A REAL AMERICAN

Wendell Willkie, defeated Republican candidate for the Presidency last fall, looms larger in defeat than might have been thought possible shortly after the election. As a matter of fact, he made a much better campaign than is generally realized—perhaps the best campaign that any man might have made under the same conditions. It has always been traditional with the American people to trust the man who happens to be in office when emergencies arise, and to look with suspicion on any one who tries to unseat that man. Last year the nation faced a great emergency, and voters of the nation did not care to make any change in the administration of the nation's affairs. Under those conditions Mr. Willkie made a remarkable fight. After being defeated a majority believed that he might sink into obscurity, as is the case with so many defeated candidates.

Mr. Willkie, however, did not lose any of the color that he possessed during the campaign. He maintained his interest in national affairs, and a few weeks ago electrified the country with his pilgrimage to England. He said merely that he did not know as much about conditions in that stricken country as he wished to know, and going there appeared the only way to obtain the knowledge he wished. Going to England these days is not a mere pleasure jaunt. It requires quite a bit of work, and involves some dangerous possibilities. Mr. Willkie went to England; he investigated conditions there and came home with the information he desired.

That alone was enough to make him a colorful figure, but he went much farther. He did something that few would do after being defeated for the high office of the Presidency. He threw his entire support to the plan which has been advanced by the man who defeated him at the polls last November. That action comes quite close to being statesmanship.

Mr. Willkie appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations committee which is conducting hearings on the administration Lend-Lease Bill. In more than one instance in the history of this nation we have seen the minority party fighting with every known device to defeat administration bills, and in fact, a large section of the Republican party is now fighting the Lend-Lease Bill. Whether it is the best bill is open to discussion, of course, but it happens to be the only one which will immediately throw our strength against Germany and in favor of England. Lacking a better plan, it appears to be the duty of all Americans to support these efforts, and Mr. Willkie, the defeated Republican candidate, did just that. As a witness before the committee he threw his entire weight behind the bill.

Mr. Willkie told the committee the result of his trip to England. He said quite calmly that more help was urgently needed in England. He said that collapse of England meant grave danger for the United States. He did not not speak as a partisan. Rather, he spoke as a real American; a man who is fully capable of investigating conditions and understanding situations. Without reserve he gave his full and unqualified support to the Presidential bill which is designed to aid England to the fullest extent. Mr. Willkie proved himself a real American.

A RACE AGAINST TIME IS NOW ON

With Germany feverishly mobilizing its forces in Rumania preparatory for a major drive through Bulgaria and with Britain giving no quarter to the fleeing Italians in Libya and Ethiopia, the war in the Eastern Mediterranean area is taking shape as a gigantic race against time.

The evident strategy of the Nazis is to relieve the pressure on Italy by stabbing Greece in the back and to cut the Hellenic kingdom in two by seizing the port of Salonika before turning against the Turks.

The obvious purpose of the British is to eliminate Italy from the war in the shortest possible time, to safeguard the passage of British shipping through the middle Mediterranean by establishing air and naval bases at Tripoli, and then to rush aid to the Greeks.

Speed is of the essence for both sides, but there are obstacles to speed. The railroad and highway from Sofia to Salonika is little more than 150 miles but it goes through precipitous Balkan mountains. From the Danube to Sofia another mountain range blocks the way. Though spring-like weather now prevails, three or four weeks of winter may be expected, and Balkan winter is a poor time for mechanized warfare as the Italian campaign in Greece and Albania has vividly shown.

Britain, too, has obstacles to speed. Nearly 500 miles of desert separate the Army of the Nile from Tripoli. Increasing heat and a waterless wasteland add to the difficulties. Deserts and also mountains make the going slow in Ethiopia though the rainy season which begins next month demands the utmost effort if there is to be an early victory.—Courier-Journal.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGES
DISMISSED; MAN SAVES
RETURNED STOLEN FUNDS

Chicago, — Embezzlement charges against Louis A. Kronenberg were dismissed today because he had judiciously saved every penny of the $26,000 and returned every penny of the $26,000 and returned it all to his employers.

Kronenberg, for 20 years a trusted employee of a wholesale tobacco and liquor firm, had placed the money in bank shares, mortgages, postal savings, government bonds and safe deposit vaults.

Prosecutor Julius Sherwin said Kronenberg's employers are seriously considering rehiring him.

Judge Charles Dougherty peered over his spectacles and commented:

"Why not make him treasurer?"

The meeting was opened with prayer, led by Mrs. Jess Nichols, followed with the Lord's prayer by all. Mrs. A. B. Roberts, the president, had charge of the regular routine of business, assisted by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. N. T. Morse, who read the minutes of the last meeting and made the usual financial reports for the month. Mrs. Roberts read cards of thanks from the soldiers in Outwood Hospital, expressing their appreciation for the candy and cigarettes sent to them by this group on Valentine's Day.

Mrs. Roberts then read a letter from the Department of Kentucky in Louisville, presenting the name of Mrs. William P. McCurey as candidate for the office of vice-president of the Department of Kentucky, for 1941-42. Following that, she read another card from the James L. Yates Unit, Number 6, in Owensboro, Kentucky, presenting the name of Mrs. Ray L. Madrid as candidate for the office of president of the Department of Kentucky for 1941-42.

A discussion was then held regarding "Poppy Day" which will be held on May 24 and sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary and plans were also made as to the posters which will be made by children in the schools of Fulton to be placed in the windows of Fulton stores.

That concluded the business and the rest of the meeting was in charge of Mrs. Bob Harris, program leader. Mrs. Harris read an article from the National News, entitled "America," by Mrs. Lou Berry, following which she conducted a very interesting quiz contest. Mrs. N. T. Morse was the winner.

The business session was conducted by the chairman, Mrs. Eldridge Grymes, after which the meeting was turned over to Mrs. C. L. Maddox who presented an unusually attractive program on the counterpoints in poetry and music.

Mrs. Maddox was assisted by Mrs. W. L. Durbin, who read selections from the poets studied. In comparison of Spencer and Mozart, Mrs. Maddox discussed the work of the two men. Mrs. Durbin read "While It Is Prime" and Miss Elizabeth Butt played the "Allegro" movement from the Mozart "Sonata IV." Shakespeare and Beethoven were compared, followed by the "Sonnets," II and XVII of Shakespeare, and the "Adagio" movement from the Mozart "Sonata IV."

ment from Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," played by Mrs. Maddox. Mrs. Maddox then discussed the lives and work of Longfellow and Mendelssohn, after which Mrs. Durbin read "The Light of Stars" and Mrs. Grymes and Miss Williamson sang Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song," accompanied by Miss Butt. The last poet and composer studied were Tennyson and Chopin. From Tennyson, Mrs. Durbin read "St. Agnes Eve" and Mrs. Maddox played a "Waltz," by Chopin.

It increases property value and saves money. See our manager or your electrical contractor for full details.
