State Sales Tax The Answer?

Last year the Fulton City Schools suffered an acute shortage of funds for maintenance of good teaching levels, and several attempts to obtain additional funds for them failed.

This year they are suffering from an even wider gap between what they have, and what they need, and still they haven't more funds.

An examination of the setup from here reveals that the whole County is suffering, and that the whole State is suffering. The clear problem confronting us therefore seems to be at the State level.

Since we here in Fulton are on the Tennessee line and are acutely aware of that State's higher educational budget (having lost some good teachers to their system) let us make a few comparisons in our effort to straighten out our own house:

Tennessee has a 15c per $100 State property tax and a 2c cigarette tax that is EARMARKED and GOES DIRECT to their educational fund. Kentucky has a 5c per $100 tax and no cigarette tax, that goes to the State's GENERAL FUND, from which educational allowances must be begged; no tax of any sort in the State of Kentucky is specifically earmarked for school purposes.

The Fulton School district is allowed a tax of $1.50, and the rest of the County $1.25; Obion County, Tennessee collects $1.10 for the same purposes.

In 1948 the State of Kentucky spent $19,000,000 on all levels for education; Tennessee spent $49,000,000 with $34,000,000 provided by 70% of the State sales tax collections. In 1949, with the sales tax cut raised to 80 percent, Tennessee is expected to provide $43,000,000 for its education through that source.

Let's take a look at the Tennessee sales tax setup; we may yet come to adopt one like it:

80 percent of collections go DIRECT to schools.

12½ percent of collections go to the County for public buildings such as schools, court-houses, etc.

5 percent goes to the County to retire present bonded indebtedness.

1½ percent goes to the State for its needy.

One percent goes to the State for administration of the tax.

With this sort of a plain-talking, straightforward tax law, the Tennessee schools get what is coming to them without recourse to any begging.

Here in Kentucky we can rework the assessments and bring them up to par; we can add a pitiful few dollars here and there with a lot of hard work and still be beating around the bush as far as a frontal attack on the real source of additional revenue is concerned. Tennessee triples their school revenue through sales tax funds, and it may well come to pass that Kentucky will have to do the same.

An Ounce Of Prevention

A few weeks ago when Polio cases were on the upswing and causing grave concern hereabouts, we noted a great interest in fly-killing because the word go around that the fly was a potential germ spreader.

The common, ordinary fly is a germ spreader... for literally hundreds of disorders and diseases. It should be always regarded as a potential deadly enemy and should be the object of a serious campaign of complete extermination in every household and around every yard.

Back-yard refuse heaps or ill-chosen garbage containers probably do more to encourage the spread of flies (and rats) than any other one source in Fulton, and it is our sincere hope that it will not require an epidemic to drive home to householders the necessity of waging a bitter war on insects and rodents.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Pride is ignorance; those assume most who have the least wisdom or experience; and they steal from their neighbor, because they have so little of their own.—Mary Eddy.

Pride is seldom delicate; it will please itself with very mean advantages.—Samuel Johnson.

STRICTLY BUSINESS

From The Files:

Turning Back The Clock

August 23, 1929:

Fulton continues to grow into city class: Building activities continue brisk, and it is especially gratifying to note the numerous minor repairs and additions to homes in all parts of the city, which indicates a rising spirit of civic pride.

Largest construction now in progress is the Swift & Company produce plant on State Line, near completion.

Browder Milling Company has also added extensive improvements and enlargement to take care of the mixed feeds department and its flours are distributed through the Southland.

Hugh Smith's new Coca-Cola plant on Lake Street extension is a handsome addition to the business blocks of Fulton.

The most outstanding, and largest improvement made in years... and something that every citizen can point to with pride, are our new reinforced-concrete streets through the business and residential sections.

In South Fulton, the contract for a $5,000 building has been let by school trustees. The new building will provide a gymnasium, auditorium and additional classrooms.

Out at the fairgrounds, conveniently located near the passenger depot, improvements have been made and the grounds beautified. The big Fulton County Fair will start Tuesday, August 27 and extend through Saturday the 31st.

Lee Roberts, contractor, is installing 3000 feet of new water mains... Valentine Bros. are completing a pretty bungalow, with bath, for Walter Ferguson on Norman street... H. F. Burkheimer has completed a handsome brick building on Commercial and opened up a lunch room... Hornbeak bakery has remodeled the interior of their salesroom on Lake street... rumors are afloat that gigantic improvements of a starting nature will start next year, if not before, in Fulton, but the plans are not fully developed.

Ben Howard has sold his business and stock of fruits, tobacco and confectionery on Fourth street to J. R. Bailey of Detroit. Howard has been in business the past 13 years here.

Ewing Galloway:

Kentucky On The March

I am lifting the following paragraph from an AP report of a recent meeting in Lexington of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce:

"The committee was in agreement that all businessmen in the state could be of vital help in promoting Kentucky as a potential industrial site through their contacts with out-of-state leaders."

A nicely worded generalization on which everybody must agree. J. Stephen Watkins, president of the chamber, a real doer as well as a good talker, said Kentucky's main need was a mere balanced economy and the growth of the right kind of atmosphere for industrial expansion.

That, too, is an obvious truth. But, who's going to make conditions in Kentucky a strong bid for new industries? Who's going to put the state's house in order and then publicize it to the outside world?

From what I read about it the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce is composed mainly of patriotic, public-spirited manufacturers, merchants, farmers and bankers. Their purposes are all high. But the organization needs a concrete program and a full-time executive. And at the head man's elbow there should be a publicist. The publicist should be one of the best. A hack newspaperman with a friend in the chamber would be worse than useless, because a poor job would do much harm. Maybe Mr. Watkins is journalist enough to fill both jobs.

The big job the Chamber of Commerce is taking hold of recalls the story of New Orleans and Louisiana. I wrote about it in Collier's more than 30 years ago. I may have alluded to it in one of the 140 articles I have written under the heading "Kentucky on the March."

A young man named Walter Parker, from Tennessee, got a job in a New Orleans bank. He was an inquisitive chap, and conditions in the Delta metropolis interested him. He saw much that was bad. One railroad controlled the belt system and discriminated against other lines. Bank deposits were being taxed, with the result that Louisiana people sent their cash to banks in other states. Parker saw that a city with natural advantages for a great seaport which would serve as a marine gateway between a dozen states and that markets of all the outside world had dock facilities that were pitiable. Ramshackle piers and shallow water. With millions of bushels of grain in the territory New Orleans didn't have a modern grain elevator. The city's drainage system was so poor that in wet weather the streets reeked with muck.

Well, young Parker made up his mind to do something about it. He got a bunch of business men together and they organized the New Orleans Association of Commerce. Parker became the active head of it, and he promptly swung into action. He was a good persuader, so he got the support of good men—men good enough to put up money to pay the Association's way.

Parker fought the railroad yard monopoly and licked it. The city built a belt system to reach the docks and all big local shippers. He got the state and the city to build a waterfront grain elevator that could load half a dozen ships at one time. He persuaded the legislature to repeal the tax on bank deposits, and people brought their capital back home. The drainage system was improved. In public work Parker was a natural. He told the world what New Orleans was doing.

When you go to New Orleans now you behold a fine city of around 700,000 population. And as you look it over, remember the story of Walter Parker and the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce.

Kentucky needs a Walter Parker. If Mr. Watkins doesn't fill the bill, or if he is too busy to give all his time to the job, the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce should start looking for a Parker.

Editors, the News:

I wonder if any "old timers" remember when "The Fultonian" was published.

I came across a fragment of the paper, published many years ago, and, thinking perhaps it might be interesting to you, I pass it on. I regret I haven't the entire paper.

The editor, Mr. Ed Starks and my father, A. G. (Bushett) were special friends.

I am enjoying reading your paper very much.

MRS. F. M. NEWTON.

(Ed's note: A digest of the Fultonian will be found elsewhere in today's paper. Our thanks to you, Mrs. Newton.)

Women own 70 percent of all privately-held wealth in the United States, one spokesman has said. As stockholders they have plurality power, that's one reason why women are getting more recognition in business life. H. F. RUCKER.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, August 21, 1949.

The Golden Text is: "Who hath known the mind of the Lord or who hath been his counsellor?" (Rom. 11:34).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Great is our Lord, and of great power: his understanding is infinite." (Ps. 147:5).

Mississippi Plantation Life: The Writings Of Mattie Dear

I was grateful to be at the Travel Rest M. B. C. Church Sunday pastored by Rev. W. B. Barns. Devotional lead by the officers then the ushers did their duty. Rev. Edwards read and then offered prayer. Brother Rodgers, Bro. Robinson, Bro. Butler, Bro. Kneedham taken all of them to raise the sum of $6.17. That is pitiful. The Claborn Girls sure sang a favorable duet. Received one person of Brother Johnnie Smith. Rev. Barns preached the sermon. A member of the chapel Hill M. B. C. in person of Sister Eula Johnson sang until heaven got the news. After she stopped the Rev. Barns rose and said if Sister Barns would die today he would marry Sister Johnson before night. That marrying quick but its right to tell the truth. My cousin Rosa Dotson and her friend Bertha Ward spent Sunday night with me. They were on their way to Mound Bayou Hospital. Hope they come again. My husband cotton is opening.

HOUSE PASSES BILL TO HIKE DISABLED PAY

The American Legion-supported bill raising government allowances for disabled veterans and the widows of veterans by $112,507,300 a year to meet increased living costs, has been passed by the House by a vote of 344 to 0. The measure was sent to the Senate.

The bill (H. R. 5598) would boost pensions for totally disabled veterans from $138 to $150 a month. Increases would also be granted to partly disabled veterans. A widow with one child would be raised from $100 to $105 a month and the allowance for each additional child would be hiked from $15 to $25.

With most provisions applying to veterans of both World Wars, the measure also would liberalize requirements for disability claims. It would restore World War I presumptive cases to 100 per cent compensation instead of the present 75 percent; increase the time within which compensation may be drawn for arrested tuberculosis; lower the disability requirement of the Dependency Allowance Act to 50 per cent instead of 60 and it would redefine the terms "line of duty" and "willful misconduct" as applied to service-connected cases.

ONE OF KENTUCKY'S TRADITIONS

Raising Tobacco

When you see the smooth white cloth stretching over a hilly slope, you know you're in Kentucky, home of the world's finest burley tobacco. Here farmers wise in the ways of the leaf nurture it from seedling to golden brown perfection; guardians of one of Kentucky's most fragrant traditions.

Yes, and Beer is a tradition in Kentucky, too!

Like tobacco, BEER BELONGS in Kentucky. Long the companion of the leaf, beer, the beverage of moderation, has always appealed to Kentuckians.

Setting Hen Given Walking Papers As Power Invades Poultry Business

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

The setting hen is losing her barnyard grip. A few more years and she'll be little more than a legend. Her job, like scores of others in the poultry business, has gone mechanical.

In this movement toward the industrial way of doing things on the farm, electricity has played a major part. It has brought the "push button" age of agriculture to a high degree of accomplishment. It can do just about everything but produce the egg. With that necessary bit of business out of the way, here's how electricity takes over:

It hatches eggs in automatic electric incubators, which provide uniform heat and moisture control. Electric brooding is the next step. And from this point on, any number of electrical helpers move into the poultry picture.

Water is brought to the poultry house by means of a pressure water system. It is done automatically, and without fuss or feathers. Winter watering problems, too, have been eliminated. Pipes are protected in cold weather by soil heating cable. And water is kept ice-free in drinking fountains and troughs by immersion heaters. Even the feeding job has gone "push button." For automatic mash feeders are available for use with hens and broilers over 3 weeks old. They work in harmony with the farmer's lighting schedule; are operated by 1/4 horsepower motors and controlled by time switches.

Electricity keeps the lights burning 13 out of 24 hours a day during the spring, fall and winter months. That is the magic number of "light hours" required to enable hens to maintain maximum production in so-called "off seasons."

And then, eggs can be cleaned, graded and candled electrically. Electricity operates poultry house ventilating systems, poultry scalders and washers. It powers "rubber-fingered" poultry pickers which pick as high as 200 birds an hour. To farmers who complain of cannibalism in their flocks or about the loss of mash billed out and lost from feeding troughs, agricultural science offers the cure. It is used to clip off a small section of the chicken's upper beak or mandible—the cause of such worries.

hand-out artists operating in Washington. They were constantly in the hair of the editors of the Office of War Information.

Frankly, this business of publicity hand-outs is getting entirely out of hand. Large corporations maintain full staffs to write articles for newspapers, hoping that some lazy editor will use it, giving the corporation the benefit of free advertising. Sometimes we think we'll just write Mr. Robert Young of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad and tell him we would like a free ride on his train. We think we'll write for a free refrigerator. Or maybe the National Association of Manufacturers would like to build us a new plant.

Such abuse of a free press and the mails for cheap postage is causing newspaper folk to be penalized in the plan of the Postoffice Department to increase mailing rates for newspapers. If these free advertising boys could be made to pay three cents a letter for each parcel of hog-wash they send out, the Postoffice Department could well afford to give newspapers free postage forever, and ever.

This business of trying to get free advertising is pandering, pure and simple. Its degrading one's alleged talents as a newspaperman. And if Mr. Jones is glad to be through with us, we might say that our brethren in the Fourth Estate wish they could be as lucky as we.

Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., happened to be in Emporia, Kans., on the day that the late William Allen White, famed publisher of the Gazette, was celebrating his 70th birthday.

When the Sage of Kansas came to see Vanderbilt off, the latter inquired:

"How does it feel to be three score and ten?"

"Well," Mr. White said wist-

Fulton Rotarians Top Whole District

The Fulton Rotary Club, with an average attendance of 98.39 for its July meeting, led all 49 Rotary Clubs in District 233 according to the Governor's report, just released.

The July attendance was marked by three 100 percent meetings, and at the fourth, only two members were absent.

This is the first time in several years that the Fulton Club has been able to rise to the top of the list, although it regularly stays in the top ten in attendance.

fully, "today the girls come in and sit on the side of your chair and pat you on the head and look down at you in reverence, because they're not afraid of you any longer. And that's the hell of it."

The brakeman entered the restaurant and sat down at the counter for breakfast.

"What'll you have?" the girl asked.

"Bring me two headlights, a string of flats, and one in the dark," he ordered.

While the girl was new on the job, she wasn't to be kidded with railroad slang. She returned with a glass of water and a whistle.

"What's this, what's this?" the railroad sputtered. "That's not what I ordered."

"I know it isn't," the girl answered coolly, "but I thought maybe you'd like to take on water and test your steam before you ate breakfast."

this is wealth
that's REALLY shared

Just a railroad track, part of 6,500 miles of the Illinois Central lacing the length and breadth of Mid-America.

This is real wealth—working wealth. Wealth that works to bring you food, clothing, your home, all the things you live with and enjoy. Wealth that works to pay taxes to help support your schools. Wealth that spends money in your community. Wealth that last year paid out $133,000,000 in wages to 40,000 workers.

It's wealth that's really shared—because everybody in Mid-America benefits by the useful work it performs.

This Illinois Central wealth is the kind that has made America rich. Without it, our natural resources would only trickle from mines, forests and farms, and our vast industrial plants would starve for want of raw materials.

The Illinois Central has $700,000,000 invested in working wealth—an investment that makes possible an average freight rate of a fraction more than 1¢ per ton per mile. This same investment makes possible a wage rate more than double the rate of twenty years ago.

To keep this wealth in efficient running order, more wealth must constantly be added. The Illinois Central last year put $23,000,000 into new equipment and property. For we are determined that our work shall continue to earn your friendship and patronage.

Corn and Grain Drying Becoming Routine Operation On Many Farms

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Corn drying once was one of Mother Nature's exclusive farm chores. But she wasn't always very conscientious about it. There are too many wet springs and early falls in her seasonal grab bag. And they spell immature corn at harvesting time.

Farmers didn't like it. They took their story to the nation's top agricultural engineers, who met in emer-amount of air being blown through the corn.

Drying is successful without supplementary heat when the temperature is 60 or above and the relative humidity is 65% or below.

And now, with problems of corn drying and hay curing under control, agricultural science is moving on. Grain drying, on average farms, is receiving increasing attention. And no wonder. For losses of more than $4,000,000 occur annually because gency session to solve the problem. And solve it they did.

Here is one type of equipment used in drying grain. At extreme right is inclined plane elevator to transport dry grain from drying bin to storage loft.

Using their experience in barn-curing hay as a starting point, they shifted electrical fans and motors from mows to cribs; made some comparatively minor changes in the existing structures, and blew the excessive moisture right out of the kernels. In single cribs, wooden ducts or "A" frames are laid down the center of the floor and the air is blown directly into them. When double cribs are used, the air blast enters through one end of the driveway. The opposite end is sealed up, and heavy paper placed on the walls of the cribs from the peak of the roof to the top of the corn layer. Openings around the fan and in the floor also should be closed. These precautions assure a maximum grain has been damaged by unfavorable pre-harvest weather.

In drying grain, supplementary heat, generally, is needed. Buildings used for drying operations, must be insulated against heat loss, and ventilated properly. Heat is provided by oil burners in many grain drying units now in use on a number of farms. Warm air is blown into storage sheds by motor-driven fans. Thermostats and other controls automatically keep the temperature and flow of air at efficient drying levels. They also provide for economy and safety of operation.

Mechanical drying enables farmers to hold the moisture content of their crops within accepted limits, provides storage insurance and results in higher yields per acre.
