THE LISTENING POST

It is always amazing to me that certain things come to pass, have their day and then pass away and are completely unknown to the generations that march steadily along. It is equally amazing that I know of some of these things and the generation next to mine knows nothing of them. For example:

Just the other day a few lines of verse came humming into what I jestingly call my brain. I had not thought of the words in years. They had been, not forgotten, but buried, in that mysterious thing we call memory, and all unbidden I spoke the words aloud:

"Don't you mind what they call you, darling,
Don't let your heart grow sad;
Some day you may be a soldier,
A hero like your dear old dad."

A member of the second generation spoke up: "Where in the world did you ever hear that?" I told her it was from an old illustrated song, and then came the payoff. "What in the world is an illustrated song?" she asked, and then I realized how long it had been since there was such a thing as an illustrated song. So I told her of the illustrated songs I once heard; heard in the faroff days when an entire town looked forward with eagerness to the coming of a road show, and particularly of the days when I saw a showboat coming around the bend above Hickman, steam callopes blaring out a tune which carried six or seven miles. I remembered how the showboats came churning in to the landing, with the callopes still blaring, and with half the town watching the proceedings with deep interest.

I remembered, too, how the showboats were always packed for the night's performance. As soon as the boat tied up there was a rush for tickets. Business firms would send men on board to buy blocks of reserved tickets, and within a couple of hours all reserved seats would be sold out. I was always safe in those days, even as today, for I was working in a newspaper office, and shortly after the boat tied up, a man would come into the newspaper office and give out tickets to the entire force. Ah, me, this being a newspaper man has its points, after all.

Then the show! It was always a wonder world to me. The boats had so many lights, there was such an air of romance, there was such a thrill in walking across the stage-plank and entering the long narrow theatre, with its sloping floor and its narrow, distant stage. There were box seats, even, and a couple of times I wangled a seat in one of the boxes. That was a thrill, to sit high above the audience, above the stage and see the play unwind to its thrilling climax. At moments when quiet came over the audience I could hear the rustling of water against the hull, and there was always a gentle swaying of the boat as it rose and fell with the current. A few times, as boats passed in the darkened channel, the boat rocked more than was comfortable and timorous souls were a bit afraid.

Then between the acts came the illustrated songs. A girl who always seemed beautiful to me, and she was always small and blonde, came out in a dazzling spot light. From somewhere in the rear there would come a sudden clicking noise and a picture would appear on the

Concession Is Granted On Lend Bill

Proponents Agree To Drop "Transfer" Of Supplies Clause

Washington. — Administration spokesmen offered a new concession to Senate opponents of the British aid bill today, after a "compromise" amendment on the question of sending troops outside the Western Hemisphere had failed to attract the support they expected of it.

Chairman George of the foreign relations committee, in the middle of vigorous appeal for quick passage of the bill, offered to eliminate an authorization to the President to "transfer" supplies to Great Britain. Some had feared this language might be construed as power to deliver the articles in question or to convey merchant ships transporting them across the ocean.

This development came toward the close of an unusual Senate day which saw supporters of the bill holding the floor almost continuously, and its opponents ironically charging them with "filibustering." Just before the day's session ended, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader, notified the Senate that, in order to hasten a vote on the bill, he would ask for a night session tomorrow night. Senator Clark (D-Mo.), put in that the statement contained an implication that "someone" had been delaying consideration of the bill, and noted there had "been much talk in the newspapers about filibustering." Barkley replied that he intended no such implication or inference.

Substitute Worker Out During the early hours of the session, while Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader and Senator Lee (D-Okla.), were talking, other advocates of the measure worked out a substitute for the pending amendment of Senator Ellender (D-La.), which would stipulate that the bill contains no additional power for sending troops outside the hemisphere.

Obion County PTA Meeting Wednesday

County Superintendent Milton Hamilton was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Obion County Parent-Teachers association at Union City's New Armory Wednesday. The high school bands from Union City, South Fulton, Dyer, Kenton and Troy rendered an enjoyable program in keeping with "Music Month."

A short business session was held and plans were made for the Garden Seed Exchange next month. Attending from South Fulton were: W. H. Cravens, Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Speight, Mrs. R. E. Sanford, Mrs. Leon Hutchens, Mrs. Hugh Barnes, Mrs. Carl Kimberlain, Mrs. Lon Pickle, and Mrs. I. M. Jones.

Present Decade Seen As Best Time For United States To Wage War

New York. — In terms of fighting manpower the United States will be better equipped for a war during the next decade than it is ever likely to be again in its history, statisticians pointed out today.

The country now has the largest number of "first-class" fighting men, the ages 21 to 35 inclusive, in its history; the number is 16.4 millions.

For 10 years, but only 10 more, this reservoir is expected to rise to 17.8 millions. Decline Is Expected After that the number will begin to decline. This decline seems inevitable, since its start and its course for a long time already have been written into the pages of fate by America's declining birth rate of recent years.

Bulldogs Play Steady Game To Defeat Arlington

Playing steadily as veterans again last night in the First District tournament at Clinton, the Fulton High Bulldogs entered the semi-finals by eliminating Arlington 29 to 20. With their big gun, McAllister, silenced for the time being by close guarding, other members of the team took up the scoring job and carried the Blue and White to victory. Big, good natured Layne Spence, the center, proved the shining star of the game, as he flipped a dozen points through and grabbed far more than his share of the rebounds. He also consistently outjumped his rival center, and Fulton controlled the ball most of the time. With better luck at hitting the Bulldogs might have run up a record score. McCollum fired a couple of long shots which found the basket, as did McClellan, and Eugene Hannah, entering the game in the third quarter, fired five points through the hoop.

The Bulldogs started fast again. Arlington scored first, but the Bulldogs rushed the ball back down the floor and tied the score. From that point they went to town, with Arlington never again getting into the running. Passing was crisp and accurate, and guarding was good. Coach Gilles used his reserves in the final quarter and they did well.

In the first game of the night's program Central easily conquered Hickman 42 to 23. Hickman was never in the game, and Central won as they pleased.

Tonight the Bulldogs face the Bardwell Indians in the semi-finals, with Clinton playing Cunningham in the other bracket. Chances for victory over Bardwell are problematical. The two teams have met twice, Bardwell winning at home by five points and Fulton winning at home by eight points. Bardwell has played only one game in the tournament, beating Western by ten points in an impressive manner. If the Bulldogs can hold their steady game they have a good chance, but Bardwell is fast and shifty and plenty tough. If the Bulldogs win tonight they face mighty Central in the finals tomorrow night.

"LADIES" MASTER PRESENTED DOG BY DEANNA DUBBIN

Hollywood, Calif. — Blushing and shy, Pvt. Everett Scott of Fort Ord was presented with an Air Mail puppy by Screen Actress Deanna Durbin Thursday to take the place of his faithful "Laddie."

The bashful Kansas farm boy arrived by train to receive the dog as a present from his favorite screen actress.

Bases Sought From Mexico As U. S. Pushes Parleys With So. Neighbor

Washington. — Negotiation of a mutual assistance agreement between the United States and Mexico gave the North American Continent today in effect a common defense front from the Arctic Circle almost to the Isthmus of Panama. The understanding with Mexico complements the recently concluded joint defense pact between the United States and Canada, thus providing for protection of both southern and northern flanks of the continent.

The State Department, however, gave no details of the program. In preliminary U. S.-Mexican discussions during the last several weeks, it was reported, one of the major proposals was that Mexico construct new, or enlarged naval bases in Magdalena Bay (Lower California) and at Acapulco on the west coast, for protection of Panama Canal approaches, and one or two others at strategic points on the Gulf of Mexico.

Funds To Build 70,000 Houses Are Allocated

New York. — Justin Hartzog, assistant regional co-ordinator of defense housing, said Thursday that allocations for the construction of more than 70,000 houses have been made from $290,000,000 in Federal funds since the defense emergency began.

"Contracts have been awarded for the construction of almost 40,000 of these, and 2,500 are occupied," he told the Eastern regional conference of the American Builders Association. "Of the allocations we have made, more than 47,000 of the dwelling units will house civilian workers, with more than 23,000 for the families of enlisted personnel."

Asking 150 Million More "We are, in addition to the amendment to the National Housing Act, asking that Congress appropriate $150,000,000 additional for the construction of housing which private enterprise cannot supply. We hope that this will be sufficient for our present needs."

Lions Enjoy Musical Program

Aaron Butts had charge of the program at the regular luncheon meeting of the Lions club today at the Rainbow room and introduced Mrs. T. A. Farham, who presented an entertaining musical program. The program consisted of a vocal duet, "Trade Winds" by Mrs. J. B. Manley and Mrs. Malcom Smith; a piano duet, "Flapdoodle" by Charlene Sanford and Ivan Jones, Jr.; a trio, "Sierra Sue" by Mrs. Manley, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Farham; a duet "Disky Fingers" by Charlene Sanford and Ivan Jones, Jr. The program ended with a vocal solo, "God Bless America" by Angela Arnn.

Red Devils Roll Over Tiptonville In Hard Game

The South Fulton Red Devils continued their steady march towards state honors last night in Obion, by winning over Tiptonville 18 to 21 after a hard and bitter game. Tiptonville had just swamped Bells in a district game, and gave the Red Devils plenty of competition, but the steady play of the Haynes coached machine proved better in the stretch. Harwood, star forward, was held to seven points, but House and McKinney teamed up to grab seven and six each to assure a South Fulton victory. Hayes of Tiptonville had eleven points. The South Fulton team played the entire game with one substitution.

In the preliminary game the girls of Friendship eliminated the Palmersville team 37 to 22.

South Fulton has now advanced to the semi-finals of the West Tennessee Regional and after the play-off between Memphis Central and Covington Saturday night, only four teams will remain in the play. South Fulton will play the winner of the Central-Covington game Tuesday night in the semi-finals and if they win this they will enter the finals, thus assuring them a shot at the state title in Nashville.

Italy's Consuls In U. S. Are Restricted

Closing Of Two Consulates Asked; To Confine Officers

Washington. — The United States has notified Italy that the movements of Italian consular officials throughout this country are to be restricted and has asked that Italian consulates in Detroit and Newark, N. J., be closed.

The State Department made public today a note to the Italian government requesting that its consular officials confine their movements to those areas in which they exercise the recognized duties of their respective offices.

The Italian diplomatic staff in Washington was excluded from the request but the embassy was asked to keep the State Department currently informed "of the movements outside Washington of the military and naval personnel" attached to the embassy.

The action, believed to be the first of its kind in peace time against a country with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations, followed a request from Italy for the closing of American consulates at Naples and Palermo and restrictions imposed in Italy on the movements of American diplomatic officials.

Secretary of State Hull's note to the Italian ambassador referred to the closing of the two American consulates but did not explain why the United States was asking the closing of the Italian consulates or restricting the movements of consular officials.

In a previous announcement, the State Department said the closing of the consulates was requested "for reasons of national policy." (Both Giacomo Protti, vice consul at Detroit, and Giulio Pascucci, Newark vice consul, declined to comment on the State Department's action.)

Under the wording of the American note the movements of Prince Colonna, the Italian ambassador, and other members of the embassy staff here, will not be confined in any way, except that the ambassador has been requested to inform the State Department of any movements outside Washington taken by the military and naval attaches of the embassy.

Tax-Raising Tips Offered By Various Economic Experts

Philadelphia. — A Nation concerned with the financial aftermath of its stepped-up preparedness drive could choose several paths today from the advice of a group of economic experts, all of whom talked of taxes in varying forms.

These suggestions were made before the American academy of political and social science last night.

1. Gerald Colm, attached to the Bureau of the Budget, a Governmental policy of fiscal expansion based on borrowing in the first stages, "with increasing reliance on higher tax yields out of a rising national income." This would be equipped with an "anti-inflationary" tax measure to be used only as a corrective when purchasing power outstripped productive capacity, bringing what Colm termed the "danger point of inflation."

2. O. M. W. Sprague, Harvard University professor, to increase at once "direct and excess profits and individual income taxes (with payment on income for the next year to be put forward in June 15, 1941); and impose other high estate taxes on each item in bequests, legacies, donations, and on income "any of 25 per cent."

on all advertising payments in excess of $10.
3. Arthur A. Ballantine, former Under Secretary of the Treasury—reduction in non-defense expenditures; "taxes that are as high as is consistent with the healthy operation of industry," and well-planned governmental borrowing. Simultaneously, two Cornell University economists told the Northeastern Dairy Conference that national defense production could be greatly increased if the Government would make the production of war materials more attractive to the producer than the manufacture of the needs of the private consumer.

O. K.'s Prescription
F. A. Pearson and E. R. Bennett of Cornell also asserted that the professor should not be punished by excess taxation. By his manipulations, they said, "the tax, the price up so that Government demand disappears, thereby making more products available to the Government (and making the Government's demand for products more certain)." They also stated that the Government should not "punish" the professor by excessive taxation.

Editorial

PROBABLY TRUE

There has been wide divergence of opinion on the Administration's Lend-lease Bill. It has attracted wide and strong support and has also drawn stinging criticism and opposition. Naturally this would be true, for it is a bill which is utterly alien to our usual customs. It, in effect, makes the President a dictator—of that there is no doubt. Those who favor it say that it offers the only way to meet present world conditions; those who oppose it say it is the certain road to war. Probably all that is said of it is true, for it is that kind of bill.

Senator Authur Vandenburg, who recently spoke strongly against the bill, seems to have hit the nail on the head with his statement after having made a remarkably strong appeal against its enactment. He is one of the first orators of the Senate and carries plenty of weight when he takes the floor. He spoke against the bill with remarkable force and effect, and later was showered with congratulations from various colleagues for his effort.

He was seated in his office after the speech and many had come in to offer congratulations. Puffing at his cigar and evidently pleased at the reception his speech had brought, he remarked quite seriously: "Yes, that may be all true, but the facts are I could have made just as good a speech favoring the bill. Right now I can think of fifty unanswerable reasons why the bill should be passed."

There is no hypocrisy in this statement. There is nothing strange in it. It is easily the truth, and Senator Vandenburg, being the brilliant man that he is, recognizes all this. He could, without doubt, make an effective speech for the bill, for he sees that it offers certain beneficial things. But, having considered all the angles, he has evidently decided that the evils overbalance the good that may be in the proposed legislation.

The Lease-Lend Bill does have its good and its bad. It does provide for many things which are repugnant to many good Americans. We Americans do not like the idea of making one man a virtual dictator of our government policy. We do not mind spending money, but we like to spend it when and as we see fit and keep a close check on such spending. It goes against the grain to pass a bill which we know will cost billions, but not know how many billions. We do not like to embark on something which may lead us into war at a moment's notice.

However, thinking people realize that we are not living in normal times. Normal measures are not sufficient to meet the swiftly changing conditions which confront us today. We may not want war, but all of us know that war may come to any nation whether it is desired or not desired. We have seen eleven nations in Europe overrun by enemy forces, and we know that all those nations were quite eager for peace, at almost any price. There is a force loose in the world today which cannot be met by normal processes, and Senator Vandenburg, opponent to

ONLY ONE VARIETY OF LAWFUL MONEY

When farmers of Kentucky's Constitution inserted the provision that wages must be paid in "lawful money," their purpose was to emancipate employees of mines and other isolated industries from the thralldom of the "script" system. Yet a half century's struggle in courts and Legislature to effect this purpose did not terminate until the Court of Appeals this week held that the Constitution means exactly what it says.

Specifically, the court decided that "script" is transferable and must be redeemed by the company in cash for anyone who presents it. The "script" is a token issued to employees in lieu of wages and good for purchases at the company commissary store. The constitutional provision was aimed at a prevalent practice by which many mining camp employees never saw real money.

Notwithstanding a punitive statute enacted in 1892, "script" was tolerated though held to be transferable. Frequent effort to secure legislation absolutely prohibiting the system yielded in 1932 to an act, validating "non-transferable script" on condition that it be issued only at an employee's request, subject to redemption also at his request.

But a Stearns business concern had the nerve to accept $18,000 worth of such tokens and sue for their redemption in cash with interest. It lost, then obtained a judgment upon rehearing. Now everybody knows where he stands. The company commissary may continue to operate for the accommodation of the miners, who will enjoy whatever benefits are inherent in the "script" credit system, and the incomparably greater advantages of competition for their patronage.

This decision, thus, may mark the beginning of the end of the company town, a development of Nineteenth-Century industrial "paternalism" which has long outlived the excuses for its being.

A company town is exactly what its name implies. The company owns first of all the means of livelihood which, in Kentucky, is usually the coal mine. It owns the homes, the church, the stores, and, to that extent, the lives of the people who must use them.

But now that cash, or a medium which to all intents and purposes is cash, is to be available in the company towns, then eventually stores and services not connected with the coal company may venture into the erstwhile closed territory.—Courier-Journal.

the Lease-Lend bill as he is, sees and understands this quite well.

The United States is facing something which can scarcely be understood. This hideout force must be curbed in some manner, and some drastic things must be accepted if this force is to be met and conquered.

white screen. It was the first picture of a sequence, which crudely told a story, and then the beautiful girl would sing the song which was tied in with the story. This song I had remembered was one of many, and it depicted the story of a lad who was left out by other boys. Then there was another favorite of those days, which was called "Hello, Central, Give Me Heaven," and in this picture, were flashed which showed a little child trying to call her mother in heaven. All sentimental, all more or less mawkish, all quite crude, but my heavens, how those songs went over in those days. For then we did not know as much as we know now. We lived quite and secluded lives; there was no radio to bring us the voices of men and women the world over, there were no moving and talking pictures which brought the entire world to our own towns, and all of us were more or less romantic. I can remember how eager I was for a showboat to come and how fast down I was after it had chugged on down the river.

Training For Defense

By Rufus T. Strohman

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

At this moment, we in the United States have a 14 billion dollar job confronting us. It is the job created by the money which has been appropriated for a national defense program. It is a stupendous undertaking, one which may well decide the future of our civilization.

Vast quantities of materials and supplies must be assembled to build ships, tanks, airplanes, guns; to maintain the fighting men who man our first line of defense; to equip the one or two million men who make up a "protective mobilization force." There are new plants to be erected, machinery to be built and installed, and skilled men to be developed.

The United States has virtually all the essentials needed — the money, the natural resources, the man power, and the industrial leadership.

Only one thing is lacking — a sufficient number of trained men. This problem can and will be solved, but it is one that will make our defense program slow up in spots. Although much has been done by some industrial groups to provide for a sufficient force of skilled workmen, others have been slow in establishing an apprentice training plan.

The skilled mechanic never had a greater opportunity to serve his country and himself.

brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cain Fleming of Houston and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Fleming and little daughter, Peggy, of Mounds, Ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Trenchard of Chicago, Ill., stopped in Fulton yesterday for a brief visit with Mrs. Martha Thompson and daughter, Mrs. W. F. Clark. They were enroute to Miami, Florida.

Kentucky Gets 53 Million In Federal Cash

Washington — Kentucky received $58,708,802 of the $3,394,969,301 in Federal and sponsor's funds expended on Federal Works Agency projects during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1940.

John M. Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, in his report to Congress, said the total spent in Kentucky was divided among the F. W. A.'s five agencies as follows: By the Public Building Administration, $1,087,813; by the Public Roads Administration, $6,660,421; by the Public Works Administration, $12,902,137; by the United States Housing Authority, $5,988,

Official Says Navy Might Help Britain With More Ships

Washington, —Congress heard from a higher official Thursday that the Navy might be willing to let Britain have additional destroyers under certain circumstances. The Senate Appropriation Committee made public this testimony from Rear Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, assistant chief of naval operations, in response to a question as to whether any more warships should be transferred to the British Navy.

"Today we might say no, but depending upon the situation six weeks from now or three weeks from now the answer might be yes."

Boy, 9, Weighs 290 Pounds, Is Still Hungry

Gloucester, Mass. —Nine-year-old Joe Randazza has gained 110 pounds in fourteen months and now weighs 290—but it hasn't impaired his appetite, especially for chicken. A few nights ago, Joe awoke hungry, repaired to the family ice box and consumed five broilers intended for next day's dinner. He has a three-year-old kid brother, Sam, who weighs eighty-five pounds, more than Joe did at that age.

Daylight Savings May Be Kept "For Duration"

New York. —When daylight saving time goes into effect April 27, it may be retained "for the duration" of the national defense emergency, some industrial circles said Thursday.

Year-end daylight time, it was pointed out, would lighten the electric current load needed for illumination purposes, freeing part of regular power production capacity for defense goods manufacturing use.

U. S. PREDICTS 3% REDUCTION

Washington. —Reports from poultry farmers indicate, the Agriculture Department said today, that this year's turkey crop will be about 3 per cent smaller than last year's record crop. The department said producers plan to hatch the same number of poult, but to buy 5 per cent fewer from commercial hatcheries than a year ago.

Two good mixers are better than one

THERE you sit, watching the long road ahead as it dips and rises.

Under your feet there's a quiet whispering, to let you know that all eight able Buick cylinders are happily on the job.

You're giving not a single thought to what's happening under that long bonnet nosing out in front, but here's what's going on:

Instead of the single, compromise-size carburetor you find on most cars, this Buick FIREBALL eight with Compound Carburetion* has two good mixers on the job.

A single one of them—the front one—keeps you rolling smoothly, easily, quietly, on the very minimum rationing of gasoline.

But the other carburetor is alert and ready for any sudden need. Just tramp down on that accelerator pedal—it goes into instant action, giving you more fuel and more power for any emergency purpose!

It's almost like having two engines—one to handle normal requirements thrifflly, another to team up with the first for extra oomph and wallop when you want it.

That kind of teamwork pays. And owners by the thousand will tell you it's more economical too—as much as 10% to 15% more economical.

If you haven't experienced what it feels like to have that under the bonnet of your automobile, better go have that Buick demonstration now.
