THE LISTENING POST

● I am quite a bit like a fellow I heard Joe Davis tell about not long ago. As Joe tells the story, an inmate of an insane asylum was writing something on a sheet of paper. Another inmate came up and looked over his shoulder. "What are you doing?" he asked. The letter writer looked up and said, "I am writing a letter," he answered. "Who are you writing to?" was the next question. The writer replied that he was writing a letter to himself. "What does the letter say?" asked the inquisitive one. At that the writer rather lost patience at so many foolish questions. "You durned fool," he exploded. "how do I know what is in the letter? I won't get it until tomorrow."

● I am that way about this column today. I don't know what is in it and won't know until tomorrow until it appears in print, and then I may never know what is in it, for I never read my own columns. I write 'em and there is no power on earth which can make me read them. Lots of times as I write them I wonder what I am talking about, and Bob White frequently tells me that he has the same feeling as he reads them. I know that Bob is a fellow who is determined to insult me at all times and so never pay any attention to him or his complaints.

● Along towards the end of the week, with a day's respite in store, I usually begin to run down on this column. Instinctively I am wondering if I will make it through Saturday and then the feeling comes that Monday will bring another long stretch of days with nothing whatever to write about. Usually over the week-end I stir around a bit and run across something which will make some sort of column. There are times when I believe if I never had to come to the office, but could spend all my time running around talking to people I could do better, but I guess that is only an idle dream. As a matter of fact, doing a column every day is quite a chore, even when a fellow has no standards whatever, as is the case with me.

● A few days ago I talked with a fellow newspaper friend who also writes a daily column. I remember that I talked with him a couple of years ago when he was considering launching a daily column. "I don't see how I can write a column every day," he told me. "I know that I can keep it up after a fashion by missing a day or so now and then, but I don't believe I can do it every day."

● Being in trouble myself, I wanted to get him in trouble and so I encouraged him as best I could. "Just go right ahead," I told him. "Of course not every column will be a masterpiece. In the course of this day to day work you will certainly write some lousy columns. But here is one thing which I have discovered and it is really worth while. Lots of times you will write a column which you think is a masterpiece. You will think that it really sets a pattern for all columnists, past and present, and you will publish it and let it go before the public with the calm confidence a man feels in a perfect job. Not one single person will ever tell you he read that column. It will go out in that vast void we call the reading public and you will never know that it was seen by a single pair of eyes. You will be discouraged and hopeless."

● Then the next day you will hammer out what you think is the worst column that was ever perpetrated. You will be ashamed of

Attacks On All Fronts Are Speeded

Parachute-Saboteurs Reported Captured Inside Italy

With shell, bombs and a stiff jolt of power diplomacy, the British launched yesterday (Friday) a supreme effort to snag the axis spring offensive before it strikes at every vital spot of the empire.

Even as the British diplomatic mission, its allies and plain nationals were leaving Bucharest on "the last train" for home, these forces were in motion:

1. An intense Greek offensive against the Italians in Albania.
2. The attacks in one day upon the Nazi invasion coast of France.
3. An Italian-reported invasion attempting to strike at the vital Apulian aqueduct system of Southern Italy by at least 19 British parachute-saboteurs.

4. Official British declarations that Nazi-occupied Rumania is "enemy-occupied territory"; that all Rumanian goods are liable to seizure, that trading with Rumania or any Rumanian, directly or indirectly, is a war-time crime. "What was implied but not said, was that the use of Rumania as a springboard for a southern offensive for the 600,000 German troops already there will bring showers of British bombs in the Balkans."

5. Staunch declarations from the war leaders of the Australian Commonwealth that the Southern Pacific continent will meet any Japanese threat with all its lusty resources.

The background of all this is clear. Britain, admittedly, fears that the axis is preparing to strike simultaneously at England's shores, at Gibraltar through Spain, at Suez through the Balkans and Turkey; at Greece through Yugoslavia and Bulgaria; at Singapore and the Dutch East Indies with Japan's military and naval arm.

Only yesterday, Hitler entertained Yugoslavia's men of state at his lofty Berghof. Already he has Bulgaria, has told Spain, and through Spain's Franco, France, what is expected of them in the "new era."

Tennessee Declines To Raise Truck Load Limit

Nashville, Tenn., — A proposal to increase the maximum weight allowed for freight trucks from 24,000 to 30,000 pounds failed in the State Senate Friday.

The Senators voted 5 for increasing the maximum and 13 against, with four members passing and one member absent. Seventeen votes would have been a majority.

Colorful Linings Are Offered Men By U. S. Fashion Tailors

St. Louis, —The nation's fashion tailors today offered "interior decoration" as a sartorial innovation for the modest male with a suppressed desire for bright colored clothes.

They displayed men's suits lined with polychromatic striped silks, diagonals, and modernistic contrasts.

That way the wearer can alleviate his urge for colors and yet hide his secret by keeping his coat buttoned.

Raymond G. Twyfelfort of New York, retiring president of the Merchant Tailors' and Designers' Association, said the linings were also designed to give men "a therapeutic lift."

"Suppose," he suggested, "you were feeling mixed up. You couldn't quite clear your mind to enable you to attack your work with vigor. You might open your jacket and

Bulldogs Turn Cunningham Back 26 To 21

Playing at blistering speed and displaying the best passing and floor play of the entire season, the local Bulldogs turned back a favored Cunningham team at Science Hall last night, 26 to 21. Cunningham had lost only two games previous to this game and was heavily favored to win. The Bulldogs simply rushed them to death from the starting whistle and never gave them a chance to get set. The first quarter was cyclonic, with each team piling up ten points in rapid fire order. The Bulldogs matched Cunningham shot for shot and kept Beard and Cain, the two tall men, constantly off balance and unable to shoot with any accuracy.

The pace slowed after the first quarter, but the Bulldogs settled down into a smooth and brilliant floor game. The passing was particularly deadly and time after time McAllister and McClellan broke loose under the basket to receive an accurate pass for an easy crisp shot. "Hots" McClellan, playing a grand game in all departments, was high with 10 points, while McAllister found the basket for eight points. Joe Treas had six points, shooting four straight free throws. The half ended with the Bulldogs leading 16 to 15 and for a moment in the second half the Cunningham players took a one point lead. Seconds later the Bulldogs smashed through for another basket and held the lead until the finish. The third quarter ended 22 to 17.

Shelby Davis, playing a heads-up game all the way, was high point man with 8 points. Hart also played a good game, racking up 6 points.

Lowell Thomas Says Luckner Is Living Quietly In Germany

New York, —Count Felix von Luckner is living a peaceful life in a log cabin in the Harz Mountains in Germany—far from the South Seas where sailors from destroyed ships have reported him as operating—Lowell Thomas said Thursday.

In a statement issued by the National Broadcasting Company, Thomas said that he received a letter from von Luckner dated January 1 in Halle, Germany. It was January 2 that the Count was reported active as a raider in the Pacific.

An excerpt from the famous Sea Devil's letter said:

"I spend most of the time at the

Plans Made For Boy Scout Drive February 18

Everything is in readiness for the financial drive to raise the funds required to support the Boy Scout movement in Fulton for 1941. The Young Men's Business Club is to be commended for reorganizing and vitalizing Scouting in this area after several years of practically no activity. The drive will get under way on Tuesday morning February 18, at 7 o'clock when the "Early Bird Breakfast" will be served to 75 scouts.

The Rev. Frank J. Drowota, pastor of the Christian Church at Mayfield, a gripping and dynamic speaker, will deliver the inspirational address at this time and immediately following the breakfast, seventy-five men will take to the field to solicit funds for the work. Each of these men will be visited by a Boy Scout at 6:30 in order to wake him in time for breakfast. Last year, only two men failed to make it, one was ill and the other became lost in the early morning fog. The plans for the drive this year were carefully made several weeks ago and each one has met his obligations, according to schedule.

It now remains for these 75 workers and the 300 additional loyal citizens of Fulton to make their contributions to a most active organization, outside of the school and home for the inculcation of American ideals and the American way of life into the minds and lives of our boys, who in time will be responsible for carrying out these ideals. Therefore, let's meet these solicitors with a smile and make our contributions gladly for so noble a cause.

Economist Says That Jobless Have Been Practically Wiped Out

New York, —Unemployment in the United States "has been practically wiped out" and the Nation faces the problem of a shortage of labor for the first time in more than a decade, according to William T. Livingston, economist for the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Livingston, also director of the Bureau of Business Conditions of the Institute, whose employment figures are used by several Federal agencies, said in an interview that unemployment—the No. 1 problem of this country since 1890—has virtually disappeared and a full solution of whatever remains of the problem today "is the matter of only a short time in view of the current trend of things."

1,669,000 Reported Jobless
The 1940 census disclosed, he said, that at the end of March of 1940 there were only 1,669,000 persons in the United States who

Secret Report Asked for Senate World Affairs

Japanese Envoy, F. D. R. Exchange Hopes For Peace In Pacific

Washington, —Deepening shadows of a possible new crisis in Europe and Asia led to a proposal in the Senate today for an extraordinary closed session to hear confidential diplomatic reports on world conditions.

Taking note of the possibility that Japan might be preparing to strike against British and other interests in the Far East in conjunction with new axis moves in Europe, Senator Wiley (R-Wis.), called for the executive session of the full Senate next week to hear Secretary of State Hull and other officials.

The move, however, lacked administration support and democratic leaders said there was little chance that such a session would be held. They said it was doubtful that the motion would reach a vote in the Senate but if it should, they expressed confidence it would be defeated.

Wiley said the Senate should have a full report on world conditions from high officials with special reference to the near and far east, in connection with its consideration of the lease-lend bill.

"Are Adolf Hitler and his associates, Japan and Mussolini, attempting another war of nerves?" the Republican Senator asked, "or is there a synchronized, coordinated movement in process whereby Japan opens his spring offensive in the Balkans, Japan will attempt some move against British interests and perhaps our own interests?"

In raising these questions, Wiley reflected a view widely held in diplomatic quarters that Hitler was seeking Japanese cooperation in a coordinated plan of action in both Europe and Asia this spring.

Opinion differed, however, on whether Japan would risk a possible conflict with the United States by attacking the Netherlands East Indies or Singapore, Britain's naval stronghold in the east.

President Roosevelt took note of the serious strain in American-Japanese relations in receiving the new Japanese ambassador today and welcomed the envoy's assurance that he was resolved to achieve "a better understanding" and thereby preserve "the peace of the Pacific."

PROPAGANDA OR TRUTH?

Our newspapers are filled with strange stories these days, and it is difficult for one to know the truth. Propaganda and truth are so mixed that one is puzzled many times and is helpless to learn the real truth. Every government is engaged in trying to make out a good case for its war efforts, and England particularly is anxious to convey a double impression to the United States. First the English wish this nation to know that aid is desperately needed; second, it is also the sincere desire of the English that Americans believe they have a good chance of winning the war. This leads to some peculiar news stories.

A well known columnist recently discussed the chances of a German invasion against England. Interest in this subject is keen in the United States. Many believe that invasion is possible and probable. Others believe it is an impossible task when even for the highly geared Nazi war machine. Hitler has said plainly that he intends to destroy England, and thus far has managed to batter the British cities quite heavily. However, it becomes more evident from day to day that only troops on British soil will enable Hitler to actually destroy his hated enemy. Twenty or thirty miles away in France and Belgium and Holland. Hitler has millions of veteran troops, plenty of tanks and artillery and all the modern machines of mass murder and destruction. The distance is short—but it is over water, and in those waters the British have great numbers of ships of war. Ferrying soldiers across the Channel and establishing a bridge head in England or Ireland means ghastly losses, with no certain chance of success. For on land England has some three million men under arms and these, too, are equipped with plenty of the weapons of destruction.

This columnist then said that the German unwillingness to move dates from last September when invasion was really attempted. According to this story the attempt cost the Germans so much and was such a horrible failure that the German High Command is now afraid to make the effort again. The columnist says that the British flying patrol sighted the German Army moving across the Channel in thousands of small boats, a few miles off the Belgian coast. Immediately the British plan of action went into effect. Clouds of bombers swarmed over the German armada. These bombers did not use bombs. They dropped fuel oil in a great circle all about the boats, and then other planes began dropping incendiaries. The German boats were criss-crossed time and again with oil and in a short time they were enveloped in a sea of fire. Thousands of men died horrible deaths, and so horrible was the result that the British Government did not publicize the great victory. The columnist says that the German High Command is now afraid of mutiny if another such effort is ordered.

Yet there does not appear the ring of truth in this story. Surely such a great victory would be a great tonic to the people of Britain. Certainly if an English people knew that a German invasion effort had been beaten off with such ease they would feel much better. Surely Winston Churchill would tell of that victory. Of course,

CAN THE BALKAN STATES UNITE?

"If all the Balkan people stood together, aided by Britain and by Turkey, it would be many months before a German army and air force of sufficient strength to overcome them could be assembled in the Southeast of Europe. And in those months much might happen."

Thus Winston Churchill in his Sunday broadcast warned the nations now menaced by the Nazis and reminded them of the fate that befell those countries whose sole reliance was on their neutrality and their freedom from international alliances.

The Churchill appeal and the Churchill warning are now echoed by Turkey in an unassailable argument for the restoration of the Balkan Entente. A united front on the part of Turkey, Greece, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria could mass an army of 3,000,000 men at the first shot," declares the Istanbul newspaper, Cumhuriyet. "The situation is so clear," it adds, "that it needs no discussion—we must unite our forces in order to have ourselves."

But it is apparently no clearer than it was to Norway and Sweden, to Belgium and Holland. Fear has the same paralyzing effect on the small and weak nations as it had last April and May and prevents them from joining together in self-defense. Thus in neutrality continues the delusion to lead nations to their doom. There is little hope of a Balkan Entente.

Rumania is lost to that regional alliance as the result of external pressure and internal intrigue. Bulgaria, defeated in World War I as Churchill reminded that nation, has steadfastly refused to join the bloc. Yugoslavia already is conferring with the Nazis and may offer the corridor through which the long-expected attack on Greece may be made. With its army not opposing the Germans across the Danube but the Yugoslavs and the Turks. Bulgaria apparently has thrown in its lot with the Axis powers. Greece and Turkey are the only ones that view the situation realistically and fearlessly.

Hitler's tactics of divide and confuse is seemingly as successful in South-eastern Europe as it was in Northern and Western Europe. Anything like a Balkan bloc is largely wishful thinking. —Courier-Journal.

It might be true, but to many it will sound quite a bit like skillful propaganda. There might be a desire on the part of the English to show America that she still has great striking power and is no danger of collapse. The fact that no publicity was given the great victory has a suggestion that it is meant for consumption abroad rather than at home.

Then, about the time you are in the depth of self pity and shame, the telephone will ring, and somebody will tell you that you have done the best column ever written. You will perk up a little and decide to show your face in public again, and on the streets. In the restaurants, in churches, if you go to them, that same strange thing will occur about that column which you thought so poor. You may still think it a poor column, but after ten or fifteen people praise it, you will decide it was pretty good, after all, and that you are a good columnist with a brilliant future ahead."

These things I told him, and he heeded my remarks. He has been doing a column right along since then and doing it well, and he agreed with me that I had told him the truth.

BAPTIST STUDY COURSE FINISHED WITH BANQUET

Finishing a full week of Sunday

School Training classes, led by the Rev. E. A. Autrey of the Baptist church, approximately forty members of the Baptist Sunday school gathered at the church last evening for a banquet and the final session of the training course. These classes have been held each evening at 7:15 o'clock at the church since Monday and the Rev. Autrey taught lessons at each meeting from the book, "From Bethlehem to Olivet," by Heigh C. Moore. "From Bethlehem to Olivet" is a story of the life of Jesus Christ and was given by Rev. Autrey in a most forceful and informative manner.

For the banquet, two long tables were arranged, the center of which was decorated with artistic bouquets of colorful cut flowers. Attractive place cards in the Valentine motif were used. The meal was served by a committee from the Sunday School department with Mrs. T. S. Humphreys, the chairman of planning.

After closing the study course and giving examinations, a round-table discussion was held, led by E. E. Mount, superintendent of the Sunday School Ideas and plans for building up the Sunday school attendance and interest were also given at this time.

The remaining hours were in charge of Mrs. J. A. Hemphill, social hour leader. Mrs. Hemphill conducted various contests and games which were greatly enjoyed by all present.

These study courses have been held annually for the past several years but those attending proclaim that this year's classes are more outstanding in interest and accomplishment than any ever held.

For a Fast Get-Away

In this modern age of streamlining, we point with pride to the fast get-away of our automobiles. Likewise, the same rule may apply to successful poultry raising. Give the baby chick a fast "get-away" in life and half your worries are over.

If you're interested in the high prices for early broilers, we suggest that you follow this plan: Begin feeding ALL MASH Starter the first day and continue until the chicks are six weeks old—then switch to ALL MASH Grower. Of course, your grocer has these feeds—call him today.

World Famous Exhibitionists Of The Hardwood Appear With Biggest Show In Basketball Here

Monday night is the big night for Fulton basketball fans for the time has finally come when the renowned New York Celtics will make their appearance in this fair West Kentucky town, with the Union University Bulldogs providing opposition.

But, of course, the biggest attraction of all will be the Celtic-Union exhibition. Anyone who has ever seen the Celtics in action will tell you that it is worth many times the price of admission just to watch the amazing and, at times, magical ball handling and sharp-shooting of the New York wonders.

A fair example of the tactics employed by the Celtics may be cited by what happened in a recent game with the Atlanta Police Crackers.

To the delight of some 4,000 customers the Celtics rolled the ball around the floor, went through slow motion plays, lifted their opponents up to help them make field goals and put on a shooting exhibition which made the audience gasp for breath. The Crackers, incidentally, are regarded as one of the outstanding cage teams in the South.

Davey Banks, the master of horse play, put in quite an interesting evening. One of his team-mates, Pat Herlihy, lifted the diminutive star for the tossup, then Davey raced down to the opponents' goal and promptly deposited two points through the hoops for them. At another time, the man of mirth managed to get three basket balls on the court at the same time, much to the embarrassment and dismay of the officials and the Crackers.

Bobby McDermott, who is regarded as the greatest player alive today, lived up to his reputation and was high scorer of the Atlanta game, scoring equally as easily on long range shots as he did on crisp shots.

"Ash" Resnick, the only newcomer to the Celtics, is hailed as the defensive genius of the aggregation. Despite the fact, he usually finds time to dump enough points through the mesh to run in second place in the scoring parade.
