THE LISTENING POST

● To any person who travels into Fulton regularly and who is accustomed to noticing the signs which tell of the population of the town, it must be quite puzzling to note the wide variations of the local population. For instance:

● A couple of years ago signs were placed on the various highways leading into Fulton which stated that the town had a population of 3500. To be quite accurate, this sign was correct, for according to the 1930 census the Kentucky part of Fulton had 3500 population in round numbers. However, to be entirely accurate, this did not include something over 2000 in the sister city of South Fulton. By the census of 1930 the two towns had a population of about 5700 and there could have been no harm in so stating on the highway signs.

● Two or three men here took the matter up with Bob Humphreys, who at that time was the head of the highway department. It happened to be an election year and state officials are always quite agreeable on such small matters in election years. Within a few days new signs made their appearance, and on these signs the population was given as 5700—this latter figure being much more accurate and less misleading than the former sign which gave the figures as 3500.

● Since then there has been another census, and the town of Fulton showed a decrease to a figure slightly under 3400. South Fulton made a slight gain and passed the 2000 mark. Well, that should make the combined population of the towns slightly under 5500, and this figure should be used on any highway sign that is put up. But the highway department, without remembering and without thinking, takes the Kentucky figure alone and now signs show the traveler that Fulton has a population of 3400. It must be quite confusing to a traveler who saw a sign a few weeks ago showing that we had 5700 people in Fulton and who now learns that we have suddenly lost 2300 people. He must wonder about that quite a bit and expect when he does reach the town to find a large part of it deserted. Probably he may think that we have had an earthquake, or a German blitz, and that great sections of the city will be destroyed or abandoned. Then, when he does arrive, he finds the town pretty much as it was a few weeks ago, when it had 5700 inhabitants.

● Or perhaps there are few people who ever look at such things. I know people who never look at roadside signs, but I confess that all of these have much interest to me. I read them all, and population signs always have a lot of interest to me. I really like for them to tell the truth, and will confess that the signs here do tell the truth, but the town being on a state line suffers from such a half truth. I still believe that it will do the highway department no harm to list the population of both towns and use the total of the two towns. There is no physical barrier, there is no difference in fact, both towns use the same postoffice. A postoffice is generally acknowledged to be the real headquarters of a town, and the local postoffice does serve a population of about 550, according to the figures of the census. That being true, the highway department might well accept the fact and use the true population of the two towns on the signs. If the highway folks want to split

Auto Industry Turning Out Defense Articles

Volume Is Slated To Increase Quickly To Peak In 1942

Detroit. —The huge manufacturing facilities of the automotive industry have begun to "put out" in one of the most extensive military production programs in history; as of today, the bulk of defense materials which it will produce, along with the aviation industry and kindred manufacturing concerns, have passed the "on order" stage and are now on the way.

This is the "obvious conclusion" reported by the "trade magazine" "Automotive Topics" following a survey of plant activity and related in detail in its current issue.

From this point on, the publication says, automotive and allied industries will be turning out defense products in volume and at a constantly increasing tempo. By early 1942, plants will be nearing their peak.

Activities Summarized

In what it described as a "defense time table as of today," the magazine summarizes current activities on defense contracts in the various leading automobile plants.

Chrysler Corporation, it says, is in production now on trucks, reconnaissance cars, camp heating and cooling equipment and shells and munitions components; by early fall it will be turning out 25-ton tanks at the rate of five a day and probably about the same time will be in production on airplane fuselages and wing parts.

Henry Ford Predicts That Home-Grown Motor Fuel Is Possible

Ways, Ga. —Henry Ford envisions a day "only several years off" when a farmer will grow most of the materials going into his motor car and perhaps provide the fuel from plants as well.

"We'll have an experimental body ready at our plant in a month or so made chiefly of plastics from cellulose fibers easily grown," the Detroit automobile manufacturer said in an interview here today.

Socks Made of Sawdust

"The plastic body will be several hundred pounds lighter, and will be a better body for several reasons," he added.

Ford said the "field of plastics is almost unlimited, and we'll see them used more and more in houses and offices instead of wood."

He displayed some attractive bath and kitchen tiles and what

Arnold Terms Use Of Patents As Scandalous As Work Is Delayed

Washington. —Truman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of anti-trust law enforcement, told the House Patents Committee Tuesday that illegal use of patents was "scandalous" and had "created a serious shortage in National defense materials."

He appeared as a witness in support of proposed legislation which would prevent the use of injunctions in patent infringement cases involving National defense products, and provide the patent holder with "reasonable compensation" as a result of infringement.

"No injunction," he told the committee, "should be granted in any case where it would interfere with National defense. This safeguard is

WKC Football Officials To Be Assigned

The West Kentucky Conference is inaugurating a new system of assigning officials for the 1941 season. Each school will have officials assigned by the commissioner, J. O. Lewis, for every game that they will play throughout the season.

So far as it is known this is the first high school athletic conference to attempt such an ambitious undertaking as heretofore only college and university conferences have attempted the task.

At the present time the conference has 38 officials registered, ready for assignment. The list of the officials for each position will be sent to each of the 20 members of the conference and they will make a list of each of official in the order of their preference and from this preferential list the commissioner will make assignments for games.

Clarence Maddox, oldest official in the conference from point of service, Joe Hall, George Moore and C. C. Forrest are the local representatives among the conference officials.

more important before a war than during it."

Arnold described the patent situation as "scandalous" during a discussion with Chairman Kramer (D., Calif.), of the case of the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company, which was indicated for violation of the anti-trust laws pleaded nolo contendere, and paid fines.

Kramer suggested that the company paid the fines rather than go on with the litigation, but Arnold insisted that if the committee should subpoena the grand jury minutes in the case it would be shown that "as a result of the illegal use of patents by Bausch and Lomb, we are in the middle of a serious shortage in defense materials."

FHS Juniors And Seniors To Go To New Orleans

The Junior and Senior classes of Fulton High school are furthering their plans for the proposed trip to New Orleans which will be taken on May 1. Through the cooperation of the Illinois Central's passenger agent, Mr. Rose, the students on Monday figured that the cost of the trip would amount to about $9.80 per capita if fewer than one hundred fares were paid but only $8.25 if as many as one hundred fares were paid.

Since the number of students and faculty members entitled to go does not total one hundred, a limited number of tickets will be sold to outsiders. The money which has been raised by the two classes will be deducted from the above prices, thereby giving the students the trip at a most reasonable figure.

The trip includes a seat in a chair car and a pillow, breakfast and dinner on Friday at Kolb's restaurant, breakfast on Saturday at the same place, a walking trip through the French quarter Friday, a trip to the docks, a bus trip around the city on Saturday. The party will leave Fulton at 7:15 p. m. May 1 and leave New Orleans for the return at 8:30 p. m. May 3. This trip will take the place of the annual Junior-Senior banquet.

The kids are bottle babies, taking warmed milk from nipple-topped beer bottles.

Defense Job Bidding Called Waste Of Time

Cleveland. —Competitive bidding on defense materials was declared a "waste of energy" Wednesday as manufacturers studying ways of speeding preparedness production were told "we are at war all except the shooting."

S. B. Terry, industrial engineer from Hartford, Conn., claimed competitive bidding delays production by usurping time and efforts of engineers in several plants while only one concern receives the contract.

He participated in a discussion on ammunition manufacture at a conference sponsored by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the Army Ordnance Association.

U. S. 'Brake' In Food Dispute Dealters England From Direct Action

London. —If it were not for British economic experts and of the British Cabinet, would lead them to tell Darian to "try and do it." But as Washington is in the midst of negotiations with Vichy and the British have been requested to "go easy," they have little alternative but to accept. If it were not for the bitterness of this war and the hardships it has imposed on everyone, the British would be only too delighted to see not only the French but the Belgians, Dutch, Danes and Norwegians fed, and fed well.

As a matter of fact, the British would like to see their own people get more than the increasingly stringent rations that are now available.

If the United States were prepared to see that imported food actually reached the French, there would not be great objection. As proof of this, the British point to the fact that food is permitted to enter Spain because they have reason to believe that some of it goes on to Germany or Italy.

Asked to Go Easy

The best judgment, both of British

Congress Is Urged To Act Immediately

Production Of Every Possible Arm Called Fixed Policy Of U. S.

Washington. —President Roosevelt sent to Congress today a request for a $7,000,000,000 appropriation to carry out a "fixed policy of this government to make the democracies every gun, plane and munition of war that we possibly can."

In a letter to Speaker Rayburn, transmitting detailed estimates of the budget director for the $7,000,000,000 expenditure, Mr. Roosevelt asserted:

"I strongly urge the immediate enactment of this appropriation."

The chief executive declared that the United States has felt that it was imperative to the security of America that we encourage the democracies' heroic resistance to aggressions, by not only maintaining but also increasing the flow of material assistance from this country.

Therefore, he said, Congress had enacted and he had signed the British aid bill.

Speedy Action

The President's request for the biggest peace time appropriation bill in the nation's history went to Congress less than 24 hours after he signed the bill into law and approved the first list of supplies to be shipped to Britain and to Greece.

The appropriation estimate of Budget Director Smith broke the $7,000,000,000 down into various categories, of which the largest by far was $2,054,000,000 for "aircraft and aeronautical material, including engines, spare parts, and accessories."

Other categories were: $1,343,000,000 for ordnance and ordnance stores, supplies, spare parts and materials, including armor and ammunition and their components.

$1,350,000,000 for agricultural, industrial and other commodities and articles.

$362,000,000 for tanks, armored cars, automobiles, trucks, and other automobile vehicles, with spare parts and accessories.

$629,000,000 for vessels, ships, boats and other water craft, and equipment, supplies, materials, parts and accessories.

$260,000,000 for miscellaneous military equipment, supplies and materials.

HULL, THE CALM MAN

Two widely divergent stories came out of Washington a few days ago, both concerning the same man. Both spoke of Cordell Hull, the tall, quiet Tennessee man who directs the foreign policy of the United States at the most critical time in our history.

One story said that certain New Deal forces were fairly itching to get complete control of the defense work of the United States, and mentioned the fact that a sort of super cabinet of four men is being considered to take supervision over the entire war effort of the United States. This plan, so it was said, contemplated the retirement of Secretary Hull as head of the department, and replacing him with Justice Douglas, one of the more ardent New Dealers. Douglas, with three others, including Harry Hopkins, would be the supreme high command of the United States and would push forward all plans to aid Britain in defeating Germany.

The other story, and it is much more plausible, speaks of Hull as being the calmest man in Washington as the going gets tougher. Hull speaks less and less as the pressure grows tighter, and seems to have retired within himself. But he is never slow in making his decisions. He is never behind the problems that sweep over his desk day after day. He keeps his fingers on the world pulse at all times and is ready for swift and accurate action at all times. He is not being hurried by any sort of war fever or panic. In effect, he is Cordell Hull, quiet and studious Tennessee hillman, ready for whatever may

SIXTEEN YEARS AGO

(March 12, 1925)

Sixty persons attended a birthday dinner given in honor of Uncle Tommie Reed's nineteenth birthday. Mr. Reed is in remarkably good health and this past winter he cut his winter wood, shucked and shell-ed fifty bushels of corn and ten bushels of peas. He says he wishes he could get a job with the Nelson Construction Company, which is now building the new short line to Centerville.

Hon. Jess Nichols was the speaker today at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club, and pointed out that a community house in Fulton would be a fine thing for the various organizations to sponsor. His talk was plain and practical and much enjoyed. Ray Brady was in charge of the meeting.

Special pictures at the Grand Theatre today showing Floyd Collins in Sand Cave, along with the unsuccessful fight to rescue him from his prison.

The Woman's Club announces plans for conducting a store, with various merchants making liberal contributions for the special sale.

come, with his keen intelligence ready to match wits with the best the totalitarian states have at any time, and also with the best English diplomacy has to offer. He is not going to be stampeded into any hasty action. He is not going off half cocked at any time. Like the great American he is, he is going to consider every problem from an American angle before he takes action, and when he does move it will be after due and careful and understanding consideration.

This latter picture is probably more accurate than the first picture. There is little probability that Secretary Hull will resign of his own free will. He served notice last fall that he was ready to fight. For months he had used the language of diplomacy in speaking of Germany, but last fall, in carefully chosen words that cut like a rapier he gave his opinion of Germany and Hitler in a speech that was heard around the world.

It is probable, too, that in Mr. Hull the United States has the right man in the right place. He worked for years trying to prevent this war, he worked at trying to reach an understanding with all nations, and when all his plans failed, he wasted no time in regretting his lost labors. He turned from being a man of peace to being a man of war, and he is just as good at the latter trade as he was of the former.

During the coming months and years, as this country faces its most trying days, Mr. Hull is going to be a tower of strength. Any effort which may be made to retire him will be an evil thing for the nation. It might be well, also, for all political angles to be forgotten. We need to forget the term New Deal, the name of Republican and Democrat, and use the simple term "American."

NOW TO THE DIFFICULT TASK AHEAD

The British aid bill has been passed—needing only House approval of Senate amendments before it is sent to President Roosevelt—and the whole nation ought to be glad the controversy over it is near an end.

Congress took plenty of time to consider the measure. The members of that body were entirely within their rights in delaying its passage until all angles had been carefully checked, and we have no criticism of them for insisting that the bill take this course. The democratic procedure was safeguarded in the enactment of this legislation, and we would not have had it otherwise.

It is unfortunate that many things were said during the debate over the legislation that would have been better left unsaid. All that is over now the majority has spoken, and in our democracy the will of the majority, properly expressed through legitimate means, becomes the law of the land. Now that the bill has been passed, we cannot take the position that the fight is over. The most difficult task is yet ahead. It is no easy responsibility that the Congress has placed in the hands of the President. Upon his decisions may rest the security of our nation. He has the power to plunge us into conflict by his acts, although he cannot declare war. But we believe that, with the sincere co-operation of all, President Roosevelt will seek to follow a course that will be the wise one for the nation to follow.

He cannot do the job alone. Internal conflicts, widespread strikes, controversies that will delay the defense program, friction that is not needed—all these things can mount up to a burden too great for any man to carry. To help him, all of us must conduct ourselves in such a way that there will be a minimum of strictly local problems to trouble President Roosevelt.

We must work together; we must coordinate our efforts to the end that the United States will function as a great team determined to win the game.

Mr. Edwards also told the boys that there would be a city-wide contests among all Scouts and that in order to make points in this contest the boys must become thoroughly acquainted with Scouting from all angles.

After a few games of "steal the bacon," the meeting was closed.

City, County Board Must Contract For Student Rides

Frankfort, Ky. — County school buses can transport city school students only when such service is contracted for by the respective boards of education, Assistant Attorney General W. Owen Keller said Tuesday.

He gave the opinion to Edward Rose, a school bus driver of Carpenter, Whitley County.

Keller added that buses operated by education boards are restricted to transporting their pupils to and from school. He said bus drivers operating on contracts with the boards might carry pupils or others on the occasions but would have to have bus-for-hire licenses if they do.

Living Costs Head Higher In February

New York. —An increase of 1-10 of 1 per cent in the cost of living in the United States during February was reported Tuesday by the National Industrial Conference Board, a research organization sponsored by private industry.

With the increase, according to the board, the purchasing value of the dollar last month slipped to 116.1c from 116.3c in January and 117.5c in February, 1940, on the basis of the dollar having a purchasing value of 100c in 1923. In the boom month of February, 1929, the dollar's purchasing value was 100.3c.

Living costs rose in February, said the board, because of advances in rents and prices of food and clothing. General cost levels were 1.2 per cent higher than in February, 1940, and 50.1 per cent above the April, 1933, depression low, but were 13.6 per cent lower than in February, 1929.
