quiet and a cessation of noisy invective. It is true that the patience of our people has been tried to the utmost, and that some have been deluded by talk of "irrepressible conflict" and the like, as if irrepressible evidence is not often better and more conclusive than direct evidence. Circumstances may not lie, but many a conviction has been had upon the perjured testimony of witnesses who swore they saw the transaction in question. But amidst the hurly-burly it seems to have been forgotten that circumstantial evidence that he was the man in the wagon with Mary was not even the best evidence. The confessions were given in the clearest and most unmistakable manner by gentlemen of character and under circumstances which preclude collusion or impossibility. In these confessions McElroy admitted that he was the man who accompanied Mary on the road. This being proved, there is no way of clearing him of guilty connection with the murder of the innocent man. We express confidence, therefore, that justice will be done in the end, and ask the people to bide their time.

As for the Excelsior, J. J. Crocker Knott, we have no expressions to withhold. We are informed that respectable persons here had written him warning him that the lives of divers citizens would be jeopardized by his interference, and stating the facts in the case. We are also informed that not one position went up from Henderson making excessive claims. The murder was committed in this county; an intelligent Henderson jury tried the condemned; the best legal talent defended him, and yet, for such, the Governor, against the protest and without consultation with a person officer or citizen, gave over our hands and sold up a portion of our country in so vital a matter concerning the sacrifice of human lives in our midst and the preservation of law and order by our people. A few of the people of Henderson may have justified his Excellency when the people were asked, but surely the limits was no greater than that heaped upon the people of Henderson by the Governor by his conduct in this matter.

As for the part taken by our distinguished friend, Hon. J. A. Spaulding, in securing the respite, we have only to say that he acted as an attorney for McElroy, and Gov. Knott knew, or had good reason to know, that he was thus acting. It shifts the whole responsibility upon the Governor, for the mere fact that he was a personal friend and an appointee of the Governor should not change his relations when acting in the capacity of an attorney representing a client.

The Journal does not advise "hang-in-effy," and that sort of thing, but the case which occurred here last Friday night is looked upon rather in the light of harmless vapors in which boys principally took part, though it cannot be denied that something of indignation was incurred to be expressed by a small portion of the people.

Henderson has always admired and stood by Mr. Spaulding, but our citizen friends should put themselves in our place, as it were. Suppose Henderson attorney—J. J. Crocker Knott, John Young Brown, for instance—being on terms of personal friendship with the Governor, had stepped in shortly before the execution of Canon Ford and asked a respite for either of these men, or without consulting the people of Christian county or informing them as to the facts on which the action was based, the Governor had issued a respite on the simple ground that the condemned might have another opportunity to prove his innocence? What would the people of Christian county have thought of the light of reason have forever fled in the deluge of passion that followed? It is but reasonable to suppose that such would have been the case.

Mrs. Summers.

Mrs. Julia Summers (nee Bodie) was born Nov. 24, 1835, was married to Wm. D. Summers, of this county, in 1855, and died March 10th, 1887. Soon after her marriage she joined the Methodist church, and remained a devoted working member until her last illness. She was not content to be a mere member of the church, but looked after the poor and distressed, was watchful of the needs of her pastor and his family, and ever ready to visit the sick, and to talk to the unconverted and entreat them to turn to God. She was a lady of rare mental and personal attractions, and was beloved and appreciated by her relations and acquaintances as no religionist is about two weeks before her death, her husband said to her, "If you should become ill, is your way bright?" She promptly replied, "Yes, I feel ready and willing to go whenever Lord calls me." Her sister expressed fear that such questions would excite her, but she said, "No, it will not excite me." And as her husband talked to her of the many happy hours which they had spent together, and of the heavenly world which they would enjoy in heaven, she was as calm and peaceful as when preparing to go to church. Finally the angels came for her, and without one pain or struggle, her sweet spirit ascended to God who gave it.

"Asleep in Jesus," blessed sleep. From her home over which we weep.

In addition to the above, written by her bereaved companion, I desire to bear testimony to the many excellencies of sister Summers. As her pastor, having frequently visited her I always found her a most lovely character, devoted to her home and the church she loved so well. "She did what she could." And the many Christian kindnesses enjoyed at her hands rendered her to our hearts. The church has lost one of her brightest ornaments, her home has lost its light, and tenderest guardian, her pastor a treasured friend and the community will not find her like again.

"Home Sweet Home" Our home forever. At the last journey west. Welcome home to a sister sister, "We'll love Jesus—Home at last."

Another Killing in Logan.

Russellville, Ky., May 21.—News has reached here of another killing to be chronicled in Logan's gory record. Jack Mason and Jack Norris, two young farmers, lived near Mason's mill, in this county. There had been an old feud existing between them for some time, though there had been no open demonstration by either up to Wednesday night. About dark that evening as Mason was driving along the road toward home, two men stepped out from the shadow of the fence and told him they were going to whip him, and approached him in a threatening manner. One of the men was Norris and the other a man named Barber. Mason was without any means of defending himself, and getting off his wagon on the opposite side of the attacking party started off down the road. The two men followed rapidly, and soon overtaking him one of them made a murderous assault upon him with a club. Mason had no weapons except an ordinary clasp-knife and opening this, he made a desperate thrust at Norris' throat. The blade entered Norris' neck just under his left ear making a gash across his throat about seven inches long, and inflicting a wound from which Norris died last night. Barber, seeing Norris' throat cut almost from ear to ear, turned and fled, and has not been heard of since. Mason went immediately to Adairville and gave himself up to the authorities. Norris' reputation of being a respectable citizen when sober, but a desperate when drinking.

RICH TEAS FROM INDIA.

Calcutta Sends Better Brands for Less Money Than the Flowery Kingdom.

Most tea drinkers credit China and Japan for their fragrant tipple. A great deal of tea, and some of it very good, is being brought here from India, Ceylon and Java. Since 1875 the quantity of tea imported to England from India, Ceylon and Java has increased from 5,000 pounds to 75,000,000 pounds last year.

"Six years ago such a thing was unheard of in New York," said one of the largest tea importers in the country. "It is a striking instance of the richness of Great Britain's India possessions and the rapidity with which the trade is being pushed between England and her provinces."

"Is there any profit for American dealers in these India teas?"
"No, their importation so far has not paid at either end. The exporters have operated at a loss and importers have made no money. But the growers of the tea in India, Ceylon and Java, and the shippers of it, are making a fortune."

"The tea from India is of a different color when they are drawn, and the mixing of them with Congou or other teas from China produces a flavor that can be got in no other tea."

"Is India tea richer and Japan out of the trade, then?"
"Oh no. It is not claimed nor expected that the trade from China, Japan or Formosa will be killed. China's highest grade green tea is very fine. So is the tea from Japan. Probably no other best grade tea equal them. For the India tea it is claimed, however, that the cheaper grades are far superior to the same grades from any other country."

Hence the India trade will give the people a better quality of tea at a lower price. No coloring matter whatever is used in curing India tea, and they contain absolutely nothing to affect the nerves. Yet they are stronger than the other brands. Let me show you the difference in color when they are drawn. The tea from India is a delicate yellowish green, while the tea from China is a dark, almost black, color. The tea from Japan is a dark, almost black, color. The tea from Formosa is a dark, almost black, color.

Work of Nature's Sculptor.

We are accustomed to associate such gigantic water carvings as the Colorado canyon and the Niagara gorge with almost inconceivable periods of time, yet instances are numerous of the wearing force of deep by two or three feet in a year.

Lyell mentions the case of the Simso, in Sicily, which had been dammed by lava in 1868. In two years the lava had melted and the water had run down the Simso, in Sicily, which had been dammed by lava in 1868. But it is in the low lands bordering rivers that the flood artist finds the plastic material that must be molded with each passing season. With high water the streams rapidly wear into earthy banks, commanding new lands or cutting off old ones, and even opening new channels of discharge.

The great and turbulent Hoang-Ho is noted for its devastations. In 1850 it emptied into the Yellow sea, and in 1851 it emptied into the Gulf of Pecheli, nearly 800 miles north of its former outlet, and it departed from the old channel more than thirty miles. This is the last of many changes, bad and forth, recorded by the Chinese during the past 3,000 years.—Arkansas Traveler.

The Horse Not Intelligent.

It always seemed to me that there was a great deal of superstition, I may say, about the intelligence of the horse. Sauntering up to an expression at the corner of Monroe and Dearborn streets the other day I said to him: "How much do you know?" "A horse, sir," he replied. "A horse knows as much as a man—just exactly."
