Technologist gets suspension for signing name of Calloway planner

By TOM BERRY
Staff Writer

A technologist with the Environmental and Public Protection Cabinet has been suspended from her job for two days without pay for reportedly signing Calloway County Flood Plain Coordinator Dawn Gaskin's name to a construction application filed by Robbie Rudolph.

According to a letter obtained from Cabinet Secretary LaJuana Wilcher by the Murray Ledger & Times under the Kentucky Open Records/Open Meetings Act, technologist Traci B. Hyatt admitted to signing Gaskin's name on the document.

"On August 18, 2006, you admitted to Deputy Inspector General John Holiday that you wrote Ms. Gaskin's signature on this application because of a lapse in judgment, and that no one asked you to write Ms. Gaskin's signature on this application," Wilcher wrote in the letter notifying Hyatt of the suspension action.

Hyatt reportedly signed Gaskin's name to the document.

This property at 1620 Olive St. borders the construction on Murray State's chemistry building that will eventually join the existing biology building. MSU most recently purchased 1614 Olive St. — the last property it needed for this second phase of the complex — for $216,000 after citing the Eminent Domain Act in court action. Between MSU's Public Safety on the corner of Olive and 16th streets and this picture, the university has demolished property, including 1614 and 1618 Olive, on the north side of the street that borders the developing science complex.

Rick Bender, the self-named "Man Without a Face," doesn't like the term "smokeless tobacco."

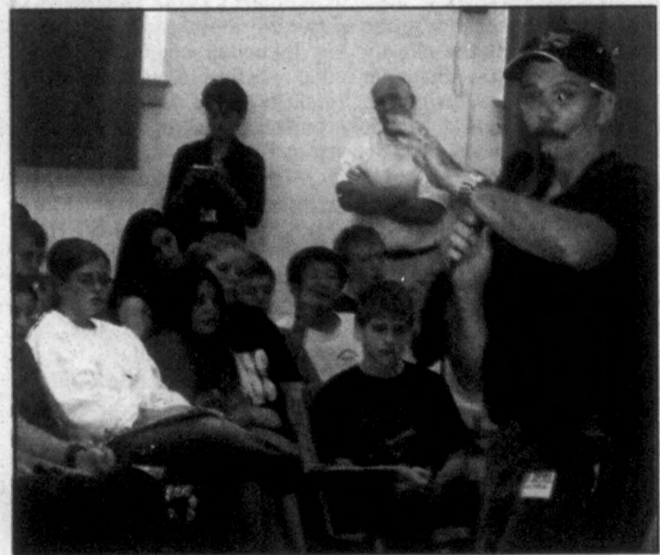

Bender, 44, of Cadiz, who travels around the nation speaking to young people at assemblies, as well as on HBO, MTV and other public media about the dangers of using what he terms "spit tobacco," says he doesn't like the term because it's misleading; dangerously misleading.

"I don't like the term smokeless tobacco because it sounds too much like harmless tobacco and it most certainly is not harmless," Bender told about 200 Murray Middle School students Friday afternoon during an assembly. "You don't really smokeless it do you? No. You put it in your mouth and spit it. That's why I always call it 'spit tobacco.'"

Bender told the students that he began using smokeless tobacco — or snuff — at the age of 12. By the time he was 26, he was diagnosed with facial cancer resulting in the loss of

This Land Is Your Land ... MSU invokes eminent domain to secure needed property for science complex construction

Murray State is growing well beyond 16th Street, which was once a western border to campus. But that means residential areas often rented to students are being swallowed up — some more willing than others.

The most disputed piece of property so far has been 1614 Olive St.

The debate was over the selling price, which ended up being $216,000 — almost $30,000 less than MSU's initial offer but more than a hundred thousand dollars less than owner Harry Reed wanted. Reed bought the four-plex in May 2001 for $110,000, according to Calloway County Property Valuation Administration records.

In addition to Reed's property, Murray State has spent nearly $1.3 million since December 1999 on 18 other properties needed for the science complex. Five other properties west of 16th Street have been bought for a combined $371,174 for other campus expansion.

Among all that acquisition, Reed's was the only property that was disputed to the point that MSU had to exercise eminent domain, a power governments have to acquire property necessary for a public project when a property owner is unwilling to sell. Even in these condemnation proceedings, the property owner is entitled to compensation based on the fair market value.

"I felt a little upset by it because I felt I was treated differently than everyone else," Reed said of what he called "lack of negotiations."

The apartment building Reed owned is situated on about 15,000 square feet at the intersection of Broach and Olive streets near campus.

"The construction of the new chemistry building will advance the public purpose of promoting higher education in Kentucky," MSU's petition to the court said. "The property is required for construction because the new chemistry building will sit, in part, on part of the real property in question."

Reed is listed as the owner of at least 17 other properties in Calloway County, including 1613 Hamilton Ave., which is in the middle of many other recently university-acquired properties. But he said in an interview Friday that he's had no conversations with MSU officials about that piece of property even though MSU has already bought 1611, 1617, 1621, 1623, 1625, and 1627 Hamilton, according to court records.

Murray State ended up with the whole piece of property at 1614 Olive St. and has since demolished it. But Reed's attorney, Steve Sanders, argued that only a small portion — 20 feet by 40 feet — of the property is really necessary for the science complex. Selling off just

Saturday rides given green light by MCTA

Murray-Calloway Transit Authority gave the green light to providing Saturday rides after several regular customers expressed the need.

If early participation becomes a trend, the expanded service is here to stay, according to MCTA Executive Director Bjarne Hansen.

In December, Hansen and the MCTA board will re-evaluate the Saturday service. They have talked about the additional hours since the beginning of the year, but started the 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday hours on Aug. 26.

"We've had a good turnout. It hasn't been overwhelming, but it was good. We're getting the word out," Hansen said. "At this point, if you asked me if we were going to continue this in December: Yes, we will, based on our ridership early on."

So far, Hansen said the most popular destinations have been errand trips to businesses and banks with a few medical-related rides thrown in.

Last year, MCTA provided 65,000 rides throughout Murray and Calloway County. Right now, ridership is averaging 5,000 per month.

The Saturday hours may be expanded if the test run proves successful when the board takes another look at it in December.

"We had seen and heard from several clients, 'We really need Saturday rides,'" Hansen said. "If there is a need, we're going to try to fill the need."

MCTA rates for weekday or Saturday service are $3 per one-way trip in the city and $6 per one-way trip in the county. Call 753-9725 for more information.

ment on Aug. 1, according to the letter. She was suspended for "exhibiting a lack of good conduct and unsatisfactory work performance," according to Wilcher.

State law allows for Hyatt to appeal the action to the personnel board within 60 days.

The action stems from an investigation last month when Gaskin reported she received a copy of a flood plain construction application from the EPPC's Division of Water that had her name signed to it approving the project.

The application, filed by Rudolph, a Murray businessman and Gov. Ernie Fletcher's executive cabinet secretary and 2007 running mate for lieutenant governor, was a request for stream bank stabilization along about a mile of the Clear Creek area near his home off Tucker Garland Road near Kirksey.

An application for any type of construction work in a flood hazard area must be filed to obtain state permission under federal flood plain insurance regulations adopted by Calloway County Fiscal Court earlier this year.

Gaskin, the county planner who also serves as floodplain coordinator under the program, said she was not aware the application had been filed until she got a letter from Art Clay, manager of the division's water resources branch, that the project had been approved. Gaskin said she contacted Clay and requested a copy of the application. When she received it, she was surprised to find that someone had signed her name on the paperwork.

Gaskin said she called Division of Water officials to tell them she had not signed her name approving the application. She later reported the incident to Calloway County Judge-Executive Larry Elkins, who turned the matter over to the Calloway County Sheriff's Department for investigation.

The document had been signed by Rudolph on July 21 and Gaskin's name had been placed on the document later, according to a copy of the application. Rudolph said previously that he had mailed the application to the Floodplain Management Section of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet — the address on the application — and was unaware that there was any problem until contacted by the Ledger & Times about a month later.

Mark York, spokesman for the EPPC, said cabinet officials turned the matter over to the Office of the Inspector General for investigation. The report, which York said had been completed and turned over to Wilcher on Friday, was not available for public inspection as of Friday afternoon.

Gaskin said that she was relieved and has signed a new application on Thursday filed by Rudolph at the request of EPPC officials.

"I'm just glad that they found who did it," she said. "(Rudolph) has filed another application. Somebody came by with it yesterday."

one-third of his tongue, half his jaw and 25 percent of the use of his right arm following four major surgeries needed to save his life.

Doctors told Bender there was no doubt about why he was suffering: the use of smokeless tobacco. Bender said approximate 30,000 to 35,000 people nationwide are diagnosed with oral cancer every year with approximately 90 percent of those resulting from the use of tobacco products.

"But we're seeing a lot more cases these days in younger people because of the increased use of spit tobacco," he said. "We also see a lot of throat cancer and other things in people which is basically the same type of cancer, but now we're actually seeing it in the lip, the tongue, the roof of the mouth and areas like that because of the increased use of spit tobacco among young people."

"A lot of that is because they think it's a safe alternative to cigarettes."

Bender said the association of smokeless tobacco with the nation's "favorite past-time" — baseball — is very unfortunate because it gives a poten-

"Whenever we think of smokeless tobacco, we think of baseball," he said. "That's not good at all."

Bender said he wants to give youngsters a warning that he did not have when he was their age.

"I'm here really to give these kids some information that they have probably never gotten before," he said, pointing out his own experience and ignorance about the danger when he was just a young teen.

Bender also pointed out that the use of any type of tobacco is a leading cause of heart disease; an even bigger killer than tobacco.

A survey conducted in 2002 revealed that 11 percent of middle school students in Kentucky use smokeless tobacco compared to a rate of only 4 percent nationwide, according to a news release concerning Bender's visit to western Kentucky by Megan Cody, a representative of Purchase Area Tobacco Coalition for Health (PATCH) program sponsored by the Purchase Area Health Department. Cody said PATCH sponsored Bender's visit they want youth to understand that smokeless tobacco is not a safe alternative to cigarettes.

He is also scheduled to speak in McCracken, Hickman and six other counties in the Purchase Area through Sept. 15.

Property ...

that portion would allow Reed's apartments and associated parking to remain.

Court proceedings later determined that the whole property would be necessary not only for the chemistry building construction but also for associated sidewalks, fire lanes, driveways and storm water drains.

Currently, dirt is being moved on the chemistry portion of the three-part building. The first phase — the biology building — is being used. The first two phases cost $28 million and will be joined by a clock tower, which will be constructed using a private donation. The state's most recent budget approved issuing bonds for the final phase — the $15 million physics portion — after much debate.

From MSU's Public Safety on the corner of Olive and 16th streets, MSU has demolished all the property west, including 1614 and 1618 Olive, leaving 1620 Olive bordering the south side construction site.

"One structure has been built. Its companion building, the chemistry building, has been kept 'waiting in the wings' because of one tract of land, 1614 Olive Street," university attorney John Rall wrote in a court document for a recent hearing. "MSU has filed this action as a last resort, as the property is needed to construct a building for public purpose of training future doctors, scientists, researchers and teachers, and it respectfully requested that this court so find."

Calloway Circuit Judge Dennis Foust decided following a May hearing that MSU could take possession of the property upon paying $216,000. Reed never appealed the decision.

But getting to that point was a process of negotiations and legal filings.

"Clearly, every property owner in Calloway County could make the argument that MSU could have chosen a different site for construction of the chemistry building," Rall wrote on behalf of MSU. "But any choice would, by necessity, involve someone else's land."

The Negotiations

Before negotiations got underway, Paducah-based Sirk Appraisal Co. said in April 2004 that the property was worth $260,000. But Sanders, Reed's attorney, later argued that the Sirk appraisal failed to include one 5,701-square foot apartment.

MSU Vice President for Finance Tom Denton informed Reed in a letter on May 4, 2005, that the 2004-06 state budget included funding for the second phase of the science complex. "As we have previously discussed, your property at 1614 Olive lies within the boundaries of this project," Denton wrote.

Because the property is worth more than $100,000, state procedure required a second appraisal before Denton could make an offer on behalf of the university. The second assessment valued the property at $200,000, according to a letter from Paducah-based Joe Sloan Appraisal Service in July 2005.

The university's first offer was $245,000, according to a July 25, 2005, letter from Denton to Reed. Reed never responded to that letter or other subsequent telephone calls, but Denton sent another letter a month later with a final offer of $253,000 that was good until Sept. 7, 2005.

Reed responded Sept. 1, saying the property was leased through July 25, 2006, and that he hadn't responded earlier because he wasn't interested in selling.

"I studied those appraisals and take issue with several of the properties used as comparables and some of the listed factors in the market studies. My property in several ways is demonstrably superior to the two adjacent properties already acquired by Murray State on Olive Street," Reed wrote to Denton in a Oct. 24, 2005, letter. "At this time if I do not need to employ a legal defense of my property, I will be willing to accept a price of $325,000."

The next month Denton extended the $253,000 offer to Dec. 12, 2005.

"Due to the large amount of money and work I have invested in the property in recent years, I find the price offer totally unacceptable," Reed wrote to Denton on Dec. 2, 2005.

In Court

Murray State initiated the courtroom proceeding by filing a petition, citing the state's Eminent Domain Act, in December 2005. But Reed's attorney Steve Sanders argues in follow-up court documents that Murray State didn't do enough before deciding to seek condemnation for the property.

"The measure of reasonable efforts is whether or not Murray State University has obtained the totality of the accurate information necessary to determine the value of the property under the law, to include but not limited to, its past, present and future highest and best use if the property is a planned development project, which is the subject property," Sanders wrote on Feb. 23, 2006.

The building's occupants at that time were students from Thailand who could walk to

NTSB: Information given families about city error was wrong

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A National Transportation Safety Board spokesman said families were incorrectly told that one of the pilots of Comair Flight 5191 called out the wrong flight number and city before the commuter jet crashed in Lexington last week.

Two people who had family members die in the crash told the Lexington Herald-Leader in a story published Friday that families were told during NTSB briefings that one of the pilots gave the wrong flight number and said "Toledo" in talking to the control tower before attempting to take off.

"I do not know where Toledo came from," NTSB spokesman Terry Williams said in an update on the newspaper's Web site later Friday. "It was a mistake" made by the NTSB. "But I do apologize for the error."

He said families were told they were being given preliminary information and that he knew of no other incorrect information passed along to relatives.

Williams told the newspaper Friday that a closer examination of an air traffic control tower tape showed that pilots did not give the wrong flight number or city.

Williams did not return a telephone message left Friday night.

The jet, which crashed Aug. 27 as it tried to take off from the wrong runway at Lexington's Blue Grass Airport, was bound for Atlanta. The pilots had initially boarded the wrong plane.

The crash killed 49 of the 50 people aboard.

Capt. Jeffrey Clay, who guided the plane onto the runway, died in the crash. The lone survivor, first officer James Polehinke, who was at the controls when the flight took off, remained in serious condition Friday night at the University of Kentucky Medical Center.

New Ky. 80 roadwork to force road closure

As part of the ongoing construction of new Ky. 80 between Mayfield and Murray a contractor for the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet's Department of Highways plans to close Ky. 1836 just north of Ky. 121 near the Coldwater community in Calloway County starting next week.

The closure on Ky. 1836 between Ky. 121 at mile point 3.13 and new Ky. 80 at approximate mile point 3.30 is scheduled to begin Wednesday at approximately 7:30 a.m.

Ky. 1836 is expected to be closed for approximately two months. A marked detour will be provided. Approximately 300 vehicles a day use this section of Ky. 1836.

This closure is to allow the contractor to start improvements along Ky. 1836 so it can be converted into a connector between Ky. 121 and new Ky. 80. The work will eventually allow for a section of Ky. 80 from Mayfield to Coldwater to become operational by about Sept. 1, 2007.

Motorists are asked to take notice of this closure and allow extra travel time along the detour.

campus from the location. Sanders also raised concerns about the appraisals. He said the court-appointed valuation, which said the value was $216,000, was based only on what Reed paid for the property and income. He also said the complex is insured for a $439,800 replacement.

In addition to appraisals, Sanders said what MSU paid for nearby properties also should help determine the value of 1614 Olive St. For example, MSU bought 1602 and 1604 Olive for $316,900 in August 2002 and 306 Broach for $85,400 in September 2005, according to court records.

Judge Foust considered Murray State's right to condemn the property during a May 31, 2006, hearing. He issued his written comments a couple weeks later, saying the university needs the property for constructing the second phase of the science complex because it furthers MSU's mandated purpose of providing instruction. In short, Foust said MSU had the right — under the Eminent Domain Act — to condemn all of 1614 Olive St.

Foust also cited the university's steps to acquire the property, such as including it in its "campus master plan," which was approved February 2000, and having that plan approved by the state's Finance and Administration Cabinet in April 2000.

The MSU Board of Regents

also authorized the condemnation of property necessary for the new science complex at its meeting on May 30, 2001. More specifically, the regents approved condemnation of properties on Broach and Olive streets at its May 20, 2005, meeting as part of the planning stage for the chemistry building.

Revisiting our favorite watering hole in Kentucky

Our wedding anniversary in late August each year comes just when the buckeyes are ripe and falling at our favorite vacation spot, historic Beaumont Inn in Harrodsburg, Ky. One buckeye tree is at the front left corner of the inn, and the other is in the rear on the right. We gathered four buckeyes for luck as we celebrated our 45th anniversary.

Southern Seen
By Larry McGehee
Syndicated Columnist

From the front right corner of the inn, we could see a recessed area that once was a pond and a residual piece of the long stone fence that once backed the inn property. Turning half circle, we could see a sloped wooded area leading to a larger lower area where a lake once lay. Probably the pond and lake were formed from springs that made this the site of the Greenville Springs Spa, owned by a doctor, from 1806 to 1827. After that, it was the Christian Baptist School (1830-1833), then home (1834-41) for John Harlan, U. S. Supreme Court justice, then a women's institute (1845-1855) and a women's college (from 1856 to 1917, mostly under the Daughters College name). Very likely, the retreating Confederate troops of Generals Braxton Bragg and Kirby Smith, uniting in October 1862 after the Battle of Perryville 20 miles away, drank from the property's springs.

Beaumont has operated as an inn since 1918 when Glave and Annie Bell Goddard converted it. Then came their daughter, Pauline, married to Thomas Curry Dedman, Sr., and after them, Thomas Curry Dedman, Jr., married to Mary Elizabeth Ransdell, and after them their son, Charles Minor (Chuck) Dedman, and his wife, the former Helen Williams, joined recently by their son, Dixon Dedman (with occasional assistance from Dixon's sister, Becky, who works in hospitality and tour services for the respected Woodford Reserve distillery), making five generations of the same family operating Beaumont for 88 years.

Dixon and Becky were both dynamic students in my senior seminar at Wofford College, and they always greet us royally when we visit, usually twice a year.

If Beaumont was a frontier watering hole 175 years ago, it has become one again, thanks to a local Harrodsburg referendum allowing the Inn to provide liquor by the drink to complement its famous cuisine. That in turn inspired the Dedmans, probably prompted by the energetic prodigal son, Dixon, to turn the basement work area into the thriving Old Owl Tavern, a beautiful restaurant and bar rich in brickwork and woodwork, with a distinctive menu, especially popular in the Bluegrass area on Friday and Saturday nights.

We forewent the more formal upstairs dining room with its tempting traditions — two-year-old baked country ham, corn pudding, yellow-leg fried chicken, Robert E. Lee cake, and other renowned dishes — and ate on the patio of the Old Owl Tavern. One of the Dedman ancestors — probably Dixon's great-grandfather — had once operated the Old Owl distillery, and the tavern's name celebrates that family history. There is even an original Old Owl whisky bottle on display (although it is now filled with tea).

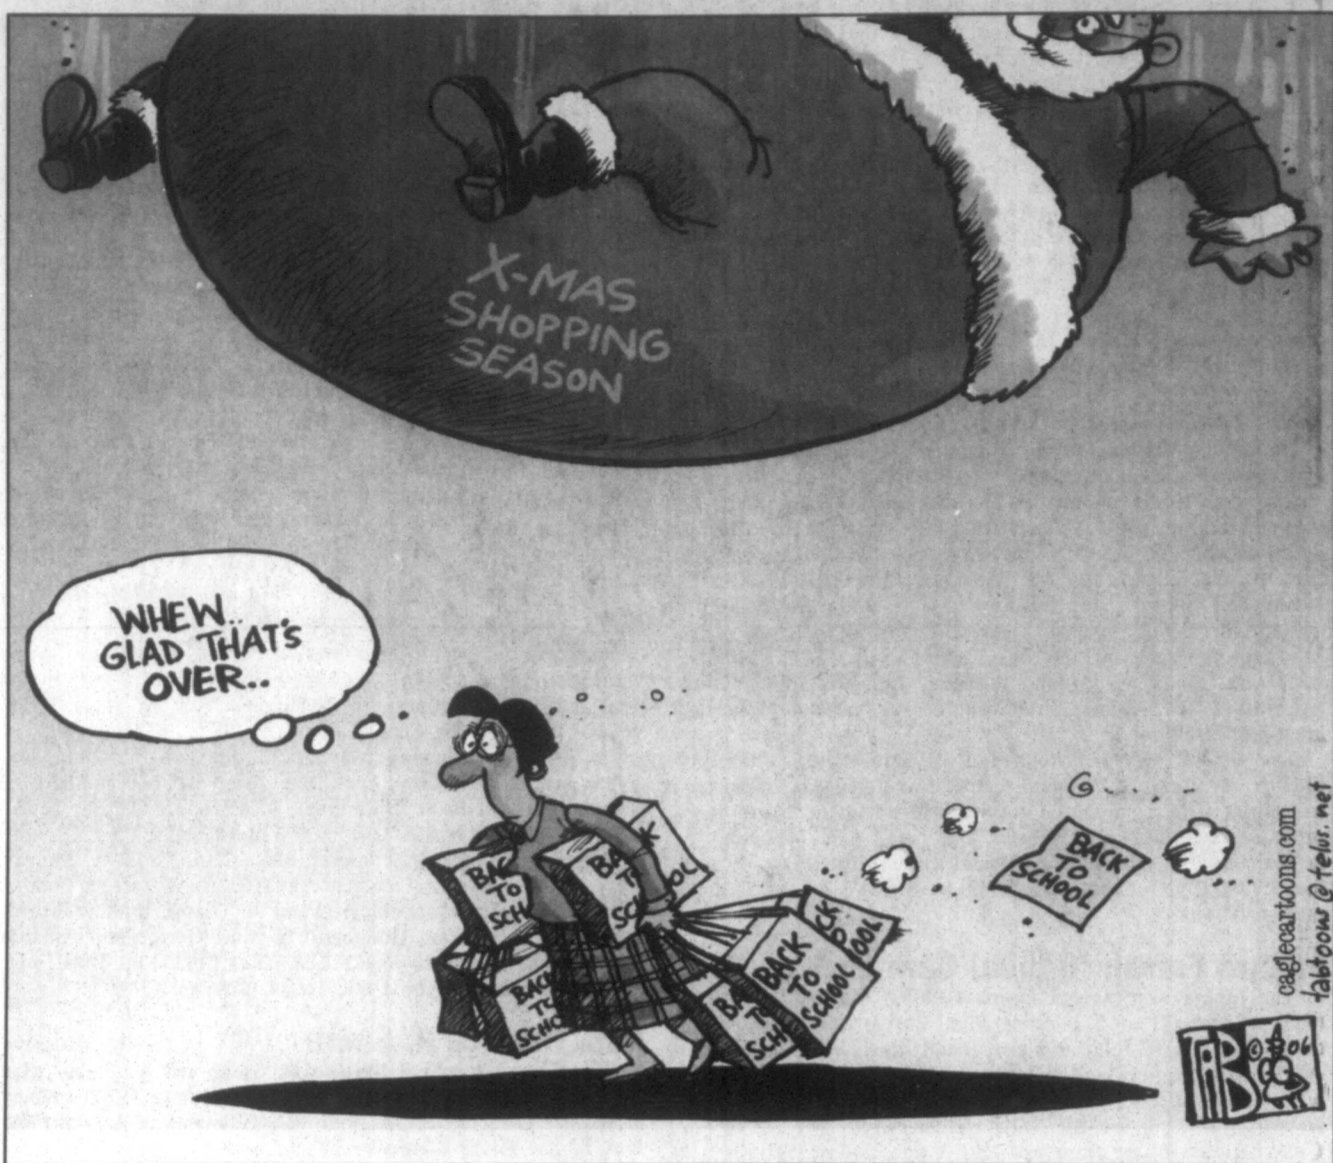

The food and conversation were all a pair of less-than-newly-weds could have wanted — crispy salad with Roquefort dressing, the Beaumont version of Kentucky Hot Brown sandwiches, a rib-eye steak two inches thick and perfectly seasoned, heaps of golden fried onions, and personal attention for us and our two guests from both Dixon and Becky and our bubbly young waitress, Cecilia.

Free breakfast (for inn guests only) was equally as inspiring and savory the next two mornings. In addition to expected high-quality eggs, country sausage and country bacon, and homemade biscuits, breakfast offers golden scrumptious cornmeal griddle cakes and syrup that are crispy, mouth-melting, and to-die-for. Loretta, there a quarter-century, kept bringing me more of them.

Beaumont was our local home base for three days of Kentucky enjoyment that took us to the Kentucky arts center near Berea, to a dinner-on-the-grounds hoedown outside New-castle at a winery (Smith Berry Vineyard) owned by writer Wendell Berry's daughter, lunch (with hot water cornbread) at Shelbyville's noted Science Hill, some horse farms, Shaker Village, the Ohio and Kentucky Rivers junction, and—the only sad note in our joyous tours—past Bluegrass Field in Lexington a couple of hours after the tragic plane crash that claimed 49 lives.

We are already making plans for return trips. We have been going to Beaumont for years—my wife since the 1940s and I since 1954—and intend to keep going back until escalating oil prices stop us from traveling altogether.

Beaumont Inn is as great a Kentucky treasure as the Derby or basketball.

Women in the South show signs of turning away from the GOP this fall

By SHANNON McCAFFREY
Associated Press Writer

MACON, Ga. (AP) — President Bush's once-solid relationship with Southern women is on the rocks.

"I think history will show him to be the worst president since Ulysses S. Grant," said Barbara Knight, a self-described Republican since birth and the mother of three. "He's been an embarrassment."

In the heart of Dixie, comparisons to Grant, a symbol of the Union, are the worst sort of insult, especially from a Macon woman who voted for Bush in 2000 but turned away in 2004.

In recent years, Southern women have been some of Bush's biggest fans, defying the traditional gender gap in which women have preferred Democrats to Republicans. Bush secured a second term due in large part to support from 54 percent of Southern female voters while women nationally favored Democrat John Kerry, 51-48 percent.

"In 2004, you saw an utter collapse of the gender gap in the South," said Karen Kaufmann, a professor of government at the University of Maryland who has studied women's voting patterns. White Southern women liked Bush because "he spoke their religion and he spoke their values."

Now, anger over the Iraq war and frustration with the country's direction have taken a toll on the president's popularity and stirred dissatisfaction with the Republican-held Congress.

Republicans on the ballot this November have reason to worry. A recent Associated Press-Ipsos poll found that three out of five Southern women surveyed said they planned to vote for a Democrat in the midterm elections. With control of the Senate and House in the balance, such a seismic shift could have dire consequences for the GOP.

Democrats need to gain 15 seats in the House and six in the Senate to seize control.

In a sign of how crucial races in the South will be to the GOP national strategy, Bush traveled to Georgia Thursday to help former Rep. Max Burns raise money in his bid to unseat Democratic Rep. John Barrow. The president also gave a speech in Atlanta.

Knight lives in another congressional district considered competitive. Republicans hope to oust Democratic Rep. Jim Marshall, whose district was redrawn by the GOP-controlled Georgia Legislature to make it more conservative.

Voters like Knight could prove to be spoilers. The 66-year-old real estate agent doesn't particularly like Marshall, a hawkish Democrat and former Army Ranger, but she said she'll vote for him because she likes his conservative Republican opponent, former Rep. Mac Collins, even less.

"I'm going to go for the moderate, and these days that tends to be Democrats," Knight said.

Sandy Rubin, a high school teacher in Macon, voted for Bush and said she's also likely to vote for Marshall. Rubin said the GOP's focus on issues that appeal to social conservatives, such as gay marriage and abortion, have turned her off.

"I care about job security and education. The things I hear the Republicans emphasizing in their campaigns are not things that affect me or my family," said the 39-year-old mother of two.

The movement of some Southern women away from the Republican Party tracks with national poll results showing that women have become more disillusioned with the war and were more likely than men to list the conflict as the important issue facing the country. Nationally, the AP-Ipsos poll found that only 28 percent of women approve of Bush's handling of the war. Bush did better in the South, but only slightly — just 32 percent of women in the region said they approve of his handling of the war.

"I never did understand why we went into Iraq and didn't instead clean up the mess in Afghanistan first," Knight said.

Teresa Cranford, 39, also of Macon, said her support for Bush was lukewarm in 2004, but she ultimately voted for him so he could finish the job in Iraq. As the death toll has risen, so has her discomfort.

"I'm a mother and that makes me think differently about it," Cranford said.

Lynn Hamilton, 44, said she still supports Bush even though her backing for the ongoing war has waned.

"As a mother you worry, 'Am I going to lose my baby boy?'" said the Gray, Ga., resident. "A mother's view, about war is often going to be a lot different than dad's is."

Neither Cranford nor Hamilton has decided how they plan to vote in the midterm elections, although neither ruled out voting for a Democrat.

"I'm not a straight party-line Republican anymore," Cranford said.

Still, some Southern women remain stalwart supporters of the president and the Republican Party. At a watermelon festival in Chickamauga, in the mountains of northwest Georgia, substitute teacher Clydeen Tomanio said she remains committed to the party she's called home for 43 years.

"There are some people, and I'm one of them, that believe George Bush was placed where he is by the Lord," Tomanio said. "I don't care how he governs, I will support him. I'm a Republican through and through."

Shuttle may launch today

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA scrubbed Friday's launch of the space shuttle Atlantis again, this time because of a problem that has bedeviled the space agency before: a faulty fuel tank sensor.

The launch was rescheduled for 11:15 a.m. EDT today, when NASA will try a fifth time to get Atlantis off the ground and send it to the international space station to resume construction on the orbiting outpost, which has been on hold since the Columbia tragedy 3 1/2 years ago.

Saturday is the last time NASA has to launch Atlantis before it has to go to the back of the line, behind a Russian Soyuz capsule that is slated for liftoff Sept. 18 on a flight to the space station. Both Atlantis and the Soyuz cannot be at the space station at the same time.

If Atlantis cannot lift off on Saturday, it will have to wait at least until late September — and even then, NASA will have to waive a post-Columbia rule that says launches must be conducted in daylight so that the spaceship can be photographed for signs of damage.

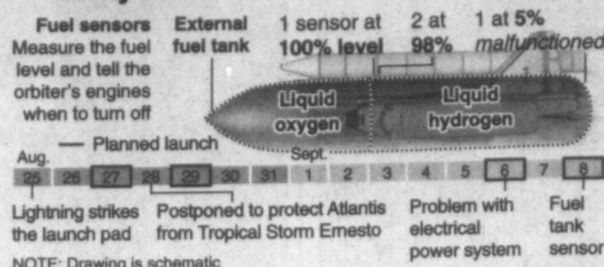

Previous launch attempts over the past 12 days were dashed by a lightning bolt that struck the launch pad, Tropical Storm Ernesto and a fuel cell coolant pump that gave an erratic reading.

This time, a sensor in the hydrogen fuel tank gave an abnormal reading during a test as the shuttle was being fueled early Friday.

Atlantis had been fueled with more than 500,000 gallons of supercold liquid hydrogen and oxygen, the six astronauts had donned their orange flightsuits and strapped themselves in, and the hatch to the shuttle had

Shuttle delays

Shuttle Atlantis was delayed again Friday due to a malfunctioning fuel sensor. NASA will attempt another launch Saturday at 11 a.m. EDT.

been closed, when NASA decided to postpone the launch with just 45 minutes to go until liftoff.

"We had a lot of discussion. ... We follow the rules," said launch director Mike Leibach. "Ought to feel good that we did that."

Atlantis commander Brent Jett responded: "We understand. We concur 100 percent."

The fuel gauges are designed to prevent the main engines from running too long or not long enough during the climb to space. An engine shutdown at the wrong time could prove catastrophic, forcing the astronauts to attempt a risky emergency landing overseas, or leading to a ruptured engine.

NASA managers decided to follow rules established last June that required standing down for 24 hours so engineers can review data when one of the four hydrogen tank sensors fails, said Wayne Hale, shuttle program manager.

"We feel very good that we really need only three of those engine sensors to work," Hale said. "If everything is performing as expected and we just have one sensor that continues to be a bad actor, we'll launch tomorrow."

Earlier this year, the launch of Discovery was delayed by almost two months so four hydrogen fuel tank sensors could be replaced after one was found to be faulty. A similar problem briefly delayed last summer's launch of Discovery on the first shuttle flight since the Columbia disaster in 2003.

Despite four delays, Atlantis is far from the record for NASA's most snakebit shuttle. In 1986 and 1995, NASA scrubbed the launch of Columbia six times after fueling the shuttle.

A launch attempt on Wednesday was called off because of faulty wiring involving a 30-year-old motor in one of the shuttle's three electricity-generating fuel cells. But on Thursday, NASA decided to press ahead with a launch without replacing the equipment.

NASA engineers convinced themselves that the baffling electrical problem would not be a safety risk — something they did over the objections of the agency's safety managers.

Aboard Atlantis is one of the heaviest payloads ever launched into space — a 17 1/2 ton truss section that will be added to the half-built space station. It includes two solar arrays that will produce electricity for the orbiting outpost.

Microsoft releases Release Candidate 1 (RC1) of Windows Vista

Our column this week comes to us via Computerworld, Preston Gralla and Scot Finnie. Microsoft [Sept. 1] released Release Candidate 1 (RC1) of Windows Vista, a significant milestone on the road to the launch of the new operating system, which has been in the works for five years.

Release Candidate versions of software are the final test version before release.

The RC1 version of Vista offers a long list of operational and performance improvements over the Beta 2 version, including faster performance, improved driver support, an easier-to-use networking interface and a variety of changes to the "fit and finish" of the operating system, said testers.

In addition, the User Account Control (UAC) security feature, which has been frequently maligned by beta testers because of its intrusiveness (see "Visual Tour: 20 Things You Won't Like About Windows Vista"), has been reined in so that it does not intrude as much on the user experience.

Microsoft has said that it could ship Windows Vista to consumers as early as January 2007. Industry observers said that Microsoft expects to wrap up the final version of Windows Vista by Oct. 25. That's consistent with Microsoft's earlier projection to release Vista to enterprise customers this November, which was reaffirmed earlier this week by Greg Sullivan, Microsoft's group product manager for Windows.

The release of a stable RC1 is an important step toward that timetable, because it will get the new operating system into the hands of millions of new users, helping Microsoft track down bugs, and ensure that Windows Vista works with as wide a range of hardware as possible.

Toward that end, Microsoft today is rolling out a sweeping plan to get RC1 into the hands of testers. RC1 will be distributed to 20,000 users already in the technical beta program, 50,000 MSDN and TechNet subscribers, and 1.5 million people who were in the Beta 2 Customer Preview Program (CPP), or public beta test. Microsoft intends to significantly widen the distribution by opening the door to new CPP testers. Information about the public beta test will be made available at a later time.

In addition, the software company has made arrangements to distribute RC1 DVDs as "cover mounts" on magazines, so that magazine readers can install the latest version as well. According to Sullivan, RC1 will be the most widely distributed pre-release version of Vista to date.

RC1 will work until May 31, 2007 but afterwards it will time out and no longer function. Microsoft will continue to issue updates and patches to RC1 until it is released to manufacturing, at which time the operating system is considered finished, and the manufacturing and distribution process will begin.

Next week we will be discussing some Windows tips.

Cooler temps force change among anglers

How fast the season has changed made a huge difference in the numbers of anglers and pleasure boaters on the lakes this past weekend!

With the arrival of cooler temperatures, the activity dropped to almost zero. We couldn't see any other boats on the way to the Paris Landing bridge for long periods of time.

I had a couple of very good bass anglers with me. They were Mike Pleticha and Lee Kuusisto. They had heard about the bass population on our lake and wanted to see for themselves just how much fun it was to chase the big smallmouth bass.

We traveled from the north to the south end, checking each bay of any size to see if the bass were going to be active. They were slow in getting started.

I explained to Mike and Lee that the moon was almost full and the bass were probably active during the night. As we traveled from area to area, it became more evident that that was the case.

As our day progressed, so did the bass activity. We were finally locating the active, much larger bass. We threw a variety of lures to see which ones would produce the best bass. And we had a million laughs!

These men are great to fish with! We began to find the action we needed among all the laughs.

It is amazing how much the anglers' disposition will change as the bass as the stripers struck them with vigor!

Doris Olt poses with a sunfish she caught while on a recent outing with Ledger & Times columnist Jerry Maupin.

We soon realized that we had stumbled onto a school of rockfish stripers that were mixed in with the white striped bass. They are so ferocious when they strike that you cannot overpower one off them with a regular rod and reel.

What we have to do is set the hook when the strike occurs, then reel only when the steeper allows some slack in the line. You must be patient and take a lot of time to reel. These fish are so powerful that you can break a rod or your line if you don't take it slowly.

There is a size limit on these fish. After you net the rascal, you have to subdue it with force and then measure it's length. If it is short of the required length, release it. It will grow long enough by the next week!

There was no doubt that Julie was the champ! She hooked and landed fish after fish. Her father, Ron, was using open-face spinning. He was struggling with these 16 to 18 inch, 2 1/2-pound cases of TNT!

They don't quit fighting, so hang on and then maybe you can net them! Julie continued to catch the large white stripers. She wore a smile that would light up a darkened room as she hooked fish after fish!

Finally, Al and Ron began to get their fish to the net so we could reach them. It was a super three hours of fun as the stripers moved around with us on the trolling motor.

A great trip doesn't always take a long time. We had a load of 31 fat and sassy stripers to brag about. It started this family gathering off with a bang!

Many thanks to Ron, Al and Julie. It was fun!

begin to bite a little better. On one occasion, I spotted a snake lying on the trip end of a branch that was barely above water.

I called attention to it, and all of us cast in that direction to see if we could make it move. Lee and I both came close to it, but it would not budge. Before we could make another cast, Mike made a super-accurate cast and brought his lure within a foot of the copperhead snake.

Instantly, the snake whirled around and grabbed the lure by the tail end and hung on. Mike reeled the lure and the snake back to the net, and Lee announced that he was leaving, ASAP!

We had a good laugh about Lee going to abandon ship, so I caught the copperhead in the net, took it off the lure and then released it. Oh yes, I almost forgot to mention that the snake was not hooked — it was hanging on to the soft lure by its leg!

I can't remember all that Lee had to say about Mike and I, but it had something to do with us being at the top of his list!

We got into some three's and five's as the day progressed, and that really helped us out. It was a very good day with two great guys. I hope to see them again later in the fall.

The rains came and went intermittently for a couple of days, but the high winds kept us off the water a few days.

I met with long-time friends Ron and Julie Ryman and Al Gutjshir at Kenlake Marina. We gathered there for our annual striped bass roundup! This family is a super-nice group of honest, hard-working folks that love to come to Kentucky Lake as a fam-

Is it bait and feed or bait and switch?

At the last meeting of the Kentucky Wildlife Commission, the commissioners approved a ban on supplemental feeding of wildlife from March 1 through July 31, beginning in 2007.

Ostensibly, the ban is to accomplish three things: Stop the practice of hunting spring turkey around deer feeders; aid law enforcement in the apprehension and conviction of persons hunting spring turkey over bait; and to prevent the spread of disease and incidence of poisoning from moldy grain.

On the surface, the ban appears reasonable enough. The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, along with most all wildlife agencies, take a dim view on the practice of baiting in the first place. Most hunters do not actively bait hunting areas for deer and turkey anyway.

Studies in Wisconsin — probably one of the leading states for baiting during deer season — indicate that hunter success is actually lower for persons hunting with a firearm over a pile of corn. The opposite is true for bow hunters who enjoy significantly greater success when hunting over bait. Subsequently, a greater percentage of bow hunters hunt over bait than do gun hunters.

But baiting in Wisconsin is a major league compared to Kentucky. While there are no restrictions on the placement of corn or other feed or attractant on private land in the Commonwealth for the purpose of attracting deer, most hunters will use little more than a 50-pound bag of shelled corn per season. Wisconsin hunters have to be limited to one 5-gallon bucket of corn per day. That's a lot of feed!

At the heart of the debate is the definition of baiting as opposed to supplemental feeding. Many states such as Tennessee and Georgia look upon the practice of baiting the same way they look upon the character of General Sherman. These same states, however, are quick to differentiate between feeding and baiting.

Feeding, it seems, is the act of providing food for no other purpose than to do a favor for whatever specie of wildlife that happens to avail itself of the free groceries. Baiting, on the other hand, is feeding used for the purpose of attracting wildlife to a spot where they can be shot — kind of like using the dark side of the feeding force.

In Kentucky, no one has given a hoot in a holler about using corn or other grain as bait for deer. Everyone already has a strategically placed salt block or mineral lick. Even I succumb to those silly bags labeled "deer corn" that seem

Local DU chapter to hold waterfowl summit

The Murray/Calloway County Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will host a waterfowl summit on Thursday, Sept. 7 at 7 p.m. in the Murray Room of the Regional Special Events Center.

Held in conjunction with the dedication of Duck Island, a cooperative project between DU and the KDFWR, the Waterfowl Summit will include presentations from Chris Cole, a regional DU biologist from Jackson, Miss., Tim Willis, a DU private lands biologist from Jackson, Tenn., Charlie Martin, chairman of the Kentucky Wildlife Commission, and Lance Kaufman and Barry Welty with the Kentucky Conservation Committee.

Topics to be discussed include the state of waterfowl hunting in west Kentucky, ongoing and proposed DU projects in the area and private land initiatives.

The event is open to the public, especially to those with an interest in waterfowl conservation and management. There is no admission fee.

The Murray Room is located at the lower level entrance of the RSEC off the Highway 121 bypass on the campus of Murray State University. For information, contact Kenny Darnell at 293-7240.

to crop up this time of year. Usually, the squirrels make a pig's breakfast out of the bag before I can make the transfer from the carport to the woods.

Make no mistake — the KDFWR would rather see "deer corn" go the way of steam locomotive. But since they are not quite to that point just yet, the Department is caught in a "Catch 22" of their own making. No one wants to see corn or any other grain used as bait for wild turkeys, but now we have a sizeable fall turkey season that happens to coincide with the peak usage of "deer corn" among deer hunters. What's to keep a turkey from falling prey to a fall-season hunter with a pile of "deer corn" nearby?

That dilemma is a non-issue during the spring turkey season. Deer feeders had to be emptied a set number of days before the opening of turkey season or the whole farm was considered "baited" and thus off limits to turkey hunters. Anyone hunting turkey where deer feeders were present had to be careful to stay out of the feeder's "zone of influence," nebulous terminology at best.

But the new regulation goes beyond what appears reasonable for the spring turkey season since the season ends during the second week of May. If the intent is to prevent inadvertent hunting around deer feeders during turkey season or to enhance the prosecution of illegal turkey hunters, then why extend the ban for nearly three months after turkey season closes?

In fact, the commission actually wanted the ban to run through August, but July 31 was decided by compromise. And the regulation does nothing to regulate the use of bait or supplemental feeding during the fall turkey season.

Of course, there is always the specter of disease or aflatoxin poisoning from the use of moldy grain. Moldy grain has been used for livestock for centuries without harm. Somehow the idea that the grain poured out of a bag onto the ground has the potential to do more harm than the corn that has legally fallen to the ground from a food plot just doesn't smack of sound science.

So a person has to wonder what in the world the Wildlife Commission was thinking to proffer a partial ban on supplemental feeding that appears arbitrary at best. It is especially perplexing considering the beating the Department just took over the expansion of the crossbow season. Wouldn't a person think that there would be someone on board that train with the good sense to say: "Boys, ya'll may have the right idea — but let's not go there just yet?"

This is a classic case of taking something that was not an issue and turning it into a lightning rod. Kentucky's turkeys were well served by the ban on feeding during the spring season. Deer hunters were not pouring enough corn on the ground during the summer and fall to be a problem to anyone.

Sure, there were people who dumped a wagon-load of corn behind the barn to help them poach more turkeys, but that practice was already illegal. Making other practices illegal to law-abiding hunters will do nothing to deter those who already hunt illegally.

At the end of the day, the issue will do nothing more than divide and aggravate an already disenfranchised population of hunters. With the crossbow issue settled for the time being, hunters across the state were looking forward to a time of progress and prosperity. They were excited about the new initiatives for quail restoration and for improvement to the waterfowl situation. Instead, the hunters of the Commonwealth got another dose of "here, take that!"

Yes, we know that the experts make those decisions and for the most part we are darn happy to have expert people steering the ship. But doggoneit, too many of us still remember having to choke down a dose of cod liver oil — "for our own good" as we were told. We didn't like the taste of it then, either.

A time to hunt crow, and maybe eat it, too

HOLDERNESS, N.H. (AP) — As the distressed cries of crows blare from a tape player, a group of hunters in training hunkers in the brush, waiting for the varmint to swoop.

Before them, a perched, plastic owl gazes over about a dozen crow decoys littering the ground, make-believe carnage intended to play on crows' instinct to defend fellows in distress.

It's easy to trash-talk crows — noise making, garbage pecking, egg thieving, roadkill eating, disease carrying, crop ruining nuisances that they are.

But these wily birds are so smart and agile that they make first-class game birds.

"They're very clever, they're always on the lookout," said Pete Lester, a crow hunter of some 30 years who arranged this huddle in the trees on a recent Saturday as part of a state Fish and Game Department workshop.

Lester sometimes clinches the deal in hunts by throwing a dead "tosser" crow in front of his wary prey.

"They are really going to put the moves on you once the shooting starts," he said.

Crows have been known to work in pairs to raid other birds' nests.

As one crow approaches from the front, distracting the adult guarding the nest, the other crow sneaks up from behind to nab an egg or chick.

They also are a terror to farmers.

"I basically hate them," said Phil Ferdinando, a farmer in Derry who loses corn, tomatoes and pumpkins to the pecking pests every year. "But you have to admire them for their intelligence."

Even without Bush, Cards expected to roll

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Well, here's at least one game on Louisville's schedule where it won't miss star running back Michael Bush.

While the No. 13 Cardinals (1-0) saw their best shot at a special season take a crushing blow when they lost Bush for the year, they could start all their reserves against Temple and probably still come away with an easy win.

Without Bush, whose season ended when he broke his right leg against Kentucky in the opener, the Cardinals will use Kolby Smith and George Stripling as the featured backs against the Owls (0-1). Neither one is quite like Bush — few are — but they've both proved capable in limited playing time. Both ran for more than 500 yards last season, and both played well against Kentucky, combining for 156 yards and two touchdowns.

"It just might be a little different style of running," Louisville coach Bobby Petrino said. "We're going to continue to use the same plays, it's just who you're calling the play for, I guess."

It had been pretty easy calling the running plays with Bush in the backfield. Bush led the nation in scoring last year, averaging 14.4 points per game while scoring a school-record 23 touchdowns. He passed up turning pro to return for his senior season and picked up where he left off, rushing for 124 yards and three touchdowns in the first half against Kentucky.

Then it all went horribly wrong. Bush took a pitch from quarterback Brian Brohm on Louisville's second play of the second half, then had his leg pinned awkwardly under him while he was tackled. Bush's recovery is expected to take at least six months, and he's hopeful to be healthy enough for the NFL draft next spring.

"He's going to be fine," Petrino said. "He certainly disappointed and his family is hurting over it, but he's going to come back and be fine."

But how will the Cardinals handle the loss of their top player? Petrino said he'll give the bulk of the carries to whichever running back is doing the best in the game. Smith might be the one after three seasons of working hard in his reserve role (sometimes even at fullback) without complaint, while Bush's career took off faster than a 90-yard touchdown run.

Smith rushed for 523 yards last season and had an impressive 9.4 average on 37 carries in 2004. His durability has been a question mark, but the Cardinals will desperately need him to stay healthy if they want a shot at the Big East title. Petrino said he has confidence in both his backs.

"They're both very excited and motivated to get the ball more," he said. "They did a real nice job in the game the other night."

Junior quarterback Brian Brohm is the Cardinals' main offensive weapon now that running back Michael Bush is done for the year after suffering a torn ACL in last Sunday's rout of archrival Kentucky.

HERNANDEZ TOSSES TWO-HITTER; JACKSON RACKS UP FOUR RBIS

PHOENIX (AP) — Livan Hernandez allowed two hits in seven innings, Conor Jackson tied a career high with four RBIs and rookie Carlos Quentin had a career-high four hits as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat the St. Louis Cardinals 13-1 Friday night.

Hernandez (11-12), who gave up one run, won for only the second time in six starts since joining the Diamondbacks Aug. 7.

Eric Byrnes and Chad Tracy each homered for Arizona, which won for only the second time in 10 games. Arizona left fielder Luis Gonzalez had three hits, including his 48th double, breaking the club record he set in 2000.

St. Louis starter Anthony Reyes (5-7) gave up seven runs and seven hits in 2 1-3 innings, his shortest outing of the season.

The Diamondbacks had been outscored 132-65 in the first inning this year. But they jumped out to a 3-0 lead in this game. Orlando Hudson doubled and scored on Gonzalez' single, and then Byrnes hit a two-run homer on the first pitch he saw.

St. Louis got one run back on Juan Encarnacion's solo home run in the second. But Arizona

Calloway County running back Tyrell Willis (3) runs upfield for a 8-yard gain past Marshall County defender Brett Smothers (35) in the first half Friday night at Carroll-Traylor Stadium. Willis finished with 29 yards on six carries as the Lakers fell 47-14.

Orange peel away Lakers

By MICHAEL DANN
Sports Writer

DRAFFENVILLE, Ky. — Maybe you can blame it on the full moon?

If it brings out the werewolf, it certainly brought out the ugly in Calloway County Friday night, where throughout most of the night a orange moon glowed over Carroll-Traylor Stadium.

After cracking the Kentucky Associated Press Top 20 poll in Class 3A with a No. 14 ranking, the Lakers were brought back to reality thanks to a humbling 47-14 loss to the Marshals.

Thanks to a howling effort by Alan Williams — where the junior juggernaut had 160-plus all-purpose yards, including three touchdowns — the Lakers (1-3) time and time again found themselves on the wrong side of the sticks, thanks to 10 penalties for 85 yards, four fumbles and two interceptions.

Suffice it to say, it wasn't the showing second-year head coach Josh McKeel expected from his squad.

"We're sitting here 1-3 and getting some respect from around the state, and tonight made us understand that we're not where we need to be," McKeel noted.

"Any time you come in and play the caliber of a football team like Marshall County (4-0), you know that you have to play mistake-free football. We definitely did not do that. You look at the first half, numerous times we had them backed up defensively and we decide to jump offsides. It's very undisciplined, and it's not the Laker football that we teach. Now, we have to put this behind us and look toward Crittenden County."

The Rockets will soar into Calloway County next Friday, as the Lakers host Crittenden in their first home game of the season at Jack D. Rose Stadium.

Last night, Marshall County scored on its first two possessions. Both times, the Lakers had the Marshals stopped on fourth down, but they were penalized for being offsides.

After falling behind 14-0, Calloway countered with a game-breaking 57-yard run by Trey Travis that put the Lakers in the red zone.

At the start of the second quarter, senior quarterback Logan Seay called his own play on a 2-yard run to help cut the deficit to seven.

But the Marshals wasted little time, going back to work

HOPKINS CENTRAL 32, MURRAY 7

Storm rolls on past Tigers

By SCOTT NANNEY
Sports Editor

The battered and bruised Murray High Tigers took another shot to the chin during Friday night's 32-7 loss to Class 3A Hopkins County Central at Ty Holland Stadium.

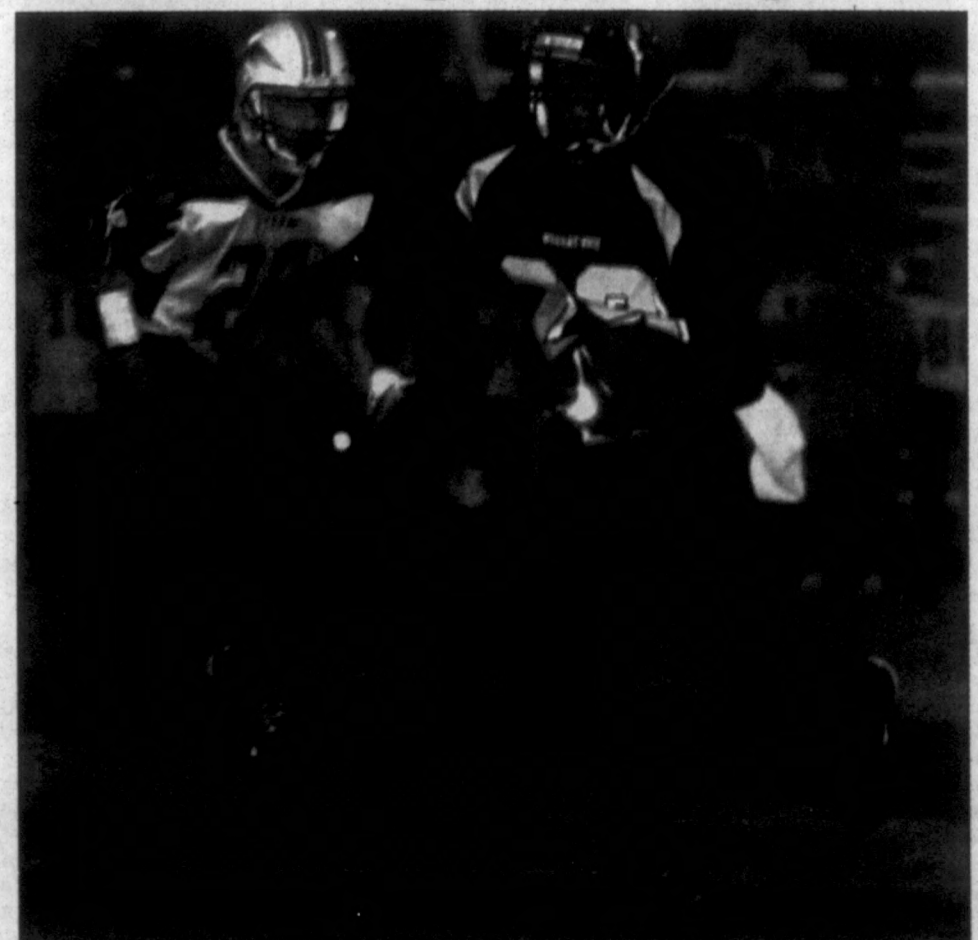

Yet second-year Tiger head coach Lee Edwards was determined that his young ballclub would keep that same chin held high as it fights through some devastating injuries and what is now a four-game losing streak.

"I'm not about moral victories, and I don't think this was one," said Edwards after delivering a spirited message to his team during a brief post-game meeting. "But I am proud of our kids and the fact that they continue to fight."

"I know they're down because I'm down. That's just part of it. I would be disappointed if they weren't down right now. ... There is a difference between disappointment and pouting. And I'm proud of what most of our kids continue to do in terms of not pouting, not giving up," he added.

The Tigers (0-4) had plenty of chances to give up after falling behind 25-0 late in the third quarter. But the home team battled back to put its only points of the game on the board at the end of the period, when quarterback Jordan Garland connected with fellow sophomore wide receiver Roman Kelly on a 44-yard strike for a touchdown with 0.8 seconds remaining.

However, that score and

Murray High tailback C.J. Darcus (29) looks for running room against the Hopkins Central defense as Storm defender Jacob Powell (20) pursues on the play. Darcus finished the night with 29 yards rushing on nine carries in the Tigers' 32-7 loss at Ty Holland Stadium.

170 yards in total offense wasn't nearly enough to overcome the play of senior quarterback Randall Cates and the Storm offense, which racked up 425 total yards on the evening.

Cates accounted for 254 of those yards and contributed to all five Storm touchdowns — running for four of them and passing for another. The 6-foot, 220-pounder book-ended two 1-yard plunges into the end zone with scoring runs of 15 and 14 yards spanning the second and third quarters. He then capped the night with a 7-yard pass to tailback Jacob Powell to end the scoring with 9:23 left in the contest.

■ See TIGERS, 11A

Tigers

Powell, 5-11, 178-pound sophomore, did most of his damage on the receiving end of Cates' tosses, catching five balls for 97 yards. He also rushed 16 times for 63 more yards.

"We took some chances (on defense). We knew we were going to give something up," Edwards admitted. "You have to give something up. There's no such thing as a fool-proof defense. But that's really not what beat us, though. I felt like they just wore us down. That's why they classify this sport; they're a 3A team and we're a 1A team."

The Tigers, who were already playing a substantial number of underclassmen before some key injuries hampered them, struggled to get very much going offensively.

Jamie King and C.J. Darcus were a two-man platoon at Murray's most depleted position, running back. The duo — playing in place of injured starter Jon Jon Wilson, who is out for the season with a torn ACL, and backup Tyler Glynn, who is out nursing a hip pointer — gained a total of 132 yards on the ground.

Garland was just 1-of-11 passing for 43 yards and threw two interceptions — both of which were picked off by sophomore safety Kelsey Bowman, who returned the second one all the way to the Murray 2-yard line, which set up the Storm's third touchdown.

The Tigers will try to shake off the loss in time to face Marshall County next Friday at Carroll-Traylor Stadium in Draffenville. In the meantime, they hope to get at least a few of their injured players back.

"We've got to get healthy," said Edwards. "We were missing six starters (Friday). Two of them we will not get back; four of them we will get back. Priority No. 1 is getting those guys back with us."

with a 10-play drive that resulted in Williams' first touchdown of the game for a 21-7 lead.

Calloway faltered on its next two possessions as Seay threw two interceptions — the second finding its way into the hands of Andrew Capper, who took it to the house for a 20-point, 27-7, Marshall lead.

With less than a minute remaining in the half, Calloway worked nearly the length of the field, getting a 21-yard run from Seay and then a 24-yard pass to Aaron Dossey. With less than 10 seconds to play, Seay heaved up a 47-yard bomb that found the outstretched hands of Chris Dobbins for a score as time expired in the half.

The Lakers limped into the locker room with six penalties for 50 yards that included yellow flags for offsides, personal fouls, illegal blocks, holding and a facemask.

Marshall held Calloway in check throughout most of the second half, as Williams scored two more times to put his season total at 16 TDs in just four games.

McKeel knows that with any team, especially the caliber of one like Marshall County, it's almost taboo to give them any more extra chances than they deserve.

"We stop them, play well and then shoot ourselves in the foot. You can't do that against a quality team like Marshall County," he said.

But, even with a senior-laden team with varsity experience, McKeel put the onus on himself following the loss.

"Evidently I'm not coaching good enough," he said. "One, we can't hang onto the football.

CCMS MOVES TO 14-5 ON SEASON WITH WINS OVER ST. MARY, MMS

Staff Report

The Calloway County Middle School softball team improved its overall record to 14-5 on the season with two recent doubleheader sweeps over St. Mary and cross town rival Murray Middle.

In sweeping the Tigers, CCMS posted 20-3 and 11-0 victories. The Lady Lakers pounded out 15 hits in Game 1 and seven hits in the nightcap. Leading the hit parade against Murray were Kristin Boggess, Jackie Metcalf, and Alyssa Cunningham, who posted four hits each.

Karlee Wilson added three hits, while Taylor Futrell and Lauren Benson banded out two apiece. Also with one hit each were Taylor Armstrong, Lindsey Rucker and Georgia Barnett.

Lindsey Rucker picked up the pitching victory in the first game, working allowing one hit while striking out three in two innings of work. Alyssa Cunningham came on in the third and final frame to strike out two while allowing one hit.

Dera Hale notched the victory in the nightcap, working striking out three while allowing no hits in two innings. Cunningham again came in to close the game, striking out one and allowing one hit.

CCMS then took the field again and swept St. Mary, posting 10-1 and 9-0 victories. In the opener, Lindsey Rucker pitched a complete game one-hitter by striking out six Viking batters. In the second game, Cunningham and Hale combined to shut out the Vikings.

Cunningham posted seven strikeouts in three innings, holding St. Mary hitless. Meanwhile, Hale came in to close the deal in the final two frames, striking out two and allowing one hit.

Cunningham and Taylor Armstrong each picked up two hits in the first game, while Jackie Metcalf banded out a home run. Karlee Wilson and Lindsey Rucker also picked up singles.

In the nightcap, Kristin Boggess led the Laker attack by going 2-for-2 at the plate, including a stand-up triple. Also getting hits were Morgan Smotherman, Jackie Metcalf, Alyssa Cunningham and Karlee Wilson.

Barkley, Wilkins, Dumars enter Hall of Fame

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Charles Barkley played the comedian Friday during his induction into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

But, behind the scenes, he also sounded a lot like a role model.

He drew laughs by thanking his financial adviser for protecting his money, but threw in a little advice for today's players.

"I tell all these young kids, the money you make, save it, put it in the bank. That money has to last you the rest of your lifetime, don't waste it," he said.

At the pre-induction news conference, he also took those players to task for a selfish style, and pointed to his own highlight films for those looking for an example of how the game should be played.

"I always tried as hard as I possibly could," Barkley said. "I like seeing that on tape. Today, they want to be stars. They don't want to be great players. We wanted to be great players."

Barkley averaged 22 points and almost 12 rebounds in 16 NBA seasons that included stops in Philadelphia, Phoenix and Houston. But it was his charismatic personality and outspoken style that made him a superstar.

put the game away with four runs in the third.

Hudson started the rally with a leadoff walk and took third on Gonzalez' single. Byrnes' sacrifice fly to center scored Hudson, and Gonzalez scored on Jackson's double.

Tracy capped the scoring by belting Reyes' 0-2 delivery 395 feet into the right field seats to give the Diamondbacks a 7-1 lead.

It was more than enough support for Hernandez. When the Diamondbacks acquired the right-hander from Washington Aug. 7, they hoped he would shore up their rotation for the stretch run. But the 31-year-old Cuban went 1-4 in his first five starts as the Diamondbacks fell out of contention.

On Friday night, though, Hernandez was nearly unhittable. Only Encarnacion, who brought a .380 lifetime average against Hernandez into the game, managed a hit through the first six innings.

Preston Wilson singled in the seventh for St. Louis' second hit. Arizona manager Bob Melvin lifted Hernandez, who had thrown 98 pitches, after the seventh inning.

Hernandez walked four men and struck out one.

Notes: Byrnes' homer was his 22nd in 122 games. He hit 10 in 126 games for Oakland, Colorado and Baltimore a year ago.

NFL PREVIEW/TENNESSEE

Rebuilding Titans in transition, especially at QB

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Titans have questions at quarterback this season for the first time since the franchise relocated to Tennessee in 1997.

Steve McNair came with the franchise from Houston and led the team for nine seasons, but he was ushered off to Baltimore by trade following a nasty contract standoff.

The Titans have drafted the player they expect to be McNair's eventual successor, Vince Young, but the rookie likely won't be ready this season.

It looked like backup Billy Volek would be the interim starter — until the Titans signed veteran Kerry Collins.

"This is not an indication we've jumped into any panic mode," coach Jeff Fisher said.

Well, maybe not panic, but it's a sign the Titans still are searching for answers after a miserable 4-12 season in 2005.

Saying goodbye to McNair ended their time in salary-cap purgatory and freed up money to sign veteran free agents such as Collins, and owner Bud

Adams said Fisher isn't going anywhere while the team rebuilds.

The Titans also cut their losses by waiving three of 10 draft picks selected in April and releasing four others from previous years, including receiver Tyrone Calico, a second-round pick in 2003. It was a surprising move from a team that usually refuses to admit mistakes and holds on to drafted players.

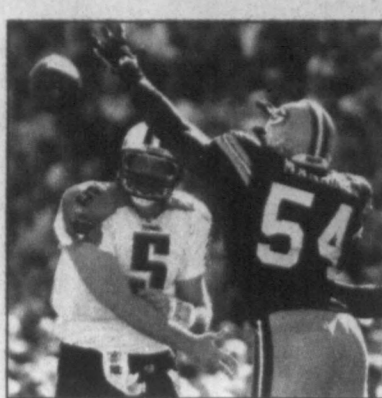

Tennessee even released five players on the day after final cutdown in an effort to find better players.

Starting defensive tackle Albert Haynesworth said players no longer can feel safe based on their draft status and joked that he was a little scared when the Titans' headquarters number turned up on his caller ID.

"I didn't know what to think. Maybe I've been traded or cut. You have to keep your head on a swivel, but it keeps the competition level great," he said.

The biggest question this season is when does Young, the No. 3 draft pick overall out of Texas, start?

Fisher won't reveal anything, saying only that Young's first start will come

Kerry Collins (5), throwing here against the defense of Green Bay linebacker Roy Manning (54) during last Friday's preseason finale, is scheduled to be the starting quarterback when the Titans take the field for their season opener against the Jets on Sunday at LP Field.

when he's ready.

The Titans want to speed the learning process along for Young, who left college after his junior season and is now spending lots of time with offensive coordinator Norm Chow and quarterbacks coach Craig Johnson.

"I didn't have this many reps when I was a young guy (at Texas)," Young said. "Here, I'm getting a whole bunch of reps."

Still, Young isn't expected to be the starter until 2007, so the Titans are counting on Collins to improve an offense that struggled to move the ball and went 1-3 this preseason.

Collins wasn't signed until Aug. 29, and Fisher won't second-guess the decision.

"The fact of the matter is we've got him now, and we're moving forward," the coach said.

The 11-year veteran who fanks 17th all-time with 33,637 yards passing didn't need long to impress teammates.

"Kerry's a very experienced guy," said receiver David Givens, one of the free agent signees brought in for leadership.

"He has a lot more experience with getting on the same page with receivers. I don't think it's going to be very difficult."

The Titans have five new starters on offense and four on defense.

Givens was signed away from New England to provide help to Drew Bennett, who struggled last season as the lone veteran in the receiving corps. Bobby Wade, released by Chicago last December, and Brandon Jones, recovering from a torn right ACL last November, provide depth.

With no running back having a 100-yard game in 2005, the Titans decided to give themselves options with Chris Brown, who is still the starter despite asking for a trade in July; veteran Travis Henry; and rookie LenDale White of Southern California.

Cardinals release 2006-07 schedule

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville will play 12 of its first 14 games at home this season and has 14 games scheduled on national television, the university announced Thursday.

The Cardinals also will play at least 16 opponents that reached postseason competition last season: Arizona, Connecticut, Georgetown, Kentucky, Marquette, Northwestern State, Pittsburgh, Seton Hall, Syracuse and Villanova all went to the NCAA tournament, while Cincinnati, Miami, Notre Dame and St. Joseph's took part in the NIT.

Louisville opens the regular season Nov. 18 at home against Northwestern State, which finished 26-8 last season and beat No. 3 seed Iowa in the NCAA tournament. The Cardinals also have exhibition games scheduled Nov. 1 against Bellarmine and Nov. 19 against Kentucky Wesleyan.

"I think the most important thing is for us to use our non-conference games as preparation for a very difficult Big East Conference schedule," coach Rick Pitino said in a statement.

OHIO STATE VS. TEXAS

Quarterback Troy Smith (10), playing here against Northern Illinois in last week's season opener, will lead No. 1 Ohio State into Austin tonight to battle second-ranked Texas.

Buckeyes, Horns meet for second straight year

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — It's early September and the national championship won't be decided until January.

Yet, for No. 1 Ohio State and No. 2 Texas, their title chances could be on the line Saturday night in a rematch of last year's classic in Columbus.

One stumble, one fumble, one blocked kick or incredible catch could change the course of the season for both teams. Again.

Just look at last year when these teams battled back and forth before two late scores gave Texas a 25-22 victory. Ohio State still made it to the Fiesta Bowl, but Texas built on the confidence and momentum from that victory, turning it into an undefeated season capped by a Rose Bowl win over Southern California.

"We made one more play than they did to win the game," Texas coach Mack Brown said. "If we had lost that game, we would not have played for the national championship."

In an age of cupcake non-conference schedules, that's what makes this game — in Austin this year — so dangerous for both teams. A loss drops them back into the pack and looking for outside help to get back into the title chase.

Like this year, the 2005 version was played in the second week and was the most-anticipated nonconference game of the season.

Last season, Vince Young led the No. 2 Longhorns north to face the fourth-ranked Buckeyes. Both teams were loaded with veteran talent and primed for a championship run. A screaming crowd of more than 100,000 at the Horseshoe knew what was at stake.

"I thought it was unbelievable," Brown said. "You couldn't hear at all."

Against an Ohio State defense that would send more than half its starters to the NFL in a few months, Young was crushed under a pile of Buckeyes on an early run. When he got up, he complimented them on the hard hits.

It was playful trash talk, but likely stunned defenders who thought they had given the quarterback their best shot.

Texas bolted ahead 10-0, then watched quarterback Troy Smith come off the bench to rally the Buckeyes to a 16-13 halftime lead.

Grandmother started movement behind National Grandparents Day

National Grandparents Day originated with Marian McQuade, a housewife in Fayette County, West Virginia. Her primary motivation was to champion the cause of lonely elderly in nursing homes. She also hoped to persuade grandchildren to tap the wisdom and heritage their grandparents could provide.

President Jimmy Carter, in 1978, proclaimed that National Grandparents Day would be celebrated every year on the first Sunday after Labor Day.

A native of Fayette County, Marian McQuade and her husband Joe are the parents of 15 children, 40 grandchildren and 3 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. McQuade began a campaign in 1973 to set aside a day for grandparents, but her work with senior citizens dates back to 1956, beginning with the Past Eighty Party, originated by Jim Comstock, editor of the West Virginia Hillbilly, a well-known publication. She has worked in several states with seniors and in 1971 was elected Vice-Chairman of the West Virginia Committee on Aging and appointed as delegate to the White House

Conference on Aging by Governor Arch A. Moore.

Having served as President of the Vocational Rehabilitation Foundation, Vice-President of the West Virginia Health Systems Agency, appointed to the Nursing Home Licensing Board and having served as Co-chairman for the Bi-Centennial Centenarian Search for the West Virginia Commission on Aging, Mrs. McQuade has dedicated her life to fighting for the rights of senior citizens and those less fortunate than herself.

The promotional packet she mails out includes a personal letter, a history of the event, facts about Mrs. McQuade, suggested activities, the day's purposes, a copy of "Beatitudes for Friends of the Aged," and a family tree chart.

Hallmark Cards requested permission from Mrs. McQuade to publish specially designed greeting cards, which the founder described as "a very nice line." The firm volunteered a royalty to defray expenses, but the McQuades declined.

"It would take away from the meaning," she said with great sincerity. "From the beginning I didn't want to make money, and I won't accept donations."

"I am the luckiest person in the world," she declares with conviction ringing in her voice. "I have a wonderful, understanding husband, my children are all healthy and well, and my grandchildren and great-grandchildren brighten my days. Then I have my work promoting Grandparents Day, working with seniors, helping Jim Comstock with the Past 80 Party, and visiting the sick and lonely in hospitals and nursing homes. What more could I want?"

Indeed, giving of herself is this cheerful but determined native West Virginian's greatest joy. And because she cares so much, the nation now has a permanent way to recognize the positive contribution of grandparents everywhere.

Grandparents Day is the perfect time to enhance communication between the generations

Grandparents Day is a family day. Schools, churches, and senior organizations honor grandparents with special events. Some families enjoy small, private gatherings. Others celebrate by holding a family reunion. Board games which are easily played by young and old add enjoyment to family gatherings, enhancing "intergenerational interaction".

For those who entertain large groups, it can be fun to have a story-telling time, allowing grandparents to relate stories of their past, enlightening children about "the old days." Also interesting is to take a census, such as oldest and newest grandchild, family with the most grandchildren, and families with five generation present.

As Grandparents Day approaches, help children and/or grandchildren to identify and date all photos in old family albums. Many happy memories can be derived from this. Many times, only grandparents have answers to questions about family histories. When this information is passed down to the grandchildren, everyone can be assured of his heritage being preserved.

Along with Grandparents Day, we should not forget shut-ins and those in nursing homes who are unable to be with their families or have no families. Every effort must be made to include these people in the mainstream through cards, community projects and visitation at times other than just holidays.

There are many, many elderly who are not fortunate enough to have family nearby. The need is increasing every day to fill the void of their loneliness. In every neighborhood, there are elderly who would love an opportunity to be a Foster Grandparent. Parents, churches, schools, and senior organizations, help children to adopt a grandparent!

THE BROKEN CHAIN
 We little knew that morning that God would call your name,
 In life we loved you dearly,
 In death we do the same.
 It broke our hearts to lose you,
 you did not go alone,
 For part of us went with you,
 the day God called you home.
 You left us peaceful memories,
 your love is still our guide,
 And though we cannot see you,
 you are always at our side.
 Our family chain is broken, and nothing seems the same,
 But as God calls us one by one,
 the chain will link again.

Mom doesn't share fervor for family film festivals

DEAR ABBY: My husband and 3 1/2-year-old daughter love movies. I'm happy they have something in common to keep them close, but it's just not something I'm into. Most of the time, if they're watching a movie, the volume will go up to simulate a theater, which makes me nervous. So I do the polite thing - I find something to do in another room. I am always courteous about it; I never flip out or am rude. I respect their love of movies.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren
I recently found out that one of the most important people in my life is going to die. When I told my husband I would be out of town at the doctor's with this person, my husband's first comment was, "I guess this means you aren't coming home tonight."

If I go away - he even overnight - he calls or pages me nonstop, develops stomach aches, etc. Abby, we can be lying in bed with his hand touching mine, and if my nose itches and I move my hand to scratch it, I get, "Fine, then!"

I don't know what to do, but I can't keep on living like this. He always says he'll change, and for a little while he does. Then the cycle starts all over again. He has suffocated my love for him. But if I leave, he will tell the children (10 and 7) that it's all my fault and he wants to be a family. I don't know what to do. Do you think this relationship is salvageable?
-- CANT STAND THE NOISE, ONTARIO, CALIF.

DEAR CANT STAND THE NOISE: Perhaps you feel guilty because you don't make watching the movie "family time" you can enjoy together. Or maybe your husband feels guilty for turning up the volume when he knows you're sensitive to loud noises.

How about popping in some earplugs and enjoying the party? You might find you enjoy the experience not because of the movie, but because of their pleasure in having you there. Alternatively, consider suggesting another activity where you can all interact and converse with each other instead of just sitting and being entertained.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been together eight years. I have left him twice because of his constant obsession with me. When he comes from work, if I am on the computer he gets angry and says I don't love him or want to spend time with him. He doesn't even like our children to be around if we are home.

Reader wants to avoid side effects

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am writing to you in the hope that you will have some information for me concerning polymyalgia rheumatica, which I have been diagnosed with and have been dealing with for a little over a year.

Dr. Gott

By Dr. Peter Gott
I was treated with prednisone, which worked wonders, but I don't like the consequences of using that and have refused to go back on it again. I have tried various natural remedies, and they have been of little help to me. Exercise doesn't really help, but I feel like I have to keep moving.

DEAR READER: Polymyalgia rheumatica is a relatively common disorder, marked in large part by a person's allergy to his or her normal tissues, leading to painful joints and muscles. The cause is unknown, but the diagnosis is usually marked by an elevated sedimentation rate (the speed with which blood cells sink when placed in a tube). Normally, the red rate should not exceed 10 millimeters per hour. In the presence of polymyalgia, it usually exceeds 80.

Drugs such as prednisone that "turn off" the immune system are ordinarily effective in relieving the pain of PMR and may take effect within a day or two.

As you have learned, however, such steroids carry a long list of serious side effects, including deficient immunity, cataracts, osteoporosis, diabetes and many others. As a general rule, the longer a patient takes prednisone

(and the higher the dosage), the greater the chances of complications, which are virtually 100 percent in people who take the drug for extended periods.

Therefore, while many doctors start by prescribing high doses that are gradually tapered, recurring pain may be such a problem that repeated courses of therapy are necessary. In addition, untreated PMR can lead to blindness.

Many specialists recommend that steroids be given for several months before the dosage is reduced significantly. This is one striking example of the risk/benefit ratio: Patients must learn which risks are acceptable and work with their physicians to ensure success.

In your case, you should follow the advice of medical personnel, which may include a rheumatology specialist.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Managing Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like a copy should send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and $2 to Newsletter, PO Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband has ringworm on his behind. He has had it for many years, and it has not gone away after many visits to the doctor and taking every medicine, both oral and topical, possible. Any suggestions?

DEAR READER: Ringworm, a fungal infection of the skin, can be difficult to cure. I'd first try a topical antifungal medication, such as Lamisil. If that is not effective, your husband might try Vicks VapoRub. Several readers have found that this therapy often works well.

If that, too, fails to kill the fungus, I suggest a consultation with a dermatologist.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Saturday, Sept. 9, the 252nd day of 2006. There are 113 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

In 1850, California became the 31st state of the union.

In 1893, Frances Cleveland, wife of President Cleveland, gave birth to a daughter, Esther, in the White House; it was the first time a president's child was born in the executive mansion.

In 1948, the People's Democratic Republic of Korea (North Korea) was created.

In 1956, Elvis Presley made the first of three appearances on "The Ed Sullivan Show."

In 1957, President Eisenhower signed into law the first civil rights bill to pass Congress since Reconstruction.

In 1971, prisoners seized control of the maximum-security Attica Correctional Facility near Buffalo, N.Y., beginning a siege that ended up claiming 43 lives.

In 1986, Frank Reed, director of a private school in Lebanon, was taken hostage; he was released 44 months later.

PEANUTS

DEAR ABBY: I was widowed a little over a year ago when my darling wife died of cancer. Because my wife is now deceased, are her siblings technically still my brothers-in-law and sisters-in-law? They are wonderful people, and I still consider them to be part of my family. But are they?

-- WONDERING IN PHOENIX
DEAR WONDERING: As long as your wife's sisters and brothers have a place in your heart, they will remain a part of your family. And if you choose to refer to them as in-laws, that's your privilege. I only hope that when you finally meet another special someone that they will welcome her into the family circle.

Opening lead - queen of clubs.

Assume you are declarer at six spades and West leads the queen of clubs. How would you play the hand?

If you don't give the matter much thought, you might win the club, draw trumps and eventually end up down one, losing a club and a diamond when the diamonds divide 4-2 rather than 3-3.

You can make the slam, however, if you follow a more promising but less obvious line of play. After winning the club with the king and playing the ace of trumps, you lead a diamond to the queen and another diamond back to the ace.

After both opponents follow suit, you lead a trump to the ten, producing this position:

North
♠ J

South

♥ K 8
♦ 7 3

You now lead dummy's last diamond, and East is helpless. If he ruffs, you follow low and later discard dummy's club loser on the king of diamonds. Your third club can then be ruffed in dummy.

If East discards instead of ruffing the diamond, you win with the king, ruff the eight of diamonds with dummy's jack and later lose only a club to make the slam.
